EVERYONE WILLING BUT NO TALKS SET

MONTREAL—Spokesmen for Air Canada and the striking workers today expressed a willingness to talk but no date has been set for the resumption of negotiations.

Michael Pitchford, chief negotiator for the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, said the union is still flexible in its demands.

An Air Canada spokesman said the company is willing to meet the union at any time, but "we haven't had any word from them yet".

Air Canada's entire fleet of 108 planes has been grounded since April 21. Officials say when the strike is settled it will take at least 48 hours to resume normal operations.

Moderate Gets N. Ireland Call

Times News Services

BELFAST—James Chichester-Clark, a moderate on the issue of equal rights for Northern Ireland's Roman Catholics, today was elected premier. He defeated hardliner Brian Faulkner by one vote.

Chichester-Clark won the governing Unionist Party's runoff 17 to 16 to replace his cousin, Terence M. O'Neill, as premier of this country torn by religious strife.

O'Neill, who quit after months of violence between Protestants and Catholics, was among the 33 casting ballots.

Chichester-Clark faces threats of violence between Protestants the months ahead.

The former major was supported by members of the party who stood by O'Neill in the Unionist split.

The decision was made at a 67-minute meeting of the Unionist party caucus in the committee room at Stormont, the Northern Ireland Parliament building on a hillside overlooking Belfast.

All 35 members of the party attended. All voted except the two contenders.

A gasp of surprise went up as chief government whip Roy Bradford announced the one-vote margin to reporters and politicians.

Bradford then said that on the suggestion of two Faulkner supporters the party decided unanimously to accept Chichester-Clark and to give him 100-per-cent support.

Chichester-Clark, emerging from the committee room, said this decision on unanimity was the big new factor in politics here.

"I have had a unanimous vote by the parliamentary party," he said.

He pledged that universal suffrage in municipal elections —the "one-man, one-vote" issue which has been the main rallying cry of the Roman Catholic-based civil rights movement —will be introduced before new municipal councils are elected.

Chichester-Clark indicated that these elections will be postponed to 1971 from 1970. Opposition leaders representing the Nationalist minority — mainly Roman Catholic—already have said they would accept a postponement if it were needed to redraw electoral boundaries and end gerrymandering.

Crackdown Ousts Student Sit-Ins

By United Press International

Militants occupying Stanford and Columbia University buildings beat hasty retreats today when confronted at Stanford with a phalanx of 100 police and at Columbia with an arrest warrant signed by a New York State supreme court justice.

VOTED TO LEAVE

An occupation force of 250 voted to leave Encina Hall at Stanford, rather than be arrested. They had taken over the building a few hours before by smashing through several glass doors.

New York Supreme Court Justice Charles Marks signed an arrest order after Students for a Democratic Society members who had occupied two Columbia buildings failed to show up in court to show cause why they should not be held in contempt for violating an injunction against such takeovers.

"The court cannot close its eyes to what has taken place at Columbia University," Marks said in issuing the arrest order.

It was the first time outside police had been called to the Stanford Campus during the current round of campus rebellions.

University president Kenneth Pitzwer said the action was taken "with great reluctance and genuine regret."

At Stanford the police were accompanied by faculty observers on hand "to help protect the rights of the students."

The occupation force, all of whom were placed under immediate suspension, regrouped on the lawn after the surrender and taunted the police.

The Columbia students, who began their sit-in Wednesday, apparently had been slipping out of the buildings all morning. Shortly before noon the last holdouts rushed quickly and in disarray from the buildings.

Russian Might Missing In Peaceful May Day

MOSCOW (AP) — Leonid Brezhnev, Communist party leader, gave a precedent-breaking May Day speech in Red Square today as the Soviet Union sought to play down its military image in the wake of the invasion of Czechoslovakia.

For the first time the annual workers' parade past Lenin's Tomb was not preceded by a military display, and Brezhnev replaced the Soviet defence minister as the speaker for the occasion.

Ambassadors from the countries of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization were present. They had boycotted the last big Red Square celebration, on Nov. 7, the anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution, as a protest against the invasion of Czechoslovakia.

The Communist party's general secretary refrained from direct attacks on the United States, China or any other country. The closest he came was to express "the sympathies and support of the Soviet people" for "the patriots fighting against imperialist aggressors in South Vietnam . . . the Arab peoples fighting against imperialism . . . the men of the liberation armies in Angola and Mozambique."

CROWD PACKS SQUARE

Brezhnev told the crowd of 10,000 packing the square that the Soviet government is dedicated to the relaxation of international tensions, the settlement of international questions by negotiations and to peaceful coexistence.

Snap Elections Irk Chief Grit

B.C. Liberal Leader Pat McGeer wants to transform Canadian election customs by taking away a government leader's right to call snap elections.

He told the Liberal Men's Club in Vancouver Wednesday that federal and provincial elections should be held four years apart by law.

And no government defeated on the floor of the House should be allowed to resign automatically.

McGeer said a floor defeat should require the government to withdraw the objectionable proposal "and carry on".

But he proposed that floor defeat on a major money matter should entitle the government to an option of carrying on or calling a special election.

McGeer said the provincial governments require municipalities to hold elections at fixed dates "and there is no reason why provincial and federal governments should not fix election dates in a similiar way.

"For too long, politicians have been hiding behind false traditions saying that every government must win every vote on every minor matter or chaos would result.

"But the vital thing is to carry on government in a commonsense way, accepting program that a majority of members think wise and rejecting those they think bad."

McGeer said the tradition of allowing a government leader to decide when to hold an election has been seriously misused by men like Premier Bennett to perpetuate themselves in power.

"Snap elections are called by the party in power to serve that party, they are never called to serve the public," he said.

"Snap elections have been called by Premier Bennett after surveys have showed his party is not in trouble.

"When the government has a mess like the Commonwealth Trust fiasco on its hands, it will naturally be tempted to seek election before awkward truths emerge."

He contended snap elections "manipulate the public", disenfranchise thousands of citizens because voter lists are not up to date and inhibit the search for best candidates by all parties.

"Often the best candidates are not available on short notice and it follows that poorer candidates are nominated and elected," McGeer said.

"The public are always the losers as a result of such a situation," he said.

Surprise Move 'Dangerous'

OTTAWA (CP)—Political storm warnings are flying again over Parliament, with strong opposition to Prime Minister Trudeau's proposal to lift ceilings on National Housing Act mortgages.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield called the plan ludicrous and dangerous. New Democratic Leader T. C. Douglas described it as ridiculous and scandalous.

While removal of the ceiling —now 9⅜ per cent—has been recommended by government advisory bodies for years, Mr. Trudeau's bill Wednesday proposing it to the Commons came as a surprise.

The bill embodies other previously-announced plans to extend the life of new housing mortgages to 40 years from the present limit of 35, and to make NHA guarantees available for mortgages on a wider range of housing.

Also announced earlier were changes in government regulations raising to $25,000 the amount that may be borrowed on a new house, and to $18,000 for an existing one.

NO HINT GIVEN

But neither in Mr. Trudeau's housing policy speech last week, nor in the government's resolution leading to introduction of the bill, was there mention of lifting the interest-rate ceiling.

The government's contention is that the ceiling tends to draw interest rates up to it. By announcing every three months what the ceiling will be in the following period, the government also was making it easier for lending agencies to justify increases.

The amendments, when passed by Parliament, will apply to new mortgages. Existing mortgages are unaffected.

Paul Hellyer, former transport minister, was not in the Commons when Mr. Trudeau introduced the bill. He quit the cabinet last week, effective Wednesday, protesting that Mr. Trudeau and the cabinet were unwilling to go as far as he would like to meet the combined crises of housing, urban development, pollution and inflation.

OTHER FEATURES

Besides removing all interest rate ceilings, Mr. Trudeau's amendments to the National Housing Act will:

—Add condominiums, hostels and dormitories to the kind of housing that can qualify for government-guaranteed mortgage loans.

—Halve existing insurance fees, now two per cent on the principal of mortgages to be repaid in monthly instalments.

—Raise to $15,000,000,000 from $11,000,000,000 the total amount of mortgages that may be insured, and raise to $6,100,000,000 from $5,200,000,000 the amount the federal treasury can lend directly.

—Extend NHA provisions to the purchase and improvement of existing houses, or other buildings used for student accommodation.

Business Fears Inflation

By AB KENT
Times Business Editor

Removing the National Housing Act rate ceiling may produce more mortgage lending, but the effect will only aggravate inflation.

That was the response of Victoria financial men to an Ottawa proposal to eliminate the maximum limit of government-guaranteed mortage interest.

Housing in Canada, plagued by a shortage of investment funds and stiff interest rates on private lending, if proposed changes are acted upon, may enter a period of sharp expansion.

But the concept of ownership and the government's role in housing finance may also change.

RENTING EFFECT

If the maximum term of NHA mortage lending is extended to 40 years, the chances of young persons ever owning a home becomes less.

As pointed out by Bank of Nova Scotia manger James Strong, the effect may be simply the "people will be renting houses from NHA."

"I guess the average young couple doesn't care (about the ceiling rate), but I think it will add to inflation."

In any case, he felt, interest rates will not decline.

National Trust assistant mortgage manager Stan Lind agreed on that point, but he said trust companies at present have no trouble in securing funds for mortgage lending and are able to loan at the higher market rate.

If the NHA rate rises to the market level, this would be of little benefit to people of lower income who seek house financing, he said.

NO LONGER CHOICE

Douglas Peaker, president of Victoria Real Estate Board, said the effect may be to make the government underwriter of all mortgage loans, since the lender would no longer have a choice of rates and would try to make all loans qualify for the government guarantee.

He said is also could mean introduction of discounts on first mortgages, an expansion of the practice now applied by some

Don't Forgive Rioters, Agnew Tells Colleges

By DAVID S. BRODER

LEXINGTON, Ky. (WP). —Vice-President Agnew, assailing college administrations for their "infirm" response to campus demonstrations, said Wednesday that Congress would be perfectly justified in cutting off fianancial aid to students and colleges that exceed "the limits of permissibility."

Agnew told a press conference, preceding the three-day meeting of the Republican governors association here, that university presidents and faculty bodies have been too slow in seeking police assistance and too free in finding excuses for student rioters.

Citing Cornell University as an example, the vice-president said the faculty decision to grant amnesty to violators of campus rules "is a great device for encouraging future explosions" a very serious inducement to further unlawful conduct."

Agnew's statement was the second hard-line against campus unrest by administration leaders in as many days. Tuesday, President Nixon told the Chamber of Commerce of the United States that colleges need presidents "with the backbone to stand up against" the dissenters.

Agnew said he saw "no special role" for the federal executive branch in coping with the wave of campus disorders. But "where federal monetary assistance is being channelled into institutions — private or public — Congress is entitled to take a look," Agnew said.

"If they find a particular institution is moving beyond the limits of permissibility, they are entitled to consider if they should continue to finance that institution," he said.

Agnew specified that he meant to include both aid to individual students and assistance to the universities in referring to a fund cutoff.

BEYOND LIMITS

Asked if the events at Cornell — where an armed group of Negro students occupied a university building — were an example of conduct "beyond the limits of permissibility," the vice-president said, "I don't think there is any doubt things have gotten beyond permissible limits when violence or law-breaking takes place — and I don't single out Cornell alone. I think it's happened at other campuses."

"We've adopted a philosophy that has allowed this campus disorder to breed upon itself," he said. "In general, administrations have been rather infirm in the way the've handled these disputes."

Agnew said he disagreed with the view that a university or faculty should be allowed to decide when police are called onto a campus. He said any student "who is assaulted or whose rights as a citizen are impaired" by a demonstrator has a right to police assistance and to institute prosecution on his own, "and it's nobody's business but his."

At present, Agnew said, "there's a general feeling in the country that you're some sort of fink if you complain about being pushed around by a campus rioter."

$8.5M Five-Year Plan Goes to Vote June 28

By JIM HUME

Victoria city taxpayers will be asked to approve an $8.5 million five-year capital budget Saturday, June 28.

The budget, which will control capital borrowing and spending over the next five years, was presented to a special city council meeting this morning.

The first capital budget approved in 1964 totalled $6.8 million.

The report was compiled over the past few months by members of council, city manager Dennis Young, treasurer James Bramley and department heads.

The budget referendum, if approved, will clear the way for in excess of $14 million capital spending between now and 1973.

Presenting the budget Young said although the gross program exceeded $11 million, some $4 million was already available to the city from other sources, cutting the actual borrowing requirements to $8.5 million.

And $1.5 million of that was for the downtown parking debt, which is recoverable from operating revenues.

Even at $11 million the capital budget is about half the amount the city should be spending on capital priorities over the next five years, the city manager said.

On the first series of reviews of department priorities Young said "their total estimated cost computed on the basis of today's values closely approached $20 million and was far [illegible] resourc[illegible]

But, he [illegible] city could[illegible] do all it desired to do, a [illegible]-year plan was essential if the mill rate and taxes were to be held in tight control as they have for the past four years in the city.

Victoria struck its 1969 general and debt mill rate Tuesday holding it on the line for the fourth year in a row.

On the fact that the city would have to cut capital expenditures to an amount the taxpayer could afford Young said the circumstance was not uncommon across Canada.

"Regrettably this is not a circumstance uncommon to Canadian local governments of today where the burden of providing basic services for a growing and rapidly urbanizing nation are thrust on the shoulders of a level of government whose main source of revenue is the regressive property tax," Young told council.

"Notwithstanding this, if Canadian cities and Victoria in

. . . MAY DAY

The Kremlin has given no explanation for the cancellation of the military parade, for which preparations were being made as late as two weeks ago.

In other May Day developments in Europe:

British workers went on strike for 24 hours to protest the Labor government's plans to curb wildcat strikes. The walkout was expected to fall short of the general strike its promoters wanted, but union leaders said up to 1,000,000 men out of the country's 24,500,000 work force would be involved.

The French interior ministry banned the usual Paris parade, charging that some leftist extremist groups planned to use the occasion for a day of "revolutionary combat." The Communist-led General Confederation of Labor and the French National Students Union also cancelled plans for May Day demonstrations, seeking to improve the Communists' image for the coming presidential campaign.

Portuguese authorities ordered a security clampdown, the first for a May Day since 1962, after bombs rocked the United States consulate in Oporto and the main electric power line to Lisbon. Neither blast caused injury.

In Spain, extra police on horseback and on foot patrolled strategic points in Madrid and Barcelona to guard against threatened demonstrations against the Franco regime. Police reported small skirmishes with student groups but no major trouble.

CROWD DISBANDED

Later, in Prague, police dispersed a crowd of 200 persons that had assembled at the St. Wenceslas statue which became the symbol of resistance to Soviet occupation. As a few Czechs started to place bouquets of flowers at the base of the statue, the police moved in.

Placing flowers there has been prohibited since anti-Soviet demonstrations at the end of March which produced a Communist party crisis and brought strong man Gustav Husak's succession over Alexander Dubcek as party leader.

COMMUNISTS HOLD PARADE

In East Berlin goose-stepping troops and military equipment paraded past Communist party chief Walter Ulbricht on a cold, rainy day. Standing beside him was Marshal P. K. Kosehovoi, who commands the sizeable Soviet forces stationed in East Germany. But no Russian troops took part in the parade.

Thousands of East German Communists and other persons gathered to watch the parade in downtown East Berlin not far from the Communist wall that divides the city. But observers said no new military equipment was shown.

In Rome, young Maoists shouting "revolution" clashed with police after a May Day rally.

Oak Bay Complex Approved

A controversial zoning bylaw permitting a shopping complex to be built on Foul Bay Road was passed by Oak Bay council Wednesday evening.

The developer's plans had been cut back to gain council approval.

The new building will now be one storey, instead of two, and will be reduced from 50,000 to 30,000 square feet.

Because of the reduced usage of the shopping centre there will be no immediate need for an access road feeding onto Cadboro Bay Road.

Ald. Frances Elford said the main change that persuaded her to vote in favor of the zoning was that the complex would now contain a grocery store, bank and drug store, and not the specialty shops that were in the original plans.

"This," she said, "removes the threat of competition to the stores in the village."

Council voted five to two on the bylaw, Aldermen Ian Horne and G. Scott Wallace opposing.

Ald. Wallace said he had some reservations about voting no, and only did so because there was no pre-contract that the developers would allow an access road through to Cadboro Bay if it was ever needed.

Municipal solicitor Malcolm Gordon assured council that the developers had agreed verbally that this would be done.

3 Bids Received On Underwater Blasting Job

Two Vancouver firms bid substantially lower than a Victoria competitor for a contract to blow the top off an underwater obstruction near Swartz Bay ferry terminal.

Lowest bid opened Wednesday came from Vancouver Pile Driving and Contracting Co. Ltd. at $20,672, followed by MacKenzie Barge and Derrick Co. Ltd. of Vancouver at $29,950.

Pacific Pile Driving Co. Ltd. of Victoria bid $44,500 for the job advertised by the highways department.

The project involves blasting the pinnacle of a rock which comes within 12 feet of the surface at low tide, between Knapp and Piers Islands.

Its presence now forces government ferries to use an alternate and longer route at low tide which was felt to force an unacceptable delay for the "stretch" ferries service that begins this summer when the Queen of Esquimalt returns after lengthening by 84 feet.

Standing Ovation For Ho Chi Minh

HANOI (AFP) — Crowds gave a standing ovation today to President Ho Chi Minh of North Vietnam when he arrived at a mammoth political rally here to commemorate May Day.

The president, who is approaching 79, was dressed in a simple grey tunic. Although frail in appearance his carriage was erect.

Nixon Challenged

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Sen. George D. Aiken (R.—Vt.) urged the Nixon administration today to start withdrawing troops from Vietnam "without delay."

Aiken, the senior senate Republican and ranking GOP member of the senate foreign relations committee, said in a prepared speech that the time has come for the new administration to decide what to do about the war.

ONLY CANDIDATE for leadership of British Columbia Progressive Conservative party at June 13 convention in Vancouver is lawyer Charles MacLean, 35, after the withdrawal this week of his only challenger, Rev. Walter McLean, 33, a Victoria-born Presbyterian minister working in Winnipeg.

. . . INFLATION

private lenders to second mortgages. Discounting (a form of bonus to the lender) is already a practice on first mortgages in the U.S., he said.

Stanley E. Nixon, visiting president of the Investment Dealers' Association of Canada, observed that all mortgage money would be competitive under the proposed plan, and that certainly more funds would be attracted to the field.

Frank Allen, manager of Canada Permanent Trust, said he could foresee no drop in interest rates over the longer term, even though an initial easing could take place.

That could be because some private lenders are currently putting out money at less than the NHA maximum rate of 9⅝ per cent, compared with the local market rate of 9½ per cent.

But few persons appear concerned about the inflationary aspects of the proposal; rather they just want to secure a mortgage at a monthly cost they can afford, regardless of term.

—Increase Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. spending on research and community planning to $15,000,000 from $10,000,000.

—Remove many clauses of the housing act requiring cabinet approval of individual plans for urban renewal projects, putting more responsibility on CMHC.

There was no indication when the government plans to call the prime minister's bill for second-reading debate. Mr. Stanfield said the interest ceiling removal should not proceed, but other parts of the bill are helpful.

He advocated at a news conference that the government also remove the 11-per-cent sales tax on building materials going into house construction.

Mr. Douglas said nothing in the bill will help a family with an income under $8,000 a year. He pictured young married couples being tied to 40-year mortgages at 10-per-cent interest.

Among the changes in regulations announced last week, the government will permit new mortgages to be written with clauses permitting renegotiation of interest rates every five years.

Strike Tie-Up Faces Toronto

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The first part of a construction strike that could tie up nearly $2,000,000,000 in building projects began today in Toronto as 2,500 electrical workers failed to show up for work.

The workers approved the strike Wednesday night after rejecting a management offer of a $1.20-an-hour wage increase. A union spokesman said more than 500 major projects were affected plus hundreds of smaller jobs.

But the electrical workers' dispute could signal only the start of a massive city-wide strike. The Toronto Construction Association, representing 1,100 contracting firms, has said it will lock out all construction union employees at midnight Friday night if any construction union went on strike today.

If the lockout occurs, union officials estimate more than 21,000 workers will be affected and construction in the city could virtually come to a halt.

CONTRACT SIGNED

Meanwhile, the prospect of an immediate strike by Montreal-area construction workers ended early today with the signing of a one-year "memorandum of agreement" by one union group and an agreement by another to remain on the job.

At Montreal Louis Laberge, president of the Quebec Federation of Labor, said his union has accepted a management offer of an immediate 5½-per-cent wage increase for its members in the Montreal area and Sorel, Que. The QFL has 34,000 members in the two areas.

The Toronto wage offer of $1.20 an hour included improvements in fringe benefits totalling an additional eight cents an hour. An announcement that the majority of the union negotiating committee favored acceptance of the management offer was booed by members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, who then voted 1,498 to 370 for the strike.

The Toronto meeting was told the offer would bring gross earnings of a journeyman electrician to about $6 an hour from the present $4.70. But speaker after speaker denounced the offer as "peanuts" and cautioned against settling for anything near it.

One speaker said the "absolute minimum" the union should settle for should be an extra $2 an hour over two years.

Toronto electrical workers also have fringe benefits valued at an additional 42 cents. The IBEW didn't say what it wanted, but the target apparently was $1.70 an hour over two years.

The 12 unions in the Toronto Building Trades, Council represent 24,000 workers.

Tory Hits Protests

GUELPH, ONT. (CP)—University officials and teachers must deal with student protests "without compromise," the former leader of the Progressive Conservative party said today. George Drew, opposition leader in the Commons from 1948 to 1953, told a service club luncheon student violence has nothing to do with education or freedom of speech.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

There are people who are described by their doctors as "human barometers." The doctors aren't poking fun at them. If you are one of those who can predict bad weather ahead because of the way you feel, you are a human barometer.

One such weather forecaster can always tell that a rainstorm is on the way because her corns hurt. When her hands and feet get numb and "fall asleep" she knows that the weather is likely to bring snow.

Some human barometers never suffer from aching joints unless it is raining. Arthritics, especially, can in some cases predict rain when the joint in a leg or arm aches. Other forecasters get terrible headaches when dry winds are due to follow rain-bearing winds. And, of course, people complain of aches in the area of an arm or leg that marks the spot where a break healed.

The year 1971 would see expenditures of $1,881,000 and the following year $1,346,000. In the final year, 1973, expenditures would drop off to $507,000.

Capital Budget Means $9 Tax Increase

Approval of the city of Victoria's five year capital budget program June 28 will mean an approximate increase in taxes of around $9.

The figure is based on an average residential assessment of $6,300.

What will the $9 increase and the five year plan do for the city?

City officials say it will permit them to launch an orderly plan for the financing, construction and replacement of major public works programs over a pre-determined five year period.

The plan, attributed with holding the Victoria mill rate at the same level for the past four years, can only come into being if approved by owner-electors.

Under the five year plan, although all major work is approved on one vote, the program is reviewed annually in the light of possible changes in need or newly developed trends.

Even with the approval of the voters the city is not automatically committed to spend every penny approved and every project listed.

"The whole purpose of the annual review," says city manager Dennis Young," is to re-establish priorities and to ensure that the city is in a financial position to incur the required debt."

How much money can be raised each year?

Only 25 per cent or less of the city's annual general tax levy. The ceiling is held at 25 per cent to eliminate the danger of excessive spending which could endanger the city's financial position.

There are five steps in a capital budget program, Young said this morning.

"Capital budgeting starts with the preparation of a detailed estimate of the funds which will be available for payment of the principal and interest on the debt that would be incurred.

"The next step is to determine the work and types of programs which need undertaking and to establish priorities and timetables.

"Step three sees preparation of detailed working plans for each project; step four the raising and allocation of monies as they are required and finally the annual review to maintain tight control over all projects."

. . . FIVE-YEAR PLAN

particular are to avoid the problems so evident in so many central cities in the United States, priorities must be established and development programs instituted to the maximum limits of our resources."

Passage of the capital budge referendum in effect will permit the city to launch a long-range capital priorities program without the need of going back to the people for individual votes each time a major project is undertaken.

Young told council the first five-year plan, approved by the owner-electors in 1964 "proved conclusively the merit of carefully planned capital borrowing and spending within the framework of a formal capital budget."

Erlier this week Mayor Hugh Stephen said there was no doubt in his mind the controls imposed by the first five-year plan were directly responsible for recent mill rate control.

As in the first five-year-plan, the 1969-1973 program will be held to the annual borrowing limit of 25 per cent of the city's tax levy for general purposes.

"To exceed this level could jeopardize a city's financial position," Young said. "But keeping within it could create a realistic debt burden capable of being carried out without undue difficulty and at the same time fully utilize the resources of the community."

With the capital program totalling $11 million but the net non-recoverable borrowing items held to $7 million, Young outlined sources of funds for the $4 million difference.

Authorized financing available from the last capital budget, $740,000; from the McPherson Estate funds $1,300,000 towards the new swimming pool; estimated proceeds from the sale of the Crystal Garden site, $500,000 and the downtown parking facility debt, the carrying charges of which are offset by operating revenues, $1,513,000 for a total of $4,053,000.

"These revenue sources are, firstly, the borrowing authorizations contained in the first five-year capital program which to date have not been used," Young said.

"This results mainly from delays in undertaking the second and third phase of the Clover Point trunk sewer replacement and the extension of the outfall, and also the tieing in of the James Bay system to the Clover Point trunk in order to eliminate a series of communal septic tanks the effluents from which are currently discharged into the Inner Harbor."

Young said it was hoped under the new five-year plan all such septic tanks would be eliminated completely within the city.

Announcements from the provincial government this week could throw a major monkey-wrench into the city's five-year plan as it affects sewage disposal but Young said sewerage system work planned would remain in the capital budget at least until the situation clarifies.

Total funds earmarked for sewers over the next five years are in excess of $2 million.

"We are not quite sure just what the demands will be at Clover Point," Young said in an interview. "We have been told that the Macaulay Point outfall, approved this week by the Pollution Control Board, is being set up as a reasearch project. Presumably the disposal facilities we now have will be permitted to continue until the results of that research are tabulated and made known.

"As a result we have to leave the money required in the capital budget so that it is available when the need arises."

Of the $2,094,000 listed for sewerage systems $550,000 is listed for the extension of the Clover Point outfall in 1970.

On the day the owner-electors vote on the capital budget they will also vote, but by separate referendum, on the fate of the proposed $2.4 million convention centre proposal.

The centre, a controversial matter over recent months, is not included in the five-year plan.

Military Research Halted by Institute

WASHINGTON (WP) — Massachusetts Institute of Technology—the nation's leading science and engineering university—has ordered a temporary halt on accepting new secret military research at two famous laboratories.

The action was this school's response to mounting student and faculty protests against military research by U.S. universities—and against big new weapon systems like the anti-ballistic missile.

The same movement, nation-wide, saw some 175 young anti-ABM physicists picket the White House for 45 minutes Wednesday, then present Dr. Lee A. Dubridge, the president's science adviser, with an anti-Safeguard ABM system petition.

The petition was signed by nearly 1,200 members of the American Physical Society, now meeting here. Other physicists went to Capital Hill to give congressmen anti-Safeguard petitions signed by 729 colleagues at many universities.

"A large number of scientists are coming out of their little dark laboratories" to give the public their opinions on weapons, Charles Schultz, a University of California physicist, told a group of House members.

Just such a coming-out—starting with a one-day research stoppage March 4—culminated in MIT's decision to declare a moratorium, perhaps until fall, on new classified projects at the two laboratories.

By then, a 22-member panel will have reviewed the laboratories' roles—and perhaps, said one MIT source, "recommend that they be solf or otherwise disposed of, to be operated with no MIT connection."

MIT president Howard Johnson asked the panel to make a temporary report by May 31 and a final one by Oct. 1. Panel chairman Frank Pounds, MIT school of management dean, said he will try to have the final report ready May 31.

All work on present projects will continue, meanwhile, and the laboratories may accept "contract modifications."

Edmonton Strike

EDMONTON (CP)—More than 400 members of the International Association of Machinists were on strike today against Northwest Industries Ltd., a major Canadian aircraft parts manufacturer. The strike was voted on April 24 and of the 364 who voted, 304 favored strike action to back demands for an average increase of 80 cents an hour over 27 months. Notice of intent to strike was given Monday and the workers walked out Wednesday night.

Carpenters' Strike Dispute Still In Court

A dispute over a strike vote involving the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Yakimovich Construction Ltd. of Victoria was continued in Vancouver law courts today.

The union is appealing a decision given 10 days ago in Victoria by Mr. Justic R. A. Wootton. He upheld an injunction granted earlier prohibiting the union from picketing Yakimovich construction sites.

Through its lawyer, Louis Lindholm, the union has asked to have the injunction set aside.

The ex-parte injunction was granted when 10 of 15 workers involved swore they had voted against strike action. A secret strike vote, counted in the presence of the company lawyer, was 8-7 for a strike.

The union claimed afterward the workers had been invited to a party on the company premises and offered two years of steady employment.

The strike against Yakimovich began March 25 and the injunction was issued next day.

A Plan in Advance

IN PROPOSING A SECOND five-year capital budget program for Victoria, Municipal Manager Dennis Young can point to the experience of the last five years. A plan that has produced demonstrable results is the best sort of recommendation for a repeat program, and the controlled borrowing and advance planning in the period 1964-1968 inclusive have provided the city with a series of public works of unquestionable benefit. What is proposed now is an extension of the program, continuing with work on some of the uncompleted projects and entering upon new ones.

A rule-of-thumb in municipal borrowing for long-term, non-recoverable capital debt is that the annual repayment of interest and principal should not exceed 25 per cent of the tax levy for general purposes. On this basis a proposal for some $8.5 million in long-term borrowings has been prepared by City Hall. To this sum may be added nearly $3 millions of debt authorized by the last capital budget program but not yet used for the projects intended.

Pollution control decisions have held up sewage extension projects planned for the last capital budget program. Some other work—including pedestrian malls and the approaches to Johnson Street—is also still on the drawing board. Among the projects suggested for the coming five years, then, are these deferred undertakings, along with some major street developments such as extension of Belleville St. to Vancouver St., a new route along Begbie to Shelbourne St., widening of certain sections of Bay and Cook Streets, work on Rose-Blanshard and the Inner Harbor waterfront, improvements to city parks, construction of a civic pool, more off-street parking facilities, and various fire hall developments. The total program would cost $11.128 millions over the period to 1973.

It may well be, as in the case of the previous plan, that all these projects would not be completed in the time specified. Their priority could be reviewed each year in the light of new conditions and also the state of the bond market. But the program as outlined would constitute a workable plan of development for the city with the expenditure remaining within its means.

In 1964 the city conducted a well managed educational campaign before the referendum to acquaint the public with what was proposed and what it would cost. This should again be done so that there will be a full understanding of the needs and the method of meeting them. In this connection there should be no disposition to consider such projects as pedestrian malls or city beautification as unnecessary frills. In the light of today's problems affecting the city centre they are, in addition to their physical attractiveness, integral factors in maintaining core property values and a stable downtown tax base.

Watchdog Needed

THERE IS MERIT IN DR. MURray Newman's proposal for a body of independent biologists and conservationists to help combat pollution in this province. The director of the Vancouver Aquarium suggested creation of a "biological council" while expressing concern over the threat to beaches and wildlife from offshore oil drilling operations.

Dr. Newman sees the function of the board as three-fold: making the public aware of what it stands to lose; drawing up safeguards; and applying pressure to see that safety measures are enforced through firm government regulation.

"What we have to lose is a world-famous animal, bird, and fish population," he said. The same message was delivered eloquently in Victoria last week by biologist David Hancock during presentation of his impressive film of natural beauty and wildlife along this coast. Mr. Hancock was particularly concerned about the forecast of giant tankers soon to ply the dangerous North Pacific waters carrying oil from new fields under development in Alaska. One shipwreck could cause a disaster far worse than that of the Torrey Canyon grounding or the Santa Barbara leakage.

Mr. Hancock admitted there is no easy solution to this menace beyond international agreement on improved safety measures. This would obviously be beyond the jurisdiction of Dr. Newman's proposed group, but there are many other areas of immediate concern for it to deal with.

One is the spread of pesticides such as DDT which are proving resistant to decomposition and build an accumulation in plants and animals. Recent discovery of dangerous amounts of DDT in Lake Michigan salmon has moved the state of Michigan toward outlawing sale of the chemical within its borders. Arizona has enforced a similar one-year-trial ban and the United States federal government is also studying this problem.

It is apparent that preservation of the environment has become one of our most important tasks. This recognition is coming with painful slowness to the provincial government. Although some positive steps such as sewage treatment are now about to be enforced, the government's record in recent years raises doubts about its zeal in meeting other tests that lie ahead. This is where Dr. Newman's watchdog group could prove useful, coming up with the scientific answers needed, and also a prod to action.

Something to "Stomp On"

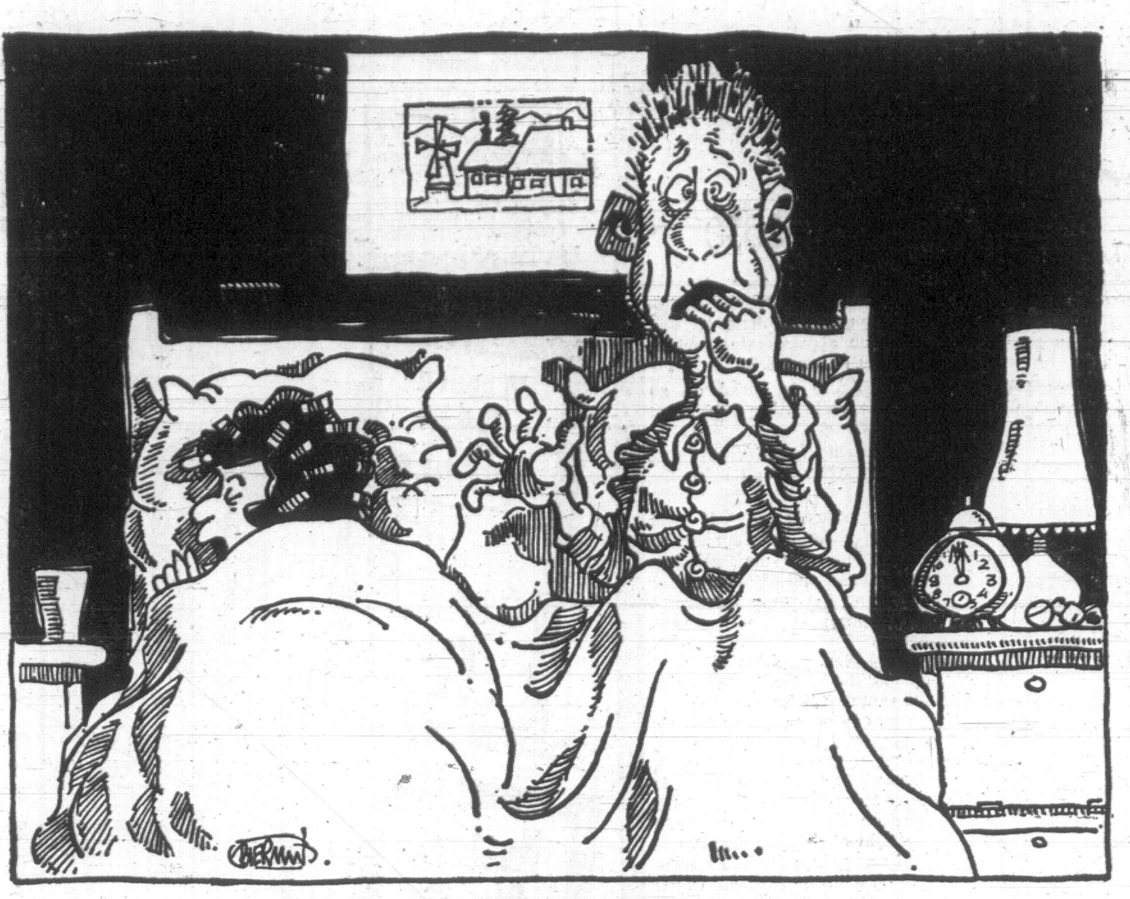
THE PROPOSAL TO EMPHAsize the plight of low-income mothers by staging a "stomp-in" of some public flower bed, perhaps on the grounds of the Legislative building, is unfortunate and misguided. In the interests of those for whom the demonstration is suggested, the idea should be "stomped on" now. Few activities could be better calculated to alienate the sympathies of people in this community who have displayed a genuine concern for those in the very low income bracket.

Second thought should convince anyone who contemplated such action of its inevitable results. Certainly it would draw attention to demonstrators, but only as a demonstration of willingness to destroy public property established for the enjoyment of all. The validity of the low-income group's cause would not be enhanced.

With Winds to Spare

PARKS ADMINISTRATOR HERB Warren has justified his request for two "power leaf-blowers," to blow fallen foliage off flower beds in the parks and boulevards. They will be purchased for a total cost of $1,200.

But is this the imaginative approach? Couldn't the parks committee have beefed up the attraction of the so-called "Speakers' Corner" and sited it in different locations from time to time, adding the practical merits of leaf-blowing to the respected principle of free speech?



"... by the way ... did you mail your tax forms ...?"

FROM WASHINGTON — By BRUCE HUTCHISON

Three Great Risks in Premature Reduction

IN a man of his brilliant intelligence it is difficult for the American government to understand why Prime Minister Trudeau took so long to see the absolute necessity of a strong NATO in Europe, and a substantial Canadian presence there. His own people will understand their leader's mind more easily, though not fully. They know him for an outright pragmatist, by his own definition a man ready to consider every possible option, and above all, an instinctive rebel against all accepted theories. But as the American and Canadian governments both realize now, the mystery of this lonely person's inner thought process remains and doubtless will remain to the end.

Hutchison

Certainly I do not pretend to understand him. Nor do any of his colleagues, so far as I can discover. It is obvious from his public statements, however, that he, like some powerful American statesmen, can see no good reason why Canada and the United States should permanently support a large military force in a Europe well able to defend itself short of total nuclear war.

Right in Long Run

Mr. Trudeau, I submit, is quite right in his long-run objective but, until recent days, had erred badly in his timing. And, at this critical juncture in world affairs, timing is supremely important, as he and his government have suddenly understood after long confusion.

No one in Washington or Ottawa supposes that North America should keep massive troops in Europe indefinitely. Everyone agrees that the rich European nations can afford, later on, to supply their own conventional forces, backed by the guarantee of the American nuclear deterrent. But for three decisive reasons the United States cannot afford, in the immediate future, to pull any large part of its conventional forces out of Europe. Neither can Canada.

First, Europe is not yet willing or able to defend itself against a conventional attack, even if it should be by this time.

Conventional Attack

Second, it is quite unrealistic to assume that there will never be some kind of Russian conventional attack or at least an experimental probe westward. After its successful crime in Czechoslovakia, Russia may feel compelled to extend its grip still further for reasons of self-defence, as it sees them. It might move, for example, into Berlin, or into Yugoslavia and thus risk a confrontation with NATO on the existing strategic line of power.

But it would be unlikely to take that risk, the American government believes, so long as it faced a certain conventional response from NATO. On the other hand, if NATO were weakened, or even appeared to be weakening, then Russia might make a fatal miscalculation, as it did in the Cuban missile crisis, It could assume that the United States would not dare to use nuclear retaliation, at the cost of the world's ruin, merely to prevent some change in the boundaries and power balance of Europe.

Final U.S. Guarantee

A strong NATO is therefore not only the essential instrument needed to deter a conventional attack, to cope with it if it occurs, and hopefully, to buy time and forestall an escalation into nuclear war. With American troops physically committed to it, on the soil of Europe, NATO is the final guarantee that the United States will defend its allies by any means, including the ultimate weapon. Provided that the Russian government understands that fact clearly in advance, and perhaps not otherwise, it will not miscalculate, unless it is altogether mad.

Besides, the need of strength in NATO has become more important right now than ever when the United States is earnestly seeking a basic detente with Russia and, as in all great negotiations, must be able to bargain from strength.

The third reason forbidding an erosion of NATO is even more important, though seldom mentioned in polite international conversation. As the United States government has long believed, and as the Canadian government has belatedly realized, the results of an early withdrawal of North American troops from Europe could be catastrophic in West Germany, the fulcrum of the world's power struggle.

Feeling themselves abandoned by their greatest ally and protector, the Germans might elect a right-wing, military-minded government and build their own nuclear force, as they can easily do with their wealth and technical know-how. Or, alternatively, their desperation might drive them into the arms of Russia, thus transforming the power struggle and giving Communism its long-sought victory. Either way, Germany would re-emerge as a terrible danger to the world—a familiar, twice-repeated nightmare in this century.

Anyone who supposes that these are imaginary dangers has not talked to the moderate statesmen now governing Germany. At their recent meeting in Washington the NATO governments heard enough from Germany to convince them that the potential dangers are authentic and would become immediate dangers if the United States reduced its overseas forces too massively or too soon.

Such are the ugly facts of life today, as nearly as the United States can assess them, but no sure assessment will be possible before the pending American-Russian arms negotiations begin to succeed or fail.

In any case, the argument against a major North American retreat from Europe at the present time is unanswerable. That is why the Canadian government has postponed any decision on the withdrawal of its own troops. But as a final dispatch will try to explain, the ambiguous Canadian policy, or non-policy, has done serious mischief already.

Letters to the Editor

Ancient or Modern

It would be interesting to know if there is any other civilized country in the world today, that has only a five-day mail delivery service?—E. W. Abraham, 1125 Faithful.

Prices and Uncut Hair

By the papers I see another prospect of a rise in hair cutting prices which induces me to wonder if the start of high costs by barbers had any influence in starting the Hippy movement.—H. Wyer.

The Have-Nots Suffer

Regarding the recent controversy between the B.C. government and the British Columbia Professional Pharmacists Society, as per usual, when there is an issue like this it is always the have-nots who suffer as the lever. It is too bad that the people who have so little security, should have one more vital link broken in their chain of miseries. If you can show me one family living on welfare that has a dollar left after the fifteenth of the month to spend on medicine, then I will show you one family that is dying of malnutrition. —(Mrs.) Susan Talbot, 990 Jasmine.

Thanks

The Victoria and District Branch of the Canadian Diabetic Association thank those who gave donations during our recent Tag Day to raise funds for our Diabetic Children's Summer Camp. Their generosity is greatly appreciated.

A special thank you goes to those who gave of their time and energy during this appeal and also to the business centres who allowed us to use their premises for tagging.

I would also like to thank your paper for the appeal for taggers printed April 16. The response from the item was most gratifying.—Mrs. E. M. Downs, Camp Convenor.

What Values Now?

In his obsession with Vietnam and the nuclear problem, I think Professor Wald has been carried away.

I can't agree, for instance, that Mexican student activists are much concerned about these two things. In my humble opinion, this world-wide malaise is caused in a good measure by the fact that the gods of the peoples of the world have fled their temples, and the young, lacking this traditional direction and support, are fearful and afraid.

Upon what values can they now rely? Even Lenin has lost his place in Russia.—M. P. Paine, 3620 Quadra St.

How Kind of the CPR

How kind of the CPR to unveil its plans for the city to spend $2.4 million for a convention centre to increase the use of CPR accommodation and services and hence its profits. The company also graciously promises to pay 25 per cent of the opening losses. However, good citizens and taxpayers, you must now act quickly to take advantage of this philanthropic offer, otherwise perhaps some other benevolent entrepreneur may come up with something better at, say $5 million. Someone might even come up with plans to build and operate a convention centre with his own funds!

It is par for the course that in the same issue of your paper one notes that the city hall potentates have decided that a reduction must be made in the city's grant to the library. Of course, one must realize that if the taxpayers are encouraged to read, they may eventually learn to read the city's financial statements and find out how their taxes are being squandered. Such a danger must be averted at all costs.—A. Critic.

Only in Democracy

Only Communists can see no future for youth today, for it is only in Communist dominated contries, that people, be they young or old, have no future, either spiritually or materially.

Free enterprise and democracy produce more new ideas, new jobs, new professions and new wealth every day, than previously occurred in a century.

It is human nature to envy personal wealth in others, but the regime that destroys private wealth soon finds that it has killed the will to advance. So let us thank God for wealthy people, be their wealth either in the spiritual or material sense.

Vietnam happens to be the right cause, carried forward in the wrong way. To pacify a people, it is first necessary to get them on your side.

The country that will not spend the money or raise the men to defend itself, has no right to be free. — J. P. Thornton, 943 Wilmer.

Parkinson in The Pentagon

By
F. MANKIEWICZ and T. BRADEN
From Washington

AN Air Force veteran named Abner J. Mikva is proposing to his fellow congressmen a plan whereby the American armed services might possibly elect to become fighting units instead of unshapely bureaucracies.

Rep. Mikva's plan is quite simple but, in order to understand why he is proposing it, it is first necessary to consider history.

First, in 1944, when there were 12 million Americans under arms, the Pentagon had 30 per cent fewer employees than it does now — for only 3.5 million men.

Second, we are the only nation in the world which would consider building — and, in fact, has built — a mini-Pentagon, known in military vernacular as Pentagon East, at a cost of $50 million, in order to house the generals and their staffs who are directing a guerrilla war in Vietnam.

These facts in turn illustrate the problem of what the military calls the "division slice."

The division slice is the number of men in the front lines as compared to the number who back them up. We presently put fewer forces in the front lines in proportion to support troops than any other nation. In the Army, for example, it is about one to three.

Non-Combatants

The one is a soldier in a front-line division, many of whom, for that matter, are never called upon to fight. The three, who will never hear a shot fired in anger, are clerks, secretaries, PX salesmen, soldiers who pull targets for the National Rifle Assn., and soldiers who rake the generals' yards.

The circle is closed with the equivalent of the Pentagon-and-a-half that has been built or purchased in this city in order to house the overflow of soldiers who are doing office work.

Mikva is proposing an open-ended plan which will enable the military to unstrangle itself if it wishes. He would cut military manpower by 10 per cent and leave it to the Defence Department to figure out where. He points out that we have a lot of men in a lot of places.

For example, there are still 40,000 men in Japan and 40,000 more in Okinawa. There are 92,000 in Western Europe, exclusive of Germany where there are 228,000. There are 23,000 in the Canal Zone, Puerto Rico and Guantanamo. In short, about half the total U.S. military is based or seaborne outside the United States, 1.756 million, all told — less than half of them in Vietnam.

The cost of this uniformed manpower, according to Mikva, is well over half the $81 billion Pentagon budget. If Congress adopted Mikva's proposal of a 10 per cent cut, Mr. Nixon could lower his budget by more than $4.5 billion.

Rising Ceilings

It is, of course, unlikely. Early in the 1950s Congress set a statutory ceiling on the armed services, and each two or four years since Congress has suspended the ceiling as automatically as it raises the permissible budget deficit. At first, Congress gave reasons, though very general ones. Thus, in 1954, the House Armed Services Committee declared that it was "obvious" that we needed an armed force of two million men.

In 1957 the reason for suspending the ceiling was again called "obvious," and in 1959 it was "vital to the continuation of the American way of life." Since then no reason at all has been offered. The armed services have continued to grow.

The Pentagon houses a self-fulfilling prophecy. C. Northcote Parkinson, who first expounded the thesis that "work expands in proportion to the number of men available to perform it," pointed to the example of the British in India, and United States military planners should note it as well. In New Delhi, the giant administrative headquarters building for the viceroy was finished just as the Union Jack came down for the last time.

The Making Of a Young Revolutionary

By WILLIAM GREIDER

Jerry Rubin

CINCINNATI, Ohio—Though he was not selected "most likely to succeed" or even "best dressed", Jerry Rubin graduated from Walnut Hills High School with the conventional markings of American youth destined for success and maturity.

Walnut Hills is Cincinnati's premier high school. Students are admitted by examination only, a throwback to the days when only the exceptional few prepared for college.

Jerry was bright with a smile that was yearbook wholesome. He wore white bucks and bow ties and edited the Chatterbox. His ambition, when he finished at the University of Cincinnati, was to become a famous journalist. He got off to a promising start at the Cincinnati Post, putting out the weekly youth page.

Like Mad Troll

Last week, Rubin was back on the front steps of Walnut Hills with a hoary reddish-brown beard and jester's mop of hair and the gleam of a mad troll, a very unwelcome alumnus surrounded by kids and plainclothes cops.

"At Walnut Hills, I was so bottled up, just working for grades, competing with other kids, being nice to teachers I didn't like," he told the present generation at his alma mater.

"When it was over, I was perverted. As I see it, the last few years have been cleansing, getting back to simplicity, asking why, the way I was as a baby."

As he walked through the swirl of kids, short and muscular in his red-and-yellow polo shirt, Rubin looked like a debauched apache dancer. In respose, his freckled face seems brooding and, when he smiles, satanic.

In the last few years, Jerry Rubin has become a leading actor-director-producer in the freak rebellion, a theatrical which confounds and outrages Adult America.

'Academy Award'

Last month, he won "the academy award of protest," a federal indictment for inciting last summer's riot at the Democratic convention in Chicago.

He frequently uses four-letter words in his speeches, delighted with the knowledge that above-ground newspapers will cut them and TV will bleep them out.

Though classes were over for the day, Jerry Rubin, class of 56, was not allowed to speak in the building or on the school grounds.

"Jerry is a nihilist and I don't think that contributes to anyone's education," the principal, Raymond Brokamp, explained. "We have 12-year-old kids and I don't think his language is appropriate."

The school system also has an important tax referendum coming before the voters next month which made the homecoming especially sensitive. Rubin, more pleased than disappointed, hiked with a group of several hundred students to a Quaker meeting house where they sat on the lawn and talked about the revolution.

"I want a society based on human relationships, not money," he told them. "Lots of us come out of the middle class and haven't been exploited. But we've been exploited by boredom, by affluence; by hypocritical values."

When Jerry grew up in the Avondale section of Cincinnati, it was the aspirations of Jewish mothers that had sixth graders sweating to get into Walnut Hills.

Now, thanks to urban renewal and other factors, the school is surrounded by black families, few of whom send sons and daughters to Walnut Hills.

"You've got to see it for what is is," said Rubin, clutching shaggy head with both hands. "It's an elite school! It's where the rich teach the rich to replace themselves!"

Familiar Litany

Rubin's voice rose and fell with anguish as though he derived fresh indignation from reciting the familiar litany of grievances—poverty amid plenty, the killing in Asia, schools that are prisons, corporations that steal, racial exploitation, hate, war, napalm.

His style is anti-rational, skipping chaotically back and forth over the revolutionary doctrine, puncuating with frequent one-line gags. "You ought to call all your teachers by their first name. They call you by your first name. What is this Mr. Stuff?"

With the high school audience, he used a minimum of obscenities, though he emphasized the profane nature of society. He didn't push dope either, though he believes it is "the glue" which holds together youth's cultural revolution.

("What they say about marijuana, they used to say about masturbation," he told a University of Cincinnati audience. "It wasn't true about masturabtion, we all know that, and it isn't true about marijuana either.")

Left Them Agitated

When he finished, the high school kids were not prepared to march on the board of education with bombs and clubs but, in a deeper sense, he left them agitated.

The short hairs dismissed him as a demagogue, but one who forced them to re-think their own purposes. The longhairs began discussing strategy.

"Look," said Andy Schwartz, "I'm a senior with about 30 days of school left and we haven't yet gotten to World War I in American history. Now what does that tell us about the 50s and the 60s?"

Andy is a longhair who wears the beads-and-baubles of society's dropouts. He also happens to be student council president at Walnut Hills, where he has agitated for a more relevant curriculum. The student council put up its own money to buy paperback books by black authors.

"Seventh-graders read Marian Anderson's autobiography. It's kind of bubble-gummy, but you know," he said. After Rubin's speech, Andy organized a petition to the school's history teachers in the remaining weeks of school, the students demanded, let's talk about the present. Next year, he will contipue agitating at Berkeley, Columbia or Dartmouth.

What diverted Jerry Rubin from journalism to radicalism? Maybe the sudden loss of his parents, the father-son ambitions and the sudden responsibility for his brother had something to do with it. Jerry thinks so.

Dad Was Driving

"I think my father would be very happy with what I'm doing now," he said. "He instilled a lot of ambition into me. He was very driving. When I was a kid, he wanted me to be a baseball player. I was a real baseball freak, too—knew all the batting averages and everything."

His mother was a college graduate and a pianist whose devotion to music didn't take with her elder son. With some resentment, Jerry remembers a faint snobbery from the relatives who were a notch better off and in businesses while his father drove a bread truck.

But the transformation is more complicated than that, involving other heroes and disillusionment.

In college, he read C. Wright Mills and the early socialist essays of Walter Lippmann. His favorite book was "Catcher in the Rye," the clasic of adolescent honesty confronting adult hypocrisy.

Jimmy Hoffa became one of the heroes. He backed up Rubin's father in a long, bitter bread strike in the mid-1950s, which the union ultimately lost.

"Hoffa was straight out, just great," Jerry said. "He was just total power for the working man." Rubin's father defended Hoffa against the assaults by congress and the courts.

The "straight out" style of Hoffa is important to Rubin who regards it as honest puncturing of establishment hypocrisies. His favorite presidential candidate last year was George Wallace for the same reason.

'They Don't Hide'

His favorite newspaper is the New York Daily News. "Sex — Dope, Yippies," says Rubin, spelling out tabloid headlines in the air. "At least, you know what they're talking about. They don't hide behind words."

In hindsight, Rubin also credits the Cincinnati Post and Times-Star, a very conventional afternoon newspaper, with radicalizing him.

Working there, he listened to the disillusionment of older men and concluded that writing cute stories to please editors was not really saying much. Out of this, he derived a sense that growing up means giving in to conventional cynicisms.

He also discovered what every reporter learns—that the reality of people and events in newspaper stories is man-made, shaped by the writers and editors.

As editor of the youth page, if Jerry Rubin made an issue of the uniforms kids wear at Catholic high schools, it was an issue, no matter what the priests or nuns said.

Thanks to this training, Rubin has an acute sense of what outrageous remark will attract a newspaper and what will get two minutes on the TV news.

Love, Freedom

His dialectic is that people are really good; it is only the institutions which make them do evil; all this will change when the youth culture of love and freedom prevails.

If a cynic calls this an immature understanding of human nature, Jerry Rubin accepts the description, even embraces it.

"The hope is that youth will grow up without shedding this immaturity, that they will never give up their idealism," he said. "America tries to rob children of their youth by taking away their dreams."

A Nation Gropes in Pain Toward a Better Society

The success of the United States in meeting the pressures that confront it from within a troubled society concerns everyone today. If the U.S. fails to cope we will all be the losers. Many of the problems, of course, are also identical to ours. The challenge was thoughtfully outlined recently by John W. Gardner, former U.S. Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare who now heads the privately financed Urban Coalition which seeks to rehabilitate the cities and assist Negro development. This is the first article in a series based on three lectures he delivered at Harvard University in the Godkin Lectures, honoring a progressive nineteenth century editor who was the founder of the magazine The Nation.

By JOHN W. GARDNER

These are dark days for the nation, days of controversy, days of violence and hostility, days of blind groping.

Our prosperity and technological advances continue undiminished.

But every knowing person sees—first of all in himself—the anguish of the American people; the shattering of confidence, the anger, the bewilderment.

But it may be that we were in greater peril when we were less worried. We may even be on the mend.

We were in greater peril in the complacent years, when all of the present evils were in existence, or brewing, but layered over by our national smugness.

We must call for the best or live with the worst . . . There is no easy solution. There is an almost overpowering temptation to believe that somewhere along the line we made one big mistake, forgot one big truth, overlooked the one key to salvation.

We want a simple answer. Seeking such simplicity, ardent but undisciplined minds seize on every new and fashionable nostrum that floats by. But the pat formula will never appear . . .

★

One might blame our apathy, or our unwillingness to spend, or our fondness for outdated solutions, or our resistance to change. I have had my turn at blaming all those things. But something else is wrong, something central, something crucial.

As we examine the efforts—the intensive and multitudinous efforts—of our society to cope with those problems, I think we are driven to a significant conclusion: There are some things that are gravely wrong with our society as a problem-solving mechanism.

We can less and less afford to limit ourselves to routine repair of breakdowns in our institutions. Unless we are willing to see a final confrontation between institutions that refuse to change and critics bent on destruction, we had better get on with the business of redesigning our society . . .

We must dispose of the notion that social change is a process that alters a tranquil status quo. Today there is no tranquility to alter.

Given the swift transformations in our world, even institutions that are fairly young (as history goes) find themselves woefully out of date. The rush of change brings a kind of instant antiquity.

★

This is not to say that we must be infatuated with everything new and reject everything old. In all evolutionary growth there is a complex interweaving of continuity and change. One of the purposes of social change is to find new solutions that will preserve old values.

There is no danger that we will fail to respond to the sweep of change. It forces our hand. The danger is that we will respond sluggishly. The danger is the creeping disaster that overtakes a society which little by little loses a commanding grip on its problems and its future.

How curious, then, that in all of history, with all the immensely varied principles on which societies have been designed and operated, no people has seriously attempted to take into account the aging of institutions and to provide for their continuous renewal. Why shouldn't we be the first to do so?

We are all familiar with the young radicals who reject the world as it is, but can't specify the kind of world they want.

But I find that most of my middle of the road and conservative friends are equally unprepared to specify the kind of society we should be striving to achieve.

What would be the attributes of such a society? First of all, it would be characterized by pluralism—by variety, alternatives, choices and multiple foci of power and initiative. We have just such pluralism in this society.

But, it would be folly to ignore that the logic of modern, large scale organization, government or corporate, tends to squeeze out pluralism, and to move us toward one comprehensively articulated system of power.

★

As I contemplate the present trend, I find myself treasuring every remaining bit of pluralism, everything that stands between us and the one all-embracing System.

So when I hear some people recommending the abolition of private enterprise, I am inclined to question whether they have weighed the consequences.

Today's young people — unlike those of 30 years ago — are highly critical of the federal government, indeed of all government. It may not have occurred to them that socialism or any other alternative to private enterprise would certainly mean the shouldering by government of huge new burdens.

General Motors would not disappear. It would simply be lumped with Ford, Chrysler, Boeing, Pan American and so on in an unimaginably vast Ministry of Transportation. And bureaucracy would conquer all . . .

To bring full justice and equality to black people is the historic assignment of this generation. We cannot evade that assignment and preserve the kind of nation we care about.

Everything we believe in — the phrases in our founding documents, the words on the monuments — say that every individual is of value.

Our past record of dealing with black Americans says something very different. A reckoning was bound to come and it has come in this generation.

★

It will not be resolved by violence of hatred or bitterness or police suppression. It will be resolved only by patient, determined efforts on the part of the great, politically moderate majority of whites and blacks . . .

It is not just the national government or the Establishment (whatever that is) that can profit by criticism. Every institution and organization in the society can benefit.

In the absence of healthy criticism, every organization tends to end up being managed for the benefit of the people who run it.

We can make great progress in improving the functioning of our society and still not have anything that will live or last unless we concern ourselves with the values that underlie the enterprise.

If a society believes in nothing, if it does not generate in its members a sense of moral purpose, there is no possibility that it can develop the high level of motivation essential to renewal.

We will not accomplish the exceedingly difficult tasks of redesign that lie ahead with a combination of commitment and cool intellect. Intellect alone won't generate the courage and determination necessary to cut through the obstacles.

But the contemporary fashion of ardor without intellect is even more inadequate. The tasks of social change are tasks for the tough-winded and competent. Those who come to the task with the currently fashionable mixture of passion and incompetence only add to the confusion.

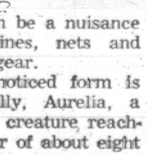
Jellyfish Jostle for Space

By DR. CLIFFORD CARL
Director, Provincial Museum



Carl

Jellyfish usually receive no more than a passing glance when individuals drift by in a passing current but they get special attention when they congregate in large numbers. On such occasions they become a conspicuous part of the marine world and may even be a nuisance by fouling lines, nets and other fishing gear.

Our most noticed form is the moon jelly, Aurelia, a saucer-shaped creature reaching a diameter of about eight inches. It regularly occurs in Saanich Inlet and similar locations in immense numbers attracting the attention of even the most casual observer.

●

Though each jellyfish swims independently with the tide they often become concentrated in dense aggregations consisting of thousands of individuals jostling each other for swimming space.

On a calm day they may even congregate at the surface, pulsing along with their backs partly out of water. More usually, especially when a breeze disturbs the upper layers, the main mass occupies a stratum several feet below the surface and stragglers extend downward as far as the eye can see.

●

Moon jellies, though larger than most species, are typical of several kinds of jellyfish that are found along our coast. A series of branching canals radiate out from a central four-lobed stomach and the edge of the notched disk-like body is fringed with a large number of short delicate tentacles.

Four long narrow lobes or arms which hang beneath the disk help to capture prey which is transferred to the central mouth. Two pairs of yellow or orange colored U-shaped reproductive organs are conspicuous objects within the otherwise colorless body.

While Aurelia is relatively simple in its anatomical organization its life story is not. Its cycle is complicated by the fact that there is an attached phase which alternates with the free-living phase.

Each free-swimming jellyfish is either male or female; the sperm and eggs which they release into the water unite to produce great numbers of swimming larvae.

Each larva is capable of settling down on a fixed support where it will develop into a trumpet-shaped structure with a central mouth and tentacles much like a sea anemone in miniature.

●

It feeds and grows and as it elongates horizontal constrictions develop which eventually pinch off plate-like sections of the body which swim away as minute jellyfish. In time these tiny offspring become full-sized adults to complete the cycle.

While the most conspicuous phase of Aurelia is the free-living form, the attached phase being almost completely unknown to the layman, the reverse is the case in another common species called Obelia.

In Obelia, the free-living individuals are minute, scarcely visible as tiny jellyfish to the naked eye but the attached form is readily seen as a branching moss-like growth found attached to wharves, rocks and large sea weeds of many kinds.

●

These colonial growths resemble plants so much that they were thought to be seaweeds by early naturalists and were even labelled as such in some collections!

However, close study with the aid of modern microscopes revealed their true nature so they are now placed in their rightful slot in the animal kingdom.

Nevertheless the fact that these common plant-like structures regularly produce buds that swim away as young jellyfish still astonishes students in marine biology—and anyone else for that matter who sees them for the first time under a magnifying lens.

MARKET SUMMARIES

Toronto Continues Gains

Industrials continued to climb into new territory today as the Toronto stock market posted another advance.

Beverages and steels paced the advance.

The New York market moved in a narrow range today after Wednesday's record gains. Trading was active near the close.

AT TORONTO in industrials, Hamilton Cotton rose 4 to 42½, Investors Overseas 2⅜ to 56, Kenting 1⅞ to 18½, B.C. Phone 1⅜ to 69½, and Falconbridge 1½ to 127½. Scottish and York slipped 1⅝ to 21.

McIntyre jumped 6 to 136, United Asbestos $1.10 to $8.25, Conwest 80 cents to 10¼ and Hollinger ¾ to 35.

Denison lost 1⅜ to 58, Bankeno 50 cents to $8.25 and Sherritt ⅜ to 11.

Asamera was up 2½ to 41¾, Canadian Superior Oil 2½ to 57, North Canadian Oils 1¾ to 14 and Prairie 1 to 32.

AT NEW YORK prices near the close included: Deere Co., off ⅝ at 46⅝; Texas Gas Transmission, off ⅛ at 32; Republic Steel, up 1¾ at 46; and City Investing, up ⅝ at 32¾.

AT MONTREAL prices continued a slow climb during moderately active trading today.

Banks were stronger. This was said due to the bills introduced by the federal government to make housing loans easier to obtain.

The Bank of Montreal gained ⅛ to 50⅛ and the Royal Bank ⅛ to 23¼ while the Bank of Nova Scotia slid ⅜ to 24⅛. The Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce was unchanged at 21¾.

Among industrials, Credit Foncier hopped up 2½ to 53½ and Falconbridge Nickel 2¼ to 128, after Falconbridge directors announced increased first-quarter net income of $1.72 a share compared with $1.07 per share in the same period last year. Hudson's Bay Co. increased 1¼ to 25, Radio Engineering 1 point to 40½ and Alcan ⅞ to 35.

AT LONDON the market tended to drift downward today.

The losses by such leaders as ICI, EMI, Glaxo, Courtauld's and GEC rarely exceeded sixpence.

Hudson's Bay gained 1s 3d to 191s 3d but Bowater was lower at 64s 6d.

Canadians were mixed. International Nickel added another 2½ points to Wednesday's rise and Canadian Pacific continued in demand, up 2 points to $250. Gains of up to two points or so were shown by Cominco, Pacific Petroleum and Alcan.

Hollinger was 2¼ points lower at $100¼ and Hiram Walker down 1½ at $118. A feature in banks was a sharp fall of 11s to 278s in Bank of Nova Scotia.

AT VANCOUVER mining issues were generally strong in early trading today.

About 1,850,000 shares were traded to 11 a.m.

Brenda led the mines, up .50 to $15. Churchill was up .40 to $9.20, and Omega up .30 to $6. Ace climbed .33 to $2.75.

Biggest loser was Valley, down .50 to $23.50.

In industrials, Captain International dropped .50 to $8.50.

In oils, Royal Canadian Ventures gained .30 to $4.80 while Trans-Canada dropped .20 to $3.30.

Piece-Work Proposal Criticized

VANCOUVER (CP) — Union officials said Wednesday Attorney-General Leslie Peterson's proposals for a piece-work system in industry with wages tied to productivity would cause more trouble and inequality than present systems.

Jack Moore, regional president of the International Woodworkers of America, said he agreed with the idea of higher wages resulting from greater productivity but not through a piece-work system.

Paddy Neale, secretary of the Vancouver and District Labor Council, said: "We don't like piece work . . . It's bad for two reasons:

"The employer, through his supervisory staff, is always pushing, pushing, pushing for higher production and this is hard on the worker.

"This sets up competition between the employees and sows dissension among them. We have found some spontaneous work stoppages resulting from this type of emotional problem."

Peterson made his suggestions in a speech to the Industrial Relations Management Association of British Columbia.

George Johnston, second vice-president of the B.C. Federation of Labor, said a fair wage-productivity agreement would be difficult to work out.

He said that unless the worker has some part in making decisions that affect productivity, he is at the will of the employer and "there is nothing he can do to ensure being compensated."

Superport Essential To Pacific

By DENNIS BELL

VANCOUVER (CP) — In the words of engineer Ian Ross, the difference between the Roberts Bank deep-sea port and existing Vancouver port facilities is like that between Grand Central Station and a whistlestop.

Ross, whose Swan Wooster Engineering Co. Ltd. of Vancouver developed plans for the Roberts Bank project 15 miles south of here a year ago, says a deepsea port is a necessity, not a luxury.

The Japanese are building super ports at Kobe and Tokyo, and they're also building gigantic 200,000-ton freighters to operate out of them to any ports big enough to handle them.

"We have to match these facilities on our side of the water," says Ross.

"There's no point in having Grand Central Sattion on one side of the Pacific and a whistlestop on the other."

Roberts Bank should open for business in November, if the engineers stay ahead of schedule. At present, the port consists of a 50-acre blob of mud three miles offshore connected to the mainland by a tenuous causeway completed in March.

When the first bulk carrier docks to load coking coal from British Columbia's East Kootenay district, berthing facilities will be dredged to a depth of 65 feet, 26 feet deeper than Vancouver's Burrard Inlet which tontains 64 older deep-sea berths.

The first company is Kaiser Resources Ltd., a subsidiary of Kaiser Steel Corp. of Oakland, Calif., which has a contract to supply 45 million long tons of coking coal worth $650 million to a Japanese steel industry consortium.

The 15-year agreement was predicated on construction of a deep-sea port, a condition readily agreed to by the federal and provincial governments.

Work is set to start on the terminal itself at a cost of $8,500,000.

Swan Wooster has calculated that 5,000 acres adjacent to the shoreline of Delta municipality can be reclaimed for industrial development.

The competitiveness of Canadian coking coal depends to a large extent on rapid transport.

TRANSPORT COSTLY

For example, in 1965 and 1966 it cost about $9 a ton to mine coal in the East Kootenay district and a further $10.50 to transport it to Japan.

However, the Japanese were able to get coking coal elsewhere for $17 a ton, meaning the Canadian government had to provide a subsidy of $2.50 a ton, costing taxpayers $2 million annually.

With Roberts Bank in action and through utilization of specially-designed unit trains, transport costs will drop to $7 a ton for a delivered price in Japan of $16.

Government officials estimate the port will mean a saving of about $150 million on transport costs.

For the coal contract, CP Rail is building 350 cars with special couplings so they can be dumped without being detached from the rest of the train.

The trains will run from 100 to 150 cars each with as many as 12 locomotives to haul about 15,000 tons at a time.

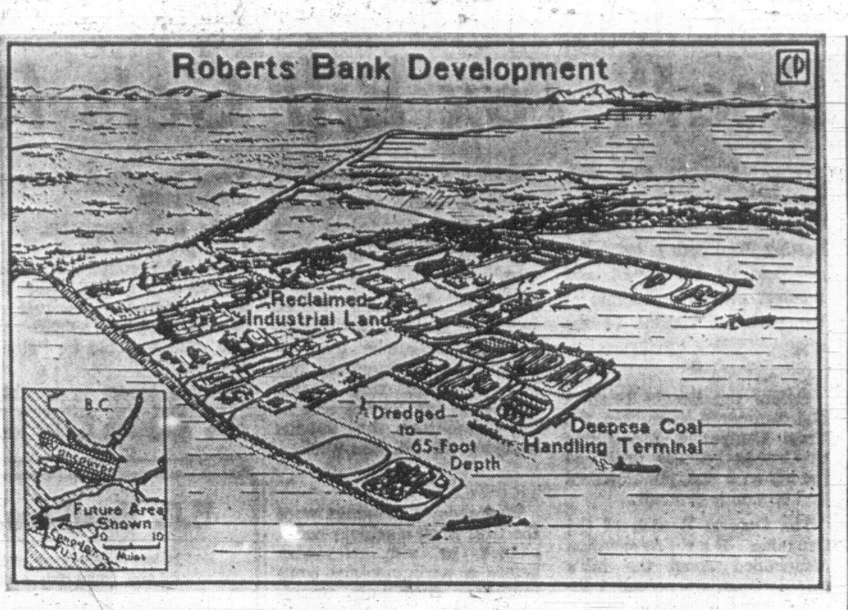
Roberts Bank engineers hope to load the coal aboard the bulk carriers at a rate of 10,000 tons an hour.

By 1970, with the Roberts Bank terminal in full swing, 3.5 million tons of coal a year will be moving out of Vancouver.

From 1965 to 1985, export of bulk products, principally grain, potash, sulphur and coal, is forecast to rise to 23 million tons a year from 3 million.

Roberts Bank has been the focal point of a number of controversies.

The federal and provincial governments fought a jurisdictional battle over the project, then worked out a compromise that allowed both sides to participate.



ONE VERSION of what Roberts Bank port may become is shown in sketch depicting three phases, three massive land extensions into the Gulf of Georgia. Only a small 50-acre site has been finished, enough to start the export coal program, on its dredged foundation three miles offshore. All berths of ultimate project will be capable of docking deep-draught vessels. (CP Photomap.)

Strauss Hints of Mark Revaluation Stronger

By NORMAN CROSSLAND
The Manchester Guardian

BONN — West German Finance Minister Franz Joseph Strauss has been spreading the word recently that he accepts the possibility of a revaluation of the German deutschemark.

In Munich Monday and to the Foreign Press Association in Bonn Tuesday, Strauss said that although the government would not revalue alone, it would be prepared to talk about a multilateral realignment of currency exchange rates with other countries.

The West German economy, Strauss added, should not have to face the constant possibility of revaluation while some of Germany's allies frequently practice no currency discipline at all, but passively accepted an annual drop in the real value of their money of 4 per cent.

If revaluation did come it would be by between 8 and 10 per cent, Strauss said he believed.

But if the government were to raise the mark unilaterally by 8 per cent, he said, German industry would be hit to the extent that it would need about $1 billion in "hidden subsidies."

Just as it did last November during the international monetary crisis, the West German government would continue to resist pressure to revalue alone, the finance minister insisted. In fact, he said, Bonn's attitude last fall had paid off since it had forced other countries to take fresh efforts to master their economic difficulties.

In Geneva, financial experts said Strauss' public recognition that revaluation of the mark may come will attract more speculative money into West Germany.

The experts also believe that although the finance minister's pronouncements must be seen in the light of the German election campaign, they discount suggestions that he is reflecting secret conversations between governments on a general realignment of currencies.

According to these sources, there are no formal consultations under way to see whether an organized change in currency parities—which would primarily involve the franc and the mark—is now possible.

For one thing, it is believed that the present interim French government does not wish to engage in such far-reaching policy discussions—especially since a devaluation of the franc, whether or not it is part of a general change in parties, might well endanger the Gaullist majority in the coming elections.

New Imperial

New Imperial Mines Ltd. reported earnings for the three months ended March 31, 1969, at $634,796, an increase of 10 cents a share. There was a net loss of $106,825 on the company's operations in the corresponding quarter last year.

Panco Poultry

Federal Grain Ltd. says a majority of shareholders of Panco Poultry Ltd., Vancouver, have accepted Federal's offer to purchase control of Panco.

Federal's offer of $29.50 for all common shares and $59 for each preferred share will now be made to all Panco shareholders. Ted Cohen, Panco president, was made vice-president of Federal Grain Ltd.

Canron Ltd.

Canron Ltd. had net earnings for the first quarter ended March 31 of $267,000 or 10 cents a share, down from $744,000 or 29 cents for the corresponding 1968 period.

The company said reduced earnings were caused partly by "drastic reduction in municipal funds to purchase iron and concrete water pipe.

CIL Jump

Consolidated net income for Canadian Industries Ltd. and its subsidiary companies was $2.4 million or 24 cents a share in the first quarter compared with $422,000 or four cents in the corresponding period in 1968, on sales of $78 million, up 16 per cent.

President Leonard Hynes said in the quarterly report to shareholders ,that earnings in the three-month period were comparable to the levels achieved in 1966 and 1967 and showed a sharp increase from 1968 when income was depressed because of high costs associated with the company's Lambton Works and a loss in Millhaven Fibres Ltd.

Du Pont

Du Pont of Canada Ltd. reports net earnings for the three-month period ended March 31 of $5.6 million or 71 cents a share, up from $2.3 million or 29 cents for the corresponding period in 1968.

Earnings included a non-recurring gain of $3 million from the sale of the company's assets in Augusta Natural Gas Ltd. to Northern and Central Gas Corp. Ltd.

Our old name didn't fit, so we picked a new one...

KAISER RESOURCES LTD.

The Kaiser Companies have gained worldwide experience in the development of resources such as coal, iron ore, bauxite, nickel, limestone and many other raw materials. Because of this experience, and because the name Kaiser Coal did not truly reflect our capabilities and enthusiasm, we've changed our name to Kaiser Resources Ltd.

Not that we didn't enjoy an exciting first year as Kaiser Coal. In early 1968, we signed a contract with the Japanese steel industry for the export of more than 45 million long tons of British Columbia coal, over the next 15 years. Since then, contracts have been signed for substantial additional shipments of coal to Japan.

This new export business for Canada was made possible by the cooperation and encouragement of many groups in Canada, including both the British Columbia government and the Federal government—but without subvention or subsidy of any kind. As a result of these combined efforts, the following actions are taking place:

Total direct investment necessary to build the new mine, railroad and port facilities needed to meet these commitments, has been estimated at more than $150 million of expenditures by Kaiser, the railroads and others involved in the venture.

Some 800 Canadian construction workers are building our new mining facilities in the East Kootenay Mountains near Fernie, B.C. Annual payroll for these workers, along with our 625 current coal production employees, exceeds $11 million.

By the time major shipments are started in 1970, 800 full-time employees will be provided steady employment in producing the coal with an annual payroll estimated at $7 million.

Major changes and improvements in housing, community and living conditions have already been made in the communities of Michel, Natal, and Sparwood, B.C.

We already have plans underway for a full-scale program for the reclamation of areas involved in surface mining. As part of our conservation efforts, we have established a scholarship program for research at the University of British Columbia.

A major program is underway to develop better methods of underground mining, including hydraulic and longwall mining, under safe and clean conditions. These new techniques could greatly extend the reserves of mineable coal.

Early next year, the Canadian Pacific Railway will be running round-the-clock unit-train operations to haul coal from the mine to a new superport being built at Roberts Bank near Vancouver. This will be one of the most efficient railroad operations in the entire world and Roberts Bank will provide North America's finest bulk handling port, capable of loading the mammoth superships needed to transport the coal to Japan.

We feel fortunate to be participating in this exciting project. The whole venture should prove to be a source of tremendous revenue to Canada. We also feel that there are many other growth opportunities to match the skills of the Canadian people with available resources and, as Kaiser Resources Ltd., we are building an organization of Canadians to meet these opportunities. Our worldwide experience has shown us that the development of resources can make a substantial contribution to the welfare of the people of the countries where the raw materials are produced. Wherever economically possible these products are processed in the countries where they are mined.

The Kaiser Companies have always been guided by two maxims. They may seem merely old-fashioned platitudes to others; but they have worked for us time and time again. The first is: "Find a Need and Fill It." As our world grows smaller, its needs grow larger. We feel confident that working with the resources and people of this country, we can compete in the global markets of tomorrow and help Canada to grow and prosper.

The second Kaiser maxim is: "Together We Build."

THE ACCOUNTANT'S ADVICE

Squandered Space Defeats Object Of Waste-Not, Want-Not Living

By EDGAR A. DOWNEY, C.A.

(This a service provided by the Times and by the Institute of Chartered Accountants of British Columbia.)

Storage space is a precious commodity which is often squandered with careless abandon.

The male view that the woman who has noting to wear also complains of too little closet space is a foolish truth which applies in so many other situations.

Just take a quick look into your own desk, or cupboard, or workshop area. Probably a quarter of the stored goods have not been used for years and should be relegated to the basement or more likely the garbage dump.

Most of us have been taught so well to abhor waste that it is difficult to throw things away. So we store junk and, consequently, commit the very sin we meant to avoid. We waste space.

The cost of mis-used storage areas is one of the hidden expenses in many businesses and households. But the cost does not end there.

The waste of time and frustration of effort which is caused by hunting for needed supplies among a pile of pack-rat junk is even more constly.

It is futile to merely tidy up the space. Re-arrangement of old junk into neat piles will produce nothing more than a temporarily tidy appearance. The usleless materials must be removed and disposed of, not jut put to one side to creep back to where they were.

The same problem arises with almost every facet of business. Working procedures which have been going on for years are often nothing more than usleless rituals.

The fact that the work has the appearance of being most industrious does not necessarily mean that it has any productive result.

Too often a business falls into a habit of producing a monthly report because one day in the past the reported information was required. Then, as time goes on, additional information becomes added until a most voluminous document is prepared every month. It may even be wrapped in a fancy binder and look most impressive but, if no one reads it and, even more importnatly, takes some specific action based upon the report, then the whole effort has been wasted.

It takes time to clean out wasted space and even more time to clean out wasted work. And it requires strong determination to execute the decisive action. That is exactly what being an executive means and the responsibility lies squarely upon the shoulders of every business manager to ensure that decisions are carried into action.

CANADIAN SYSTEM HANGS IN BALANCE

VANCOUVER (CP)—Canada's development will be undermined unless inflation is attacked and controlled, Stanley E. Nixon of Montreal, president of the Investment Dealers Association of Canada, said Wednesday.

He said in an interview the bulk of capital raised for development of industry as well as for social projects is in fixed income securities like bonds and mortgages.

The erosion of purchasing power of money which has caused interest rates to rise has steadily diminished the return on these securities.

"If the instrument becomes unpopular, you undermine the whole process of capital development," he said.

Nixon said Canada has adopted the attack of the U.S. on inflation—tax increases, reduced spending and inducement of restraint through control of the money supply "and it is imperative that we do a good job."

"If the U.S. succeeds—and we hope they will persist—we must have put ourselves in position to benefit. We all know that our economy is tied to theirs."

Nixon was in Vancouver on the association's annual presdiential visit.

Death Tax Bill Gets Roughing

OTTAWA (CP)—The government's bill to increase death taxes took a public beating Wednesday from the professionals who draft and manage estates and some of the potential victims of the tax.

•

Before the Senate banking and commerce committee, the Trust Companies Association of Canada roundly criticized the bill on social, philosophical and economic grounds.

The Ontario Branch of the Canadian Bar Association complained about the bill's complexities, its potential inequities and alleged lapses.

The Canadian Construction Association said its members would be prime victims and one of them pleaded to "put some sense into this legislation."

The bill to reform estate and gift taxes, passed after some modifications under pressure in the Commons, has had a rough ride during debate in the Senate and in the committee's first session studying the bill last week.

•

Wednesday's meetings were the first when outsiders had a chance to air grievances before a parliamentary committee, although many organizations had protested privately to Finance Minister Edgar Benson and his departmental staff.

The trust companies, in a brief presented by E. F. K. Nelson of Toronto, association executive director, said the sharply-increased tax rate on estates between $80,000 and $1,5 million would be "objectionable."

"There seems to be little doubt that the existence of many successful family businesses, including farms and ranches, would be seriously endangered . . ."

•

Mark Stein of Montreal, president of the construction association, said builders would be hard hit because most have medium-sized family businesses with a few liquid assets to meet any tax if they wished to will the business to children.

Inflation Fighters Disturbed

WASHINGTON (WP) — Nixon adminsitration officials, fighting the battle of inflation, have been worrying for the past few weeks over a mystifying April "bulge" in the money supply — a trend that seems to run counter to announced Federal Reserve Board policy.

An unofficial but reliable calculation is that the money supply (currency plus checking accounts) will show an annual rate of change of more than 10 per cent for April, compared with March.

Officials label this jump-up an "aberration" and say there are signs that things are coming back to normal.

Officials stress, moreover, that weekly or monthly changes in the big monetary aggregates, like bank credit or the money supply are not necessarily significant. But lately there has been more attention paid to money supply — especially the desirability of avoiding big swings.

For example, in a speech on Tuesday, economic council member Herbert Stein suggested that "with the change in monetary conditions in late 1968, a further slowing down of the growth of demand can be expected."

UNEASINESS

Thus, some officials admit they have been uneasy about the April results, to the extent that they are known.

A 10 per cent increase in the average annual rate of growth for April is a stunning departure from the result in the first quarter, now estimated at a 1.9 per cent gain.

That reduction to 1.9 per cent in the growth of the money supply from the 7.6 per cent rate of the fourth quarter of 1968 was taken by government officials as the best sign that the FED's restrictive policies were taking real effect.

Biggest jump in April came in the week ending Apirl 9, when the money supply rose to a daily average of $198 billion, a gain of almost $3 billion from $195.1 billion the previous week.

A London Life profile

Air traffic controller

Doug Buchanan talks about his work at Dorval airport, and how his London Life plan provides protection, guaranteed savings and a good investment.

1. Doug Buchanan works in the control centre of Montreal's busy international airport.

"At peak periods each controller handles between 8 and 12 aircraft all at the same time. That means you could be responsible for more than 1,000 lives. It can become pretty nerve-racking but you have to remain calm.

"When I get home I just want to relax. That's why I'm sold on my London Life plan. Apart from protecting my family, it provides me with a ready-made program of savings and investment."

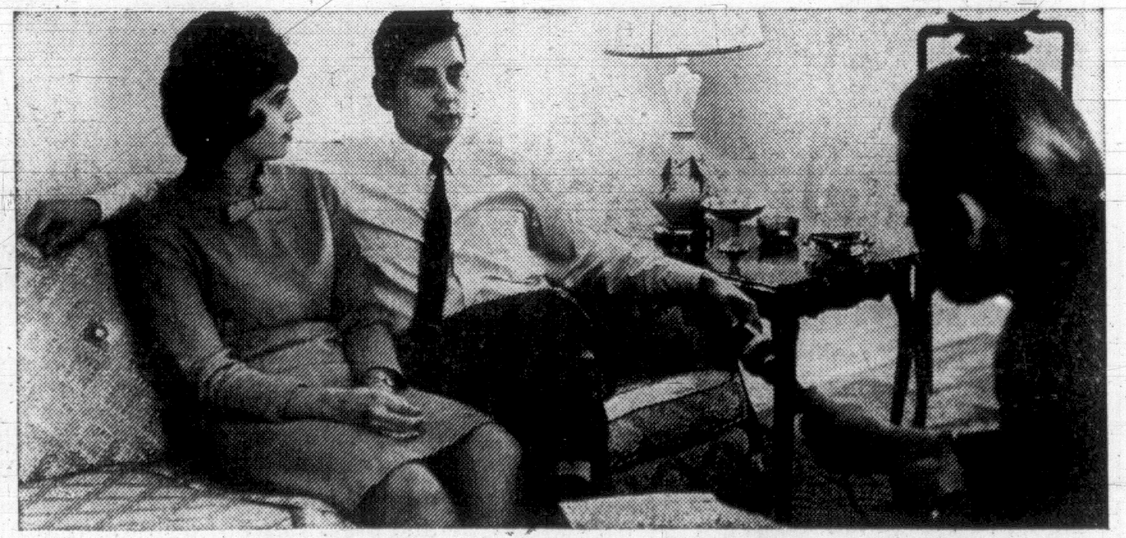
Doug has $45,000 of London Life insurance: 4 Jubilee life premiums to 65 policies purchased between ages 23 and 28. His total monthly premium is $64.47. These policies have guaranteed cash values that increase year by year.

They will be completely paid for when he reaches 65. At this age he may keep his policies, providing $45,000 of guaranteed protection, or he may choose to (1) take out $30,883 in cash plus his accumulated dividends—this will total far more than he paid in, or (2) arrange for a regular income for a specific number of years.

2. "There are 19 of us on each shift. We control about 500 square miles of air space. Our job is to make sure airplanes get down safely. There's radar to help us. Generally, we start speaking to pilots when they're 200 miles away."

Doug went on to tell us another reason why he's happy with his London Life plan: "The policies are excellent collateral. When we wanted to buy furniture, I took them to the bank manager and he said, 'I'll lend you all the money you need.' He gave me a favorable interest rate, too!"

NOTE: Photos of Control Centre were taken after midnight when there was little activity.



3. "A few years ago, Johanne and I went to the Caribbean. When we got back, we decided that when I retire, we want to travel all over the world.

"My London Life plan is going to help me do just that. What better return could you get for money that's protecting your family into the bargain?"

London Life insurance can be tailored to your own personal needs and goals, too. That's why we call it the flexible one.

To find out more about our Jubilee policies, talk to a Company representative. And send for your free copy of the handbook "A look into life insurance." Write to: Dept. 300C, London Life Insurance Company, 255 Dufferin Avenue, London, Ontario.

Student Union Plans Meet Here

The B.C. union of Students will hold a three-day conference starting Friday at the University of Victoria.

Membership in BCUS, which was formed late in 1968, now includes eight post-secondary institutions: the four universities, three regional colleges and the B.C. Institute of Technology.

UVic student president Norman Wright said Wednesday the group was set up primarily to create a research pool on which to base policies for higher education.

"How do you remain politically active and politically credible? By staring the problems in terms of issues, not in terms of political parties."

He said BCUS would aim at "the solving of problems, not the creating of issues."

The eight schools represent 40,000 potential BCUS members. With a 20-cent per capita levy, Wright estimated the organization would have $8,000 on which to conduct research into problems relating to higher education in B.C.

Questions such as financing of higher education, free tuition and student representation would be scrutinized by BCUS.

Wright said the group would also be in a position to prepare a brief for the royal commission investigating liquor laws, probably to advocate lowering the legal drinking age from 21 to 18.

The conference will open Friday afternoon in the student union building and will run until Sunday.

EARLY PHOTOS of Prince Albert, Queen Victoria's consort, are examined by 13-year-old Howard Slater, 4267 Gordon Head Road.

Queen Victoria Display Makes Successful Debut

Photographs illustrating all phases of Queen Victoria's life from childhood to the close of her 60-year reign are now on show at Victoria Art Gallery.

The exhibition was opened Wednesday night by Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson and drew one of the largest crowds ever seen in the gallery.

The lieutenant-governor praised the efforts of Prof. Sydney Jackman of the University of Victoria who conceived and organized the show. He had suggested to Mayor Hugh Stephen that the city should take part in sponsoring the exhibition in honor of the 150th anniversary of Queen Victoria's birth on May 24.

MANY LETTERS

Hundreds of letters and a trip to London were required to complete the exhibition. It includes photos and prints from the personal collections of Queen Elizabeth, Queen Juliana of the Netherlands, King Baudoin of Belgium, Earl Mountbatten, Princess Alice and the Dukes of Fife and Buccleuch.

"We want to keep the gallery as informal as possible, so that as many people as possible feel free to come and enjoy our shows," said gallery director Colin Graham.

The program cover was designed by University of Victoria artist Frank Edmonds, and shows Queen Victoria riding what is apparently a mule or a donkey.

The gallery is staging a concurrent exhibition of British silverware drawn from local collections. It was assembled for the show by Mr. and Mrs. J. Gardiner Austin.

Both exhibitions continue until May 25.

It's Boring Downtown, Charlie Finds

OTTAWA (CP)—A lot of talking bores Charlie.

Like Wednesday night. He was perched in a tree at a downtown intersection when large crowds gathered to talk and stare.

But after an hour, Charlie, a talking parrot, had enough.

He obligingly stepped on a ladder held up by two Humane Society officers and was taken from his perch.

Charlie's owner, Carl Corbeau, said the bird had flown out an open window.

Charlie's been chattering and whistling at pretty girls for three years now, but going out to meet them is something new, Mr. Corbeau said.

No Change Seen In U.S. Policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nixon administration strategists say the latest Peking developments show China is still a long way from a friendly entry into the community of nations.

The Washington assessment includes a study of the 24,000-word report delivered by Deputy Chairman Lin Piao to the recently-concluded Chinese Communist party congress. Lin Piao, designated successor to Chairman Mao Tse-tung, said among other things:

"The truth that 'political power grows out of the barrel of a gun' is being grasped by ever broader masses of the oppressed people and nations."

Mao's heir apparent denounced both "U.S. imperialism and Soviet revisionist social-imperialism" and praised "the national liberation movement" in "armed struggles of the people" ranging from South Vietnam to Palestine, Africa and Latin America.

OFFICIALS UNIDENTIFIED

These statements were noted at a state department briefing Wednesday on United States policy toward China and the Soviet Union. Officials, who spoke under rules barring indentification by name, gave the briefing to some 400 business executives.

Although the Nixon administration says it is trying to improve relations with all Communist countries, including China, the officials said Peking's posture makes it appear that a long road lies ahead.

The Soviets, on the other hand, have shown many signs of wanting to improve their relations with Western countries in general and the United States in particular, the officials said.

They added that there is no profit in the United States trying to exploit the split between the Soviet Union and China. Nor should the United States choose sides in the clash between the two Communist arch-rivals. Rather, Washington should seek to improve its relations with both.

It's 11:30 Ladies And Gentlemen

VANCOUVER (CP) — York Hotel owner Leonard Johnson, 72, Wednesday night bought a few rounds for the regular customers in the hotel's beer parlor—"and bawled doing it" — because demolition of the 23-year-old establishment starts today.

The 74-room York, its six-ball chandelier in the lobby and a framed rosette from the tomb of some long-dead Duke of York come under the wrecker's ball to make way for a multi-million dollar hotel and department store complex.

Off-duty policemen, beer parlor waiters who used to work at the York, other hotel managers, reporters and others of Mr. Johnson's "nice bunch of people" packed the place for one last beer on the house and a word with the owner.

Formula Drafted for China Talks

OTTAWA (CP) — Highly-placed sources disclose that Canada acted as a messenger for the United States in this country's fruitless peace-feeler contacts with North Vietnam in 1966-67.

They emphasize that this is not the case in contacts Canada now is making with Communist China on the question of diplomatic recognition.

A Canadian diplomat who played a part in establishing the Washington-Hanoi contact may play a key role in the talks with Red China, scheduled to start in two or three weeks in Stockholm.

He is Blair Seaborn, head of the external affairs department's Far East division and former senior Canadian representative on the International Control Commission in Vietnam.

Mr. Seaborn now is visiting Canadian missions in Southeast Asia and is scheduled to return here May 7. The Canada-China talks in Stockholm will be carefully managed from here with an Ottawa official moving frequently between the two capitals to get and carry out detailed government instructions.

This is the third time that Canada has seriously considered recognition of Red China.

But it is the first time that the consideration has got down to talks. The previous occasions were in 1949 immediately after the Communist victory in China and soon after the 1950-53 Korean War in which China intervened against the United Nations.

For many years, there was an unwritten policy here that Canadian recognition should be so timed as to encourage the U.S. to follow suit in due course.

This is still a hoped-for result but incidental to the present Canadian initiative.

There have been repeated suggestions here and in other capitals that, in its talks with China, Canada will be carrying messages for the U.S.

Officials discount the suggestions. They say the objective of the negotiations is the obvious one—an exchange of diplomatic missions between Ottawa and Peking.

Message-carrying between Hanoi and Washington proved awkward and sometimes embarrassing for Canada, sources say.

For one thing, Canada continued to support the basic purposes of American policy in Vietnam but could not say so for fear of destroying its channel to Hanoi, established through Canadian membership on the International Control Commission, now nearly 15 years old.

Canada could not speak out against the Vittnamese Communists lest it prejudice its contact in Hanoi.

Moreover, the U.S. never seemed very grateful for Canada's messenger service.

Special Canadian envoy Chester Ronning made two visits to Hanoi in 1966. A few weeks after his second visit and subsequent briefing of high U.S. officials, the Americans resumed the bombing of Hanoi and Haiphong.

For his part, Mr. Ronning was publicly critical of the U.S. bombing.

However, informants say, the U.S. was still anxious that Canada keep the channel to Hanoi open. It still is, though it became redundant when the U.S. and North Vietnam began their direct talks in Paris last year.

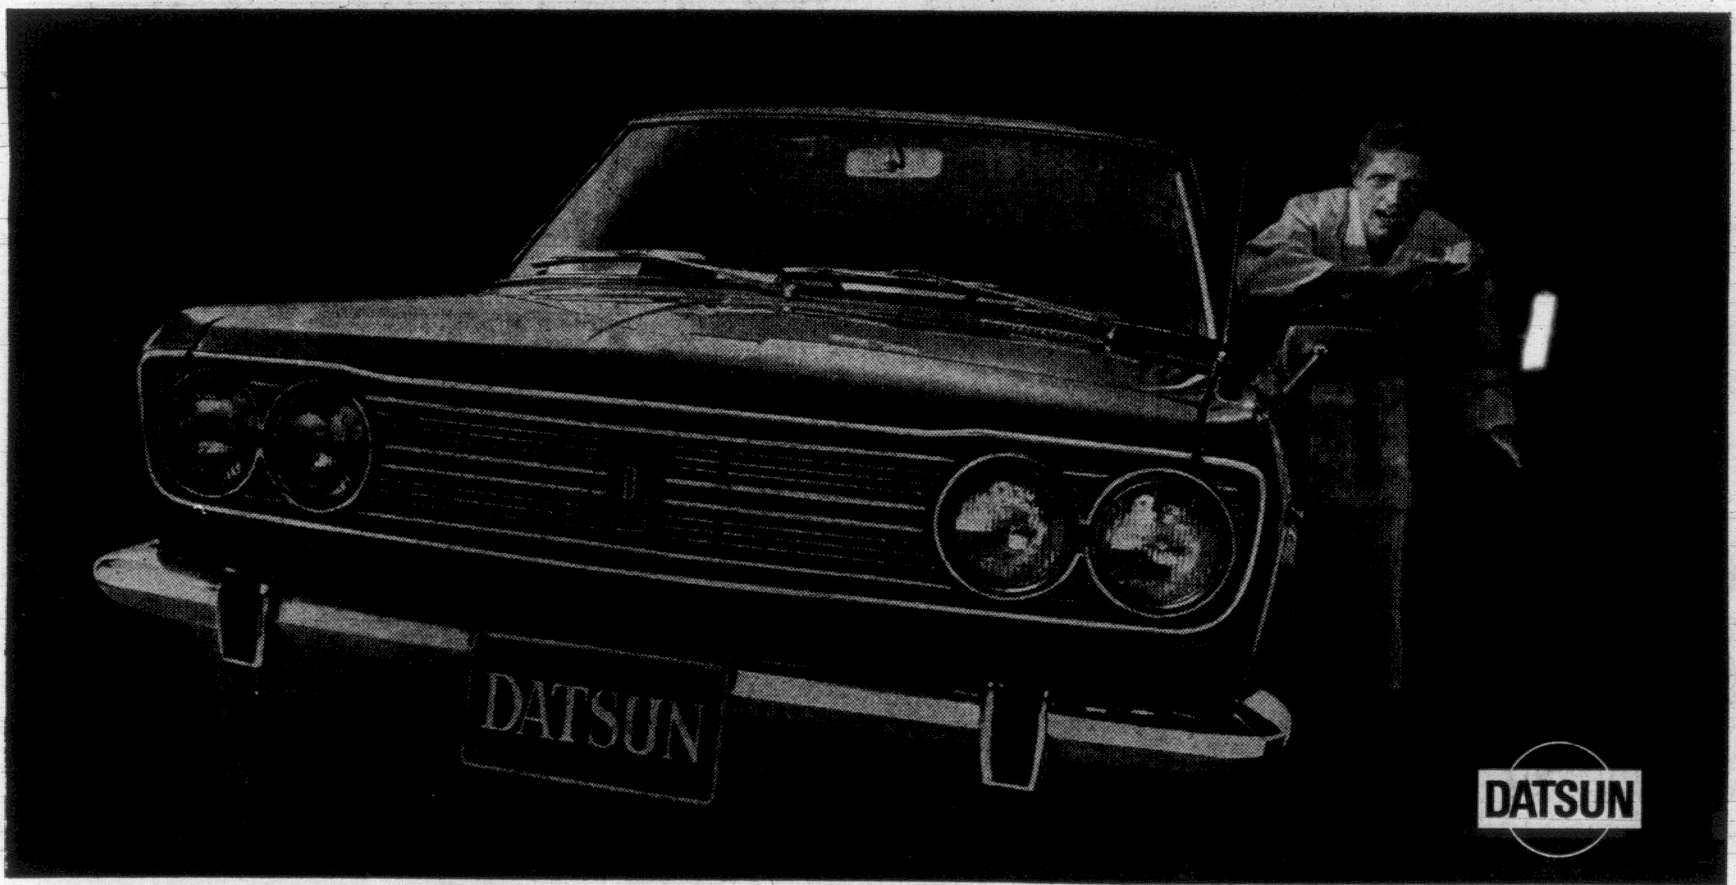
Another great idea in the art of self defence



Datsun 1600 is the safest economy car you can buy. It's the best idea in the art of self defence since judo and karate!

Choose from three models: a sporty 2-door sedan, deluxe 4-door sedan or wagon. All Datsun 1600s have strong unitized construction bodies with specially designed impact-absorbing panels to protect passengers. The doors have burst-proof locks. The engine is up front to give extra protection and there are many other safety features including disc brakes and a collapsible steering column.

The sedans have an all-independent, deep-coil suspension system that makes them amazingly nimble, gives a smooth, level ride over the roughest roads, and ease of handling.

In its price class, only Datsun 1600 gives you a 96 hp overhead cam engine that's good for 100 mph and 30-35 miles per gallon economy.

It has an all synchro 4-on-the-floor or optional 3-speed automatic.

In the comfort department you get "windows up" fresh air ventilation, a big heater/defroster, contoured bucket seats and many other no-cost extras.

Datsuns are great value for the money and they are backed by a network of more than 160 Datsun dealers coast-to-coast in Canada and over $1,000,000 in parts.

Test drive the new Datsun 1600 at your local dealer soon—and practice self defence!

'Piecemeal Victory' Aim of Communists

WASHINGTON (WP) — A newly captured Communist political document declares that the aim in Vietnam this year is "limited" or "piecemeal victory" designed to push the Nixon administration "in our direction" at the Paris peace talks.

The document, captured this month, is an instruction to political cadres from the central office for South Vietnam, the key headquarters for the National Liberation Front (Viet Cong). It is believed to reflect the views of Hanoi, which the United States believes controls the front.

It was written about a month or six weeks ago, and a long summary was rushed to Washington from Saigon because it was regarded as the first important evidence of current Communist strategy.

The "purpose of the summer offensive," which the United States is expecting in May or June," is to force the Americans to adopt a policy in our direction," the document states.

But the "summer phase" of the Communists' 1969 campaign is described as "not the decisive phase." the document warns the political cadres not to expect "total victory" because the current aim is "limited" or "piecemeal victory" with hopes for "decisive victory" tied to a 1969-70 "winter-spring" campaign.

War Focus Shifts To Border Areas

SAIGON (AP) — The focus of the Vietnam war appeared today to be shifting to border areas where North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops are in a more advantageous position.

Military spokesmen reported combined forces troops killed 186 North Vietnamese in seven clashes, and six of them were along the Cambodian border northwest of Saigon or just below the eastern flank of the demilitarized zone.

North Vietnamese gunners firing from inside the DMZ and from near the Laotian border also made heavy mortar attacks on American troops during the night. The United States command said casualties were light but some Americans were killed or wounded.

The war maps now appear to be just as they were at the end of last year, with the bulk of the North Vietnamese troops concentrated again along the Cambodian and Laotian borders.

U.S. officers say these forces pulled back in recent weeks after losing more than 34,000 dead in the spring offensive launched Feb. 23. Staff officers believe the offensive has proven a failure and that the Communist command now is planning new strategy—possibly another offensive in the summer—aimed at inflicting more American casualties.

Negroes Strive To Break Away From Car Union

DETROIT (AP) — A group of black militants employed in the auto industry is challenging the United Auto Workers claim to represent Negro workers as well as white. It is also making demands on auto companies.

The breakaway drive was first aimed primarily at Chrysler Corp. plants in the Detroit area, but Ford Motor Co's Mahwah, N.J., plant was added to the list last week.

Supported by groups of demonstrators from Students for a Democratic Society and the Black Panthers, Mahwah Negro workers walked off their jobs demanding recognition of their group, United Black Brothers, as the bargaining agent for members of their race.

The group also demanded an end to what its leaders described as racial discrimination and disputed the effectiveness of the industry's efforts to hire the hard-core unemployed.

The movement first surfaced last year at the Dodge main assembly plant in Hamtramck when about 500 Negroes belonging to a group called the Dodge Revolutionary Union Movement—DRUM—walked off their jobs in demand for more supervisory jobs for blacks.

DRUM and its up-to-now inactive counterparts at General Motors and Ford plants in the Detroit area—GRUM and FRUM—are on the warpath against the UAW as well as the companies.

Pickets outside the Chrysler Hamtramck plant carried such signs as "Behead the redhead," a reference to red-hair UAW President Walter Reuther.

W. GERMANS OUTLAW PLANNED NAZI UNION

BONN (AP) — The West German interior ministry announced Wednesday a ban on former members of the Nazi party planning to form a federation of former National Socialists.

A ministry spokesman said the ban had been imposed under articles of West German basic law forbidding organizations clashing with the constitution.

Defence Chief Orders Probe

WASHINGTON (WP) — Defence Secretary Melvin Laird Wednesday expressed his "concern" over the costly C-5A transport and ordered his air force chief to make a "thorough" review of the multi-million-dollar affair.

In the wake of disclosures the air force falsified reports on the costs of the big plane, Laird said:

"I am determined to ensure full and accurate information on C-5A procurement, and all other procurement matters, is given to the Congress and to the public promptly. I also am determined to ensure past mistakes in the procurement of this transport aircraft will not be repeated."

In his three-paragraph statement, Laird pointedly drew attention to the fact he has already named a replacement for Air Force Assistant Secretary Robert H. Charles.

Charles, the designer of the C-5A contract, was named on Tuesday as one source of orders to delete from air force documents data on the huge cost overruns sustained by Lockheed Aircraft Corp.

Bus Strike Vote

VANCOUVER (CP)—Bus drivers, clerks and baggage men employed by Pacific Stage Lines are to vote during the weekend on whether to strike to back contract demands. Talks under mediation officer Clark Gilmour broke off recently and an official of the Amalgamated Transit Union declined to disclose details of the dispute until after the weekend vote by the 160 employees.

Children Cause $2,500 Blaze

A fire started by children playing with matches caused an estimated $2,500 damage to a house at 501 Obed Wednesday night.

The fire started in the upstairs bedroom of the home owned by George W. Triplett. It also damaged an adjoining hallway.

Saanich fire department took 20 minutes to extinguish the blaze.

Two juveniles playing with matches on a bed were blamed for the fire. The house is insured.

VICTORIA, B.C., THURSDAY, MAY 1, 1969 —PAGE 13

Arthur Mayse

If you have an ear for a tune, you may have caught echoes of a sinister refrain in two pronouncements that made the news this week. The melody, revived by a highly-placed Canadian churchman and a British health officer, goes under various titles. Call it "Survival of the Fittest," or if you prefer the Orwellian to the Hitlerian version, "Big Brother Is Watching You".

I'm sure that United Church moderator Dr. Robert McLure speaks from honest conviction when he urges the compulsory sterilization of those judged unfit to conceive or rear children. Also, there's no reason to doubt that Dr. Kenneth Vickery isn't sure of his rightness when he would reduce hospital overcrowding by having the state deny medical aid to Britons over 80 years old.

On the surface, both viewpoints make considerable sense. The one would reduce the welfare drain, while the other would go a long way toward freeing hospitals, doctors and nurses of their overload.

I don't think, however, that we can afford to let the seeming logic of these proposals dazzle us. Dr. McLure would give unto the state the highly dangerous right of eugenic selection. And what Dr. Vickery advocates is a refined and legalized form of murder.

★

Each doctrine raises this question, among others: just how much control can we safely allow the state over the lives of those it governs?

We have gone pretty far in that direction already. There isn't much we can do today without coming up against a regulation great or small imposed by government at its various levels.

But at least, we have been free of state attempts to improve the breed by decreeing who shall conceive and who shall not.

As an individual, I hold no brief for parents who neglect their children, or who run up far larger familes than they can support. We've been warned, too, of the perils of over-population to the point where living-space and food supply will be insufficient.

Surely, though, the answer in each instance lies elsewhere than in the compulsion that Dr. McLure favors.

Education, improved living conditions for those who bitterly need them — these methods, while unspectacular, are the ones that will eventually turn up solutions. So are resource study and improvement.

Increasingly, perhaps, another method of matching population to resources may be the voluntary sterilization that Dr. McLure urges on over-fecund but nice people.

But compulsory sterilization for "those" on whom society frowns or can provide no useful place is an invasion of human rights, and we'd be wise to regard it as such.

★

According to the lore of the north, the old and helpless in a primitive Eskimo band might go out to die alone by their own request.

Medical health officer Vickery, I suggest, would have his people go beyond the primitive to the utterly savage in their treatment of their aged.

What kind of morality is this that would set an arbitrary limit beyond which a man or woman is not worth saving?

The over-80's get sick, or break a hip, and with medical aid, they may recover. Or they may become chronic cases, beyond cure. So, at times, do the young and the middle-aged.

The answer here is not to outlaw them, but to provide sufficient hospitals to house them.

I think that eventually, we will provide the mercy of euthanasia, either by direct request or by permission of nearest kin, to the hopeless sufferers, the hurting human vegetable who is beyond all other easements.

But I can see no luck for any nation in either the invasion or the neglect of basic human rights. I don't take kindly to any doctrine that would have us take either road.

$10 DEPOSIT FOR TRAFFIC APPEALS

Beginning next month, motorists appealing a traffic violation report will have to put up a $10 deposit before they can get a hearing.

A cabinet order Wednesday proclaimed an amendment, adopted at the last session, to take effect June 1.

The order said the deposit will be returned to the motorist after the hearing if he won his appeal.

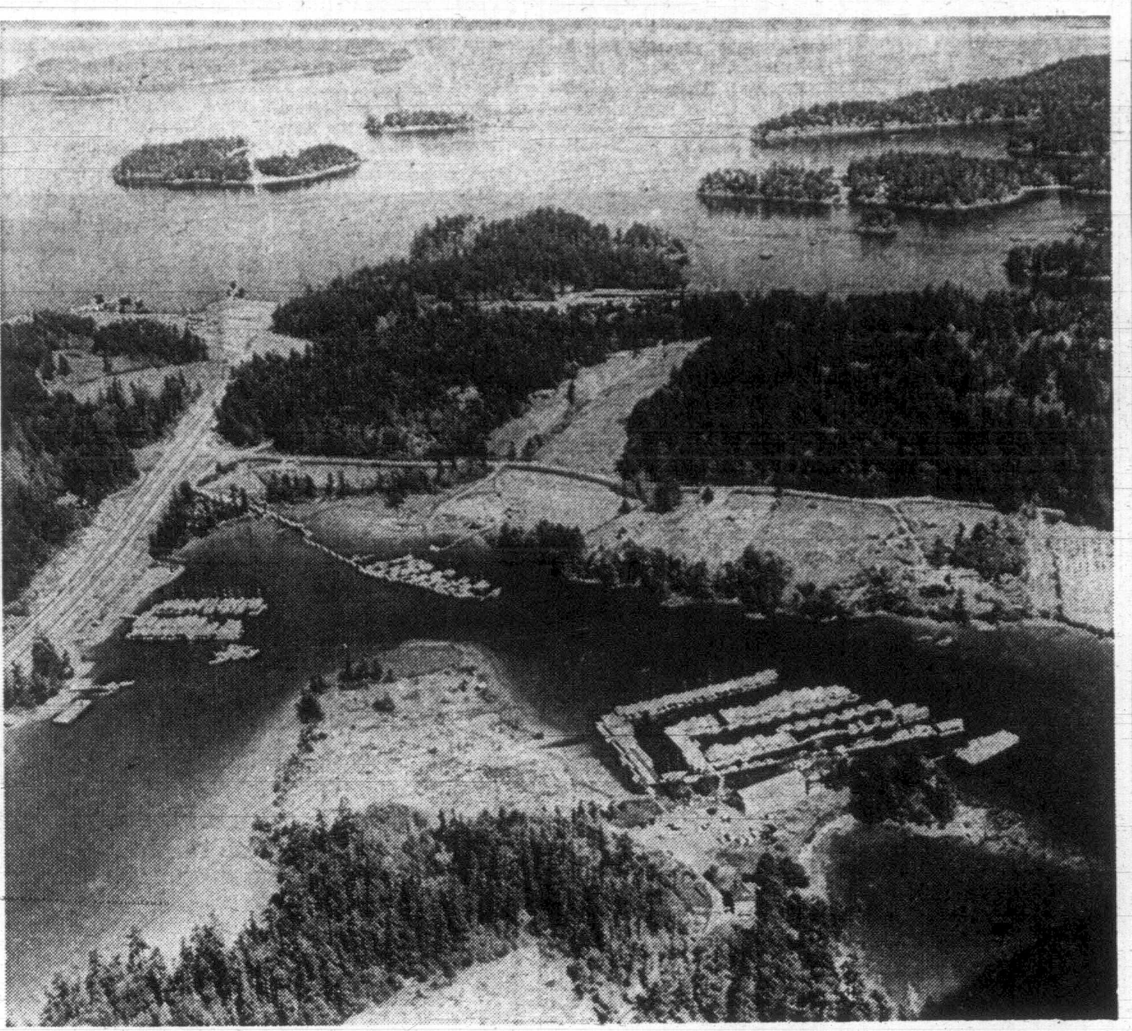
But if the violation report—and a subsequent demerit on his driving record—is confirmed then the $10 will be kept by the municipality to defray the cost of the hearing.

EXPAND SYSTEM

The system only applies to southern Vancouver Island at present but the government has indicated it likely will extend the no-fines demerit system to the rest of the province this year.

The deposit amendment was introduced after Greater Victoria civic leaders complained the provincial experiment with the no-fines system here was costing them large sums because they lost the revenue from fines but still had to provide the facilities for hearings.

The cabinet also proclaimed, beginning June 1, another amendment to the Motor Vehicles Act which requires doctors to inform authorities when a patient's medical condition makes him a dangerous driver.



SHELTERED WATERS of north end of Saanich Peninsula offer handy berthing for small boats but as fast as marinas open they are being filled. At left is Royal Victoria Yacht Club's Tsehum Harbor outstation, which has a waiting list. Smaller Westport Marina lies to the east. In right foreground is Clark Bros. Barely visible, top centre, is Canoe Cove Marina. Suitable inlets and coves are scarce and often breakwaters must be built to give necessary protection from winter seas.

'Full Houses' Stacking the Deck Against Prospective Boat Buyers

By PAT DUFOUR

Before you decide to go into debt for your first boat you'd better make certain you have somewhere to tie that precious piece of floating real estate.

The boating fraternity has a habit of spawning with the lustiness of tadpoles in the spring and local marinas appear unable to keep pace with this population explosion.

Even Oak Bay Marina, with its anchorage for between 500 and 600 boats, is fast reaching the saturation point.

Operator Bob Wright reports, "We have a few 12-foot spaces left, but that's about all." Expansion will be limited to 40 or 50 extra floats unless an appeal for additional breakwater protection is answered by the federal government.

Wright says the government will have to make hydrographic studies in order to find out whether further protection can be supplied.

Most of the berths at the marina are filled by sailboats, some of them an overflow from the Royal Victoria Yacht Club, whose facilities during the summer season are severely strained.

•

Conditions at other marinas are even less promising for the prospective boater.

Dennis Ashby of Clarke Bros. near Sidney says that all the marina's 200 berths are filled with local boats.

Peter Moore of Canoe Cove also reports a "full house" with a waiting list, particularly for boathouses.

"We still haven't had a chance to replace the 17 boathouses we lost in January's heavy snow fall. We berth about 250 and hope to build another 100 berths by next year."

He reports that many of the berths are taken by Vancouver boats, whose owners either cannot find berthing spots on the mainland, object to the "dirty conditions at their Coal Harbor and other spots," or choose Vancouver Island as a base because of lower costs and better cruising waters.

•

Steve Dickinson's Van Isle Marina has its 300 berths filled, as has Jim Woeswick's West Bay Marina with its 65 spots. Both are forced to turn visiting boats away when the season is at its peak.

Neither marina has immediate plans for expansion.

There is talk, however, that Westport marina at Swartz Bay (formerly Randales and now owned by a Vancouver company) is considering a $250,000 development program.

•

Figures in a report released this week by the city of Victoria's planning department economist, Colin Crisp, show that the squeeze has just begun.

The report was compiled in order to assess the possibility of expanding mooring facilities in Victoria's Inner Harbor.

Although it deals mainly with the expected increase of visiting boats in the years ahead, the report could be used as a yard-stick to estimate growth in the local area.

•

Last year 7,9400 American boats cleared customs at either Victoria, Sidney or Bedwell Harbor. In 1975 it is forecast that approximately 11,481 Washington boats will clear customs, and in 1985, 15,198. This does not take into consideration the many Canadian mainland boats, and those from California and Oregon which head for Victoria during the summer months.

At the present time the city has 20 slips in the Inner Harbor, and no shore services. When the Reid Centre is built at the foot of Fort Street it will provide a further 26 berths, most of them probably to be used by centre residents.

Crisp quotes the Acres Report's estimates that suggest an additional 100 berths will be required by downtown residents in 1981 . . . a 500 percent increase on available berthing.

Expansion will be limited through lack of space and fuelling will have to be loated elsewhere, either at a float further out in the harbor, or at an outlying side of the harbor.

•

Crisp explains that consideration of the expansion is urged by the need to coordinate waterfront facilities. "We don't want to see spot planning or run the risk of honky-tonk types of concessions going in. We want a sort of marine package."

John Di Castri, architect for the new $1 million CPR complex and marina to be built on Belleville Street by next year, reports that "between 50 and 60" berths are included in the plans. These will do little except help cope with the expected increase of boating tourists.

If the city decides to expand Inner Harbor facilities it will provide little relief for local boat owners. The extra berths will soon be chock-a-block with visiting boats during the summer months.

•

Marine Resorts Ltd. formed in April 1968, is gearing itself to deal with the boat explosion. Company officials met this week at the Bedwell Harbor Resort to discuss expansion plans.

Director Stan Lettner, announced the company's immediate program:

"We have berthing for 75 boats at Bedwll and intend to increase this to 200 or 250. We're increasing the lodge, putting in a banquet or convention room, and building new cottages.

"At Silva Bay (near Nanaimo) we'll build mooring for 80 to 90 boats, and at Secret Cove (on the Sechelt Peninsula) we'll be able to take about 100 boats in four to six weeks' time.

"Facilities will be expanded at Shoal Bay on Thurlow Island and Refuge Cove on Redonda Island. Docking will be available for 40 to 50 boats at April Point on Quadra Island."

•

Promising as these plans are, they bear little comfort for a new Victoria boat owner in search of a place to moor his boat near home . . .

. . . unless, like many Vancouverites, he elects to commute to a less-crowded anchorage in the Gulf Islands.

House Fire Deliberate

A $7,000 fire in a vacant house at 1010 Pentrelew Tuesday night was deliberately set, fire officials said today.

The blaze broke out in the upstairs of the building about 10 p.m. The house contains no furniture and the electricity is disconnected.

A fireman posted Wednesday night to guard the house while an investigation took place was removed this morning.

Officials are continuing their investigation today.

Oak Bay Taxes Up 8½ Per Cent

Oak Bay homewoners are faced with an 8½ per cent tax increase this year.

Council, in a post-midnight session, early today announced an increase of 5.1 mills over 1968.

The effect on the ratepayer who paid $400 taxes last year—this year he will pay $434.

The increased mill rate breaks down to an additional 2.91 mills for general purposes and debt, .21 mills for Oak Bay's share of district hospital costs and 1.98 mills increased school taxes.

'FINE TOOTH COMB'

Mayor Fred Hawes said council used "a fine tooth comb" in repeated budget inspections, cutting out many items in attempts to hold the line on taxes.

"Salary increases played an important part in adding to municipal costs, as they did in 1968." In both years the increase amounted to 1½ mills.

The total budget for Oak Bay, the cost of operating the municipality, remained at $2,470,832 when the five-hour budget session ended.

Mayor Hawes said one of the greatest problems in trying to hold taxes was that new assessment (new construction) in the municipality has averaged only $675,000 a year for the past five years.

He recalled that in his inaugural address he had pointed out the necessity to boost the assessment level.

One phase of municipal work approved in the budget is expected to assist new home development, a new drainage system affecting the Foul Bay Road-Oak Bay Avenue-Cadboro Bay Road areas.

DRAINAGE SYSTEM

The new drainage system will divert surface waters which now drain into the sanitary sewer system. The diversion will permit a greater capacity of sewer flow and make room for new development.

Taken out of the estimates was $50,000 for the second stage of Windsor Park pavilion.

Council agreed to follow the example of Victoria and Esquimalt and contribute $4 per capita based on 1968 population figures, to library purposes.

Y's Boy-Girl Week in Woods Features Unstructured Program

A new YM-YWCA program for teen-agers of both sexes may be expanded next year if it is successful this summer, youth director Douglas Dent said today.

The new co-ed program, catering to teens 15 to 17, will run June 27 to July 2, he said.

The session will be held in YM-YWCA facilities at Camp Thunderbird at Glinz Lake.

"The program will be fairly unstructured, although it will be kept under control," said Dent.

"We don't want parents to wonder: What's going on here?, and we don't want the kids to feel they're being led around by the noses."

The usual "Y" activities will be featured at the week-long camp—swimming, hiking, boating, archery, volleyball, badminton and crafts.

The camp, which will cost participants $40 for the week, is an attempt to bring more money in for the youth organization.

Renting the camp to other groups such as church youth clubs was one of the other ways considered, but the co-ed program was chosen as the most desirable.

If the camp is popular, it will be continued next year, perhaps expanding to two or three weeks, Dent said.

Building Ban Eased In Sidney

Treatment Plant Reason for Move

Building restrictions have been partly relaxed in Sidney by the British Columbia department of health.

The health department has approved permits for 60 lots in scattered parts of the town in view of the town's decision to install a primary sewage treatment.

It also indicated it would release 60 additional permits once a start is made on constructing a plant.

Last fall, B.C. health officials banned all future construction of buildings on unsewered lots until the town installed treatment facilities for its waste and improved its sewage system.

This was done in the interest of public health.

It brought new development to a standstill. Plans for constructing about 300 homes in new subdivisions had to be laid aside.

The ban also forced council to restrict construction of apartments.

THREE OUTFALLS

The town now discharges raw sewage from three outfalls into the sea. The sewage system is also badly in need of an overhauling, due mainly to the town's rapid growth in the past two years.

Council in January took steps to improve the system and in April launched a feasibility study to determine the best location for a treatment plant.

Mayor Arthur Freeman at the same time requested the health department to relax its building restrictions pending the construction of treatment facilities.

Observatory Changes To Summer Hours

The Dominion Astrophysical Observatory's visiting hours on Saturday nights will change to Daylight Saving Time starting Saturday.

Visiting hours will now be 9 to 11 p.m. and these hours will be effective until Sept. 6, when they will return to winter hours of 8 to 10 p.m.

DEFEND NAVY

Tub Admiral Calls Out Fleet Against CPR

By JOHN SLINGER

The Royal Canadian Navy can stop worrying. Nanaimo will defend it.

The Battle of the Atlantic will be a pale comparison after Nanaimo's ebullient Mayor Frank Ney sends his renowned bathtub fleet out to sink the CPR.

Well, not sink it exactly—make it backtrack.

The railway company, which operates a Nanaimo-Vancouver ferry and other ships and railway barges out of Nanaimo's downtown harbor, this week issued an order prohibiting outsiders from using the company's wharf.

WHARF UNSAFE

In a letter to the Nanaimo harbor commission, CPR said the wharf is unsafe for the general public and visiting ships will no longer be permitted to tie up there.

This cannot be allowed to happen, thought "Admiral" Ney, the man who introduced the world's biggest, noisiest and smuggest annual bathtub race a few years ago. The race has brought Nanaimo fame throughout world capitals and plumbing suppliers.

It can't happen because the visiting ships that use the wharf most are the ships of the Royal Canadian Navy on their occasional stops there.

If they can't park at the CPR wharf, the navy will have to go to the harbor's assembly wharf where they would be prey to falling loads of lumber, busy freighters and heaven knows what else, said Ney.

The whole matter "is quite serious from the point of view of liaison."

So the mayor has written a personal letter to N. R. Crump, chairman of the board of CPR, asking that the company change its mind.

Convention Hall Offer Final, CPR Tells City

The general manager of the Empress Hotel today issued a "guarantee" that CPR will not build a convention centre if the city turns down the proposal.

Louis J. Finimore made the statement in reply to Ald. Robert Baird's claim that if the city does not go ahead with the proposal, the CPR-owned hotel will build the centre on its own.

Baird is a leading opponent of the scheme that would see the $2.4 million centre built as an annex to the Empress.

"The offer is there," said Finimore in an interview, "and we'd be delighted to go along with it if it is acceptable to the city."

If it is not acceptable, it will not be built, he added.

CLARIFY POSITION

Finimore said his statement is not an attempt to put pressure on the city. It was made to clarify the hotel's position in light of some contrary statements being made.

"If the city doesn't build it, that's it as far as we're concerned. We think that we've spent enough money in Victoria for a while. The renovation of the Empress cost approximately $5 million and we've just committed ourselves to spending another $1 million in the Inner Harbor area."

This would be the last proposal for a Victoria convention centre by the CPR, he said.

MARINA, SHOPS

The hotel renovations—"Operation Teacup"—are nearing completion and CPR Wednesday announced plans to build a marina-shopping complex on 10 acres of wharf and land between Belleville Street and the company's Princess Marguerite ferry berth.

The convention centre proposal will be decided by public referendum later this year.

Finimore explained his company's position to a Victoria Visitors' Bureau meeting Wednesday. The bureau passed a resolution supporting the proposal.

The city would receive 75 cents of every convention dollar spent and the hotel 25 per cent, said Finimore.

CPR would pick up 25 per cent of operating losses and have exclusive catering rights. The city would be returned five per cent of gross food sales and 10 per cent of gross beverage sales.

OPERATE AT A PROFIT

Finimore estimated the centre would be operating at a profit within three or four years.

He said convention business would be more stable than the current tourist trade and said the centre would boost business at all Victoria hotels.

Of the 400 rooms at the Empress, Finimore said never more than half could be tied up for convention accommodation.

"That's why we feel that the city and other groups must take an interest in this venture. We are certainly not going to do it ourselves."

The Inner Harbor project is expected to be under construction shortly.

Pacific Undersea Gardens already are operating on the wharf and the Royal London Wax Museum is to move from its Crystal Garden location into the old CPR terminal building on Belleville.

Details of the move have not been completed.

DeMolay Order Fraternal Group

The Order of DeMolay, referred to in the report of a county court trial in Wednesday's Times as "a religious youth organization," is not a religious movement.

A spokesman for the order today stressed that it is a "fraternal" organization for youths of 14 to 21 years sponsored by Masons.

Q. How many royal command performances of the performing arts have been held in England?—L.B.

A. The first royal command performance was held in 1912, and the second in 1921. Records indicate that performances have been held on a regular basis since 1921 to the present time, excluding the years 1924, 1929, 1936, 1939-1944, 1956 and 1959.

Q. I was born 69 years ago in Canada and served in both the First and Second World Wars. I was not registered at birth. I need a birth certificate in order to get the old age pension. What should I do?—R.M.S.

A. Officers of the old age security division, department of national health and welfare, spend a great deal of time helping applicants in searches to establish eligibility for a pension. It is suggested that you visit the department's office on the third floor of the main Victoria post office and ask for their help.

Minister Denies Secret Guideline

OTTAWA (CP) — Immigration Minister MacEachen struck back Wednesday at claims by the United Church moderator that the government was bypassing regular immigration rules to bar entry to U.S. military deserters.

The minister advised moderator R. B. McClure, in a brusquely-written letter, there was no reasonable excuse for accusations that secret "guidelines" existed in the immigration department's application of the Immigration Act. The claims were "erroneous to the point of irresponsibility."

An earlier telegram to Mr. MacEachen from Dr. McClure claimed the department was using two sets of rules—one set out in the Immigration Act and its regulations, and a second secret set that authorized department officers to put aside the regulations when dealing with deserters.

"Any suggestion that the guidelines have application only to deserters who seek admission to Canada is incorrect," Mr. MacEachen said.

He said the guidelines referred to all applicants whether or not they were members of U.S. armed forces.

STANDS FIRM

Dr. McClure refused to back down on the telegram's accusations despite the minister's rebuttal.

"We stand by what we said," he said on behalf of the church's national executive. He said the allegations were made after "considerable deliberation" and said the immigration minister had refused to table the departmental guidelines in the Commons.

Mr. MacEachen said the guidelines were internal department documents. Although they were normally not provided to Parliament, he noted he had publicly given the gist of them on a previous occasion and that a text of this was available on request.

The immigration minister said the substance of the guidelines was not secret.

"They provide guidance but do not give direction to the examining officer in exercising his discretion in determining whether an applicant is likely to establish himself successfully in Canada," he said.

CAN USE DISCRETION

"In the case of a deserter, there is certainly a legal obligation and the examining officer can take this into account when exercising his discretion as to the admissibility of the applicant," he said.

Mr. MacEachen said he took "strong objection to the accusations, allegations and insinuations" in the moderator's telegram.

In Toronto, Dr. McClure said the executive of the United Church's general council would substantiate the claims he had made.

He said the general council executive would appoint a committee to go to Ottawa for consultations with the immigration minister to discuss the matter.

MINISTRY ABOLISHED

CAIRO (Reuters)—President Gamal Abdel Nasser issued a decree Wednesday night abolishing the ministry of war production, a Cairo newspaper reports. No reasons were given in the two-line announcement. Nasser last week accepted the resignation of the minister of war production, Mohammad Abdel Wahab El Bishry.

Seven Climbers Killed

KATMANDU, Nepal (Reuters) — Five American climbers and two Sherpa guides were killed trying to scale one of the highest mountains in the Himalayas, said reports reaching here today.

A radio message said disaster struck a United States expedition attempting to scale Dhaulagiri One peak in the Nepalese Himalayas during the last few days—but there were no details of how the men died.

No other members of the expedition were injured and apparently have returned to Homoson checkpost northeast of the 26,810-foot peak.

A Nepalese army aircraft, with a doctor from the American embassy aboard, left Katmandu today to try to land at Jomoson and returned with two of the surviving Americans. Sources said the three others were likely to return with the expedition's baggage through Pokhara in western Nepal.

The leader of the American team, Boyd N. Everett Jr., son of a Chicago insurance executive, was among those killed.

$234,300 Profit On Water

The city of Victoria will buy $380,000 worth of water this year and sell it for $1,050,000.

But relax, it isn't all profit.

From the proceeds from the stuff used to sprinkle lawns, wash faces, dishes and diapers the city churns $815,700 back into the water distribution system.

After the initial payment of $380,000 for water wholesale the city pays out a further $276,650 for maintenance and operation, up $18,500 over last year; $43,100 for consumer account salaries and office expenses; $2,000 for building maintenance; $62,150 for line extensions and new work; $47,500 for new service installations; $1,500 for new equipment and $2,800 for new plant extensions.

Even with those expenses—up $55,965 over 1968—that "free" commodity spilling gaily from thousands of fawcets shows a neat profit of $234,300 over the one year operation.

Similar profits are shown in Oak Bay and Saanich with only Esquimalt taxpayers, who get their domestic water from the city system, failing to get a slice of the watery pie.

They Couldn't Hide Love

TORONTO (CP) — Charlie and Jane have finally run afoul of authority—all because they couldn't wait for the moon to come up.

It was all rather romantic and Charlie and Jane didn't care who knew they were lovers.

Charlie and Jane are lions who for the last three year's have been staging a love-in at Toronto's Riverdale Zoo.

During those three years they paraded between 10 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. seven days a week and unabashedly made love.

"We had to do something," said Herb Southam, head zookeeper at Riverdale, "it was getting embarrassing. We had crowds out there just hoping for something."

Finally the zoo people separated the lovers.

Zoo-keeper Sam Heaney says things were pretty wild before the big break up. "We had every weirdo in town crowding around their cage. They'd come before we'd open and stay all day. There was one little guy who just stood there all day staring. He'd send the kids to get him coffee.

"It was kind of funny when teachers would come through with their kids. They'd see Charlie and Jane making love and hustle the children on fast. But the teachers would always sneak a look over their shoulders.

"One teacher used to bring her class to watch the mating. She would tell them it is a fact of life and it was great to see how naturally those kids accepted it," Heaney said.

During those hectic days between April, 1966 and August 1968, Chuck and Jane brought 24 cubs into the world. Heaney says normally the number would be six at the most.

Charlie was given to the zoo in 1964 by New Jersey millionaire Charles Engelhard and Jane arrived from Africa in 1966.

Now, says Heaney, Charlie and Jane are only allowed to meet behind closed doors at night.

RCMP Staff Honored For Service

Seven Vancouver Islanders, RCMP officers, were to receive long service medals from Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson at Government House this afternoon.

They are:

Inspector D. J. Beiersdorfer, Sub Inspector G. E. Reid and Sgt. W. M. McConnell of Victoria; Sgt. R. L. Carlson, Nanaimo; Sgt. K. S. Sutherland, Ladysmith; Sgt. H. D. Chambers, Sidney, and Staff Sgt G. A. R. Sharp, Duncan.

The RCMP long service medal is awarded to members of the force who have completed a minimum of 20 years' service. The Silver Clasp and Star signifies 30 years' service and the Bronze Clasp and Star 25 years' service.

Staff Sgt. W. Murdoch and Special Constable H. B. Yorke of Victoria RCMP were to receive silver clasps and stars for their long service medals.

CRUMPLED 'SHOE'

Crumpled on ground in paddock at Inglewood, Calif., is jockey Bill Shoemaker after being thrown from horse before fourth race Tuesday. Shoemaker suffered fractured pelvis and internal injuries when filly Poona's Day threw him and pinned him between herself and hedge in background. "Shoe" was sidelined last year by broken leg.

Shoe Won't Be Around When Post Call Sounds

BRAULIO BAEZA
. . . replacing 'Shoe'

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Bill Shoemaker, the most active of the active Kentucky Derby riders, won't be on hand when they sound the call to the post this year.

Will it make a big difference?

"When you change from one good jockey to another good jockey, it just doesn't make any difference as long as it isn't a problem horse that you're dealing with," said Jimmy Jones, former trainer with Calumet Farms.

But Elliot Burch, trainer of Arts and Letters, which shoemaker was to ride in his 17th Derby appearance, had a different view.

"It took him a little while to get used to the horse," Elliot said. "At first, he tried to rate him perhaps too much, then in the Blue Grass Stakes he got used to him and let him run his own race."

After more than two months away from the winners' circle, Arts and Letters dashed home in the Blue Grass 15 lengths ahead of Traffic Mark.

But less than 24 hours after Burch had declared his Derby riding problems solved, Shoemaker was injured at Hollywood Park and the trainer was looking for a substitute.

Shoemaker, ready to make his first Derby appearance since he broke a leg early last year, sustained a broken pelvis and internal injuries when he was thrown from a horse at Hollywood Park Wednesday.

The 10-time national riding champion will be sidelined at least another six months.

Shoemaker's accident came during working hours. As he jumped on a horse in the fourth race, he was thrown against a hedge. The track physician said Shoemaker's pelvis was fractured in two places and the rider had suffered bladder injuries.

Meanwhile, California-bred Fleet Allied and Traffic Mark Wednesday joined the seven-horse field, headed by Canada's unbeaten Majestic Prince, for Saturday's 95th running of the Derby.

Fleet Allied, Traffic Mark—it hasn't won a race this year—and Ocean Roar form the ragamuffin challenge to the big four—Majestic Prince, Top Knight, Arts and Letters and Dike.

Post time is 5:30 p.m. EDT. CBC will televise the race nationally.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Braulio Baeza was chosen today to replace the injured Bill Shoemaker on Arts and Letters in Saturday's Kentucky Derby.

"We wanted a boy who can use his head, and Braulio is one of the headiest of riders," said Elliott Burch, trainer for the Paul Mellon horse, who is rated one of the favorites in the big race.

Pats Lose First Game To Junior Canadiens

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Junior Canadiens took the first game of their best-of-seven Memorial Cup series against Regina Pats Wednesday night, but Regina coach Bob Turner says he feels it should have been the other way around.

The Pats went down to defeat 5-3, but Turner wasn't so much upset with his players as he was with the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association which ruled that the Canadiens could use goaltender Jim Rutherford of the Hamilton Red Wings.

Both the Red Wings and the Junior Canadiens play in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A league.

Turner said the Canadiens should not have been allowed to pick up any players from other clubs for the final.

"Look, if they had had regular netminder Wayne Wood in there we would have won. We would have had a 2-0 lead at the end of the first period if it hadn't been for the big saves by Rutherford."

Instead, it was Montreal who skated off with a 1-0 lead at the end of the first on a goal by Guy Charron.

GOALIES BUSY

Rutherford came up with strong goaltending throughout the game stopping 29 shots, while Regina goalie Gary Bromley stopped 40.

Regina tied up the game early in the second period with the first of two goals by Murray Keogan. His shot deflected off the leg of Rutherford.

Montreal came back with two goals in the second period on shots by Gilbert Perreault and Marc Tardif to take a 3-1 lead.

Montreal went ahead 5-1 in the third period with two more goals by Charron. With less than four minutes left in the game, Keogan scored his other goal and Larry Wright wound up the scoring a little more than two minutes later.

Montreal coach Roger Bedard said he thought the Canadiens played well enough to win anyway, but he predicted a long series.

"We're just going to take one game at a time."

The series resumes here Friday night. Then the teams move out to Regina for a third game Sunday afternoon and a fourth Monday night. Any other games, if necessary, are scheduled for Regina.

SALE OF OAKLAND CLUB . . . . . . MAY HAVE COLLAPSED

Old Seal Problem Is Back Again

ST. LOUIS (CP) — The problem of who will operate Oakland Seals next season apparently faces the National Hockey League again today.

Sources close to the league indicated Wednesday a proposed deal whereby Trans-National Communications of New York agreed to purchase 80 per cent of the club and Seymour and Northrup Knox of Buffalo, N.Y., the other 20 per cent, may have fallen through.

The two groups agreed March 1 on an option to purchase the Seals from Barend van Gerbig for an estimated $4,500,000. However, reports indicate that the New York City-based Trans-National had not picked up its option by the April 25 deadline.

Clarence Campbell, NHL president, was not immediately available for comment on the latest turn of events in the tangled web that has surrounded the Seals since they entered the expanded league two years ago.

The agreement by Trans-National and the Knox brothers called for a $900,000 down payment on the full purchase price. The two groups also were believed to have agreed to accept the Seals' substantial liabilities.

The Knox brothers, with their 20-per-cent interest, were said to have advanced a sum in excess of $200,000 on March 1.

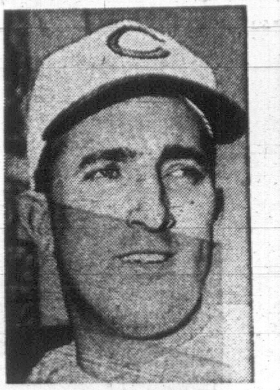
If Trans-National and the Buffalo group have not exercised their option, the Seals will now revert to van Gerbig.

Reports from Buffalo indicate that Seymour Knox still is negotiating to acquire the Seals.

Van Gerbig previously attempted to deal the club to a Canadian brewery and to Vancouver Canucks of the Western Hockey League.

The Knox brothers also attempted to obtain sole possession and move the team to Buffalo before joining Trans-National in the latest bid.

Old Hat or Greasy, It Was No-Hitter



JIM MALONEY

HARRY WALKER
. . . accuser

By The Associated Press

Not many pitchers can shrug off a no-hitter as old-hat, but Jim Maloney can.

"I wasn't nervous—I've been there before," said the big right-hander, who hurled the third masterpiece of his career Wednesday night as Cincinnati Reds crushed the Houston Astros 10-0, breaking a five-game losing streak.

"You just walk out there and if you've got a no-hitter, you've got one."

However, manager Harry Walker of the Astros, who has lived through almost everything since the season started for his lowly team, felt there was more to it than that.

"He didn't go to his mouth," Walker said, "but he's getting grease on the ball. Back of his neck? I don't know. But he's getting it up there some way."

Grease ball or not, Maloney was superlative. He struck out 13 and pitched around five walks as he ran his record to 3-0 hogging all of the Cincinnati's three complete games this season.

OTHER PITCHERS SHINE

His sparkler led a night of classy pitching performances in the National League.

Juan Marichal hurled a two-hitter in San Francisco's 3-0 victory over Los Angeles Dodgers and Jim Bunning of Pittsburgh and Bob Gibson of St. Louis traded fine mound jobs as the Pirates won 2-1 before the Cardinals breezed 8-1 in a twi-night doubleheader.

Tom Seaver pitched a five-hitter as New York Mets edged Montreal Expos 2-1, Woody Fryman scattered seven hits in Philadelphia's 3-1 triumph over Chicago Cubs and Phil Niekro gave only six hits as Atlanta Braves beat San Diego Padres 6-3.

Maloney's third no-hitter—he won 1-0 in 10 hitless innings against Chicago in 1965, and lost 1-0 against New York in 12 innings one month later after 10 hitless innings—put him in select company.

The only other pitchers with as many were Sandy Koufax, who had four, and Bob Feller, Cy Young and Larry Corcoran, a pitcher in the 1880s, who each had three.

Maloney's catcher, young Johnny Bench, didn't take it so casually, however.

CATCHER NERVOUS

"From about the sixth or seventh inning, I was so nervous I didn't know what I was doing," Bench said. "I'm glad to be a part of it."

Maloney said he has pitched harder this year, but added that "I just had better stuff on the ball, my control was good . . . and they weren't hitting."

If any team was to have a no-hitter pitched against them it had to be the Astros, who now have lost eight straight games and 15 of 16 in a 4-20 season.

Marichal, 4-1, flirted with a no-hitter for five innings before the Dodgers got their only hits opening the sixth. But the Giants ace retired the last 12 hitters for San Francisco's ninth consecutive victory that broke a first-place tie with the Dodgers in the West Division.

In the American League, Frank Robinson climaxed a record April spree of 10 home runs with a two-run blast against Detroit that powered Baltimore Orioles to a 3-2 triumph over Tigers.

In other games, Sam McDowell fired a three-hitter and struck out 12 to boost Cleveland Indians to a 3-0 shutout over New York Yankees, Washington Senators nipped Boston Red Sox 1-0, Minnesota Twins trimmed Seattle Pilots 6-4, Kansas City Royals shaded Chicago White Sox 3-2, and Oakland Athletics trampled California Angels 9-4.

Fans Are Great —Goals Better

ST. LOUIS (CP)—Ralph Backstrom, of Montreal Canadiens, says "Those St. Louis fans are worth a goal a game to the Blues".

But all the vocal support at the arena on Oakland Avenue hasn't improved St. Louis Blues' record against Montreal Canadiens.

St. Louis trails 2-0 in the best-of-seven Stanley Cup finals and is still looking for its first victory in 16 regular-season and playoff meetings with the defending champions.

The St. Louis fans are truly loyal—they give the Blues a standing ovation in the pre-game warm-up. All the cheers, whistles and chants are great for the atmosphere in the rink, but what St. Louis coach Scotty Bowman really wants is a couple of goals in tonight's third game.

"We just haven't been able to put things together," Bowman said Wednesday night.

"I don't think we've been outplayed that badly. It's just that we've had trouble finishing around the net and we've put ourselves in difficulty by taking some stupid penalties."

RESTRICTED BERENSON

Backstrom is one of the main reasons the Blues have only two goals for and six against in the first two games. His fierce checking has restricted Red Berenson, the Western Division's scoring leader, to four shots on goal in the Canadiens' 3-1 victories Sunday and Tuesday night.

Bowman worked Berenson for about 45 minutes Tuesday night killing penalties, leading the powerplay and centring the regular line.

"I thought he played pretty well," said Bowman. "I used him a lot because I wanted to see how his leg was."

Berenson picked up a charley-horse in the second period of the Sunday game while Backstrom prevented him from getting a shot on goal.

Defenceman Barclay Plager, who needed shots of pain-killer to play Tuesday night with a severe back injury he received in the first game, was still sore Wednesday. He stopped a slap-shot from Yvan Cournoyer with his left leg in Tuesday's game.

And his brother, Bob, is hobbling on a twisted ankle.

"My ankle swelled up on me so bad, I couldn't get my skate on," Bob said.

ARBOUR ALSO HIT

Veteran Al Arbour, who became the Blues' defence leader when Doug Harvey was injured in an auto accident a month ago, also was hit by one of Cournoyer's blasts, but says he'll dress tonight.

Bowman has not decided who will start in goal.

Jacques Plante worked the first game and performed brilliantly, but the Canadiens halted his winning streak at eight games which included three shutouts in the Blues' sweep past Philadelphia Flyers, and Los Angeles Kings in the Western Division playoffs.

And Glenn Hall proved why he was voted the most valuable player in the Stanley Cup series last season Tuesday night when he set two playoff records.

Hall, who had been sidelined with a pulled hamstring muscle since April 2, made his 104th Stanley Cup appearance to surpass the mark he shared with Terry Sawchuk of Detroit Red Wings. He has now played a total of 6,238 minutes, 27 more than Sawchuk.

Beaten Favorite Tested for Drugs

NEWMARKET, England (AP) — Right Tack won the 2000 Guineas classic Wednesday in a horse race that left fans wondering if Ribofilio, the U.S.-owned favorite, had been drugged.

Ribofilio, the 15-8 favorite for the mile race over a turf course, finished last and British trainer Fulke Johnson-Houghton said: "We've been to see the stewards. We cannot understand the running of Ribofilio. We are having him tested."

It might be weeks before the result of the test is made public.

Right Tack, owned by Irishman John Brown and trained in England by John Sutcliffe, was booted home by jockey Geoff Lewis at odds of 5-2. Tower Walk was second at 8-1 and Welsh Pageant third at 13-2.

Right Tack's triumph was worth $59,416.

Lester Piggott, Britain's champion jockey, said of Ribofilio: "He seemed to blow up. He had no wind at all."

Davis McCall, racing manager for owner Charles Englehard, said:

"Nothing happened to Ribofilio in the race but many things appear to be odd."

Pilots Collect Pitching Help

SEATTLE (AP) — Seattle Pilots, in need of pitching help, announced Wenesday a five-player deal with Baltimore Orioles which will bring three pitchers to the American League expansion club.

Marvin Milkes, Seattle general manager, said the Pilots will get veteran left-hander John O'Donoghue, 30, and right-hander Tom Fisher, 27, from Rochester of the International League and right-hander Lloyd Fourroux, 28, from Dallas of the Texas League. In return, Seattle assigned infielder Mike Ferraro to Rochester and right-handed pitcher Jerry Schoen to Dallas—both Baltimore farm clubs.

Canuck Racquet Pair Scores Major Upset

EASTBOURNE, England (CP) — Canadian Mike Belkin and Harry Fauquier scored one of the biggest upsets of the British clay court tennis championships Wednesday when they ousted American aces Arthur Ashe and Charlie Pasarell in a marathon doubles match. The match was called because of darkness at the end of four sets Tuesday night. It was resumed Wednesday and the unranked Canadians took the crucial fifth set from the Americans, rated No. 2 in the doubles here.

The final score was 7-9, 8-6, 6-4, 3-6, 6-3.

Fred Boulton of Vancouver, non-playing captain of the Canadian Davis Cup team, described it afterward as the "best doubles victory for a Canadian team in many years.

Later in the day, Belkin bowed 8-6, 6-1, 6-1 to Australian pro John Newcombe, who advanced to the singles' quarter-finals.

Kerbow Retires After Signing

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton Eskimos of the Western Football Conference have announced that quarterback-split end Randy Kerbow will not play this season in the Canadian Football League.

The Eskimos' statement said Kerbow has asked to be placed on the voluntary retired list.

Kerbow had signed a 1969 contract but recently had asked for an increase and a two-year, no-cut clause. No salary details were given.

MEETS JACOBSEN SUNDAY . . . . . . IN TIMES OPEN GOLF FINAL

Boden Swinging on Four-Year Cycle

By ERNIE FEDORUK

Country folklore insists the seven-year locusts show up like clockwork.

Norm Boden also is regular. He's a four-year finalist in the Times Vancouver Island Open and handicap golf championships.

The 33-year-old Cowichan professional faces southpaw Hal Jacobsen of Glen Meadows in Sunday's playoff for The Daily Times Trophy and the prizes that go with winning.

Jacobsen's appearance may or may not have been expected although the plus-two handicapper has been a consistent challenger during the past half-dozen years. This will be Jacobsen's first final.

Less surprising is Boden's challenge, especially for the calendar-watchers. They have known it was time to bet Boden. He does it every fourth year . . . right on the nose!

To compound coincidences, Boden shows up each year the final is played at Uplands Golf Club. That's where the action will be this Sunday.

It started in 1961. A former City Amateur titlist, Boden won the Island Open crown that year by defeating Oak Bay's Dr. George Bigelow.

Norm was back again in 1965, but lost that final to fellow professional Ron MacLeod.

Now it's 1969, and Boden's four-year cycle is at work again.

Sunday's 36-hole playoff will get under way with the 18-hole rounds starting at 9:15 a.m. and 1:45 p.m.

Preceeding the championship match, and starting at 9 and 1:30, will be the handicap final for the Hugh Francis Trophy between defending champion Bob Herbertson and Gorge Vale's Bill Shvetz'

The public is reminded the finals, as always, are "for free." There is no admission charge for spectators wishing to follow the finalists.

Piers Sold on Idea Of Canadian Games

Mark Trail's
OUTDOOR TIPS

VALUABLE MAPS, CHARTS, FISHING LICENSES, ETC. CAN BE WATERPROOFED BY COATING THEM THOROUGHLY WITH BOILED LINSEED OIL...

AFTER SEVERAL DAYS OF DRYING THEY ARE READY FOR USE

By DOUG PEDEN

If the energy and enthusiasm of one man can do the job, the first Canadian Summer Games should cruise smoothly through eight August days in Nova Scotia with the precision of a piece of well-tuned naval machinery.

Energy is one of the first impressions you get when you meet Desmond W. (Debbie) Piers, a trim, 56-year-old retired admiral from Chester, N.S.

Enthusiasm for the future of what promises to be the country's greatest sports spectacular bubbles out when Piers talks about the games, scheduled for Halifax and Dartmouth from August 17 to 25. Without half trying, he has become a super salesman for the program.

Actually, promoting the Summer Games, which will bring together more than 25,000 athletes from the 10 provinces and two territories, isn't Debbie's official job. He's just sold on the idea.

VISITED PREMIER

His position with the athletic extravaganza is "chief of protocol and ceremonies; and currently he is on a cross-country junket to personally invite VIPs to attend the Games.

Tuesday he extended an invitation to Premier W. A. C. Bennett and later, while striding briskly between shots at Uplands Golf Club, Piers said he had "a very friendly reception" from the premier.

It was almost like a navy reunion at Uplands. Completing the foursome were Capt. John Osborn, Capt. Fred Frewer and Lt.-Cmdr. Reg Mylrea. Kibitzing along the way was Admiral E. W. R. Finch-Noyes, brother-in-law of Piers.

NEED FOR SUPPORT

Piers is no stranger to golf and several other sports. He handled the struggle sticks well enough to win a pair of golf tournaments for seniors last summer in Nova Scotia and competes regularly in tennis, squash and sailing. He and his wife operate a program of junior tennis instruction in Chester and he spearheaded a successful campaign to obtain an ice arena for youngsters in the area.

However, the topic was the Canada Games, proposed by the federal government in the early 1960s after establishment of the fitness council.

There appeared to be a need, explained Piers, for federal support of amateur sport in Canada and the Games were designed to fill the empty year in the four-year cycle of the Olympic, Commonwealth and Pan-American Games.

They didn't get off the ground in 1965, but everything is set for a spectacular inaugural in August.

INCLUDE 15 SPORTS

Plans for the Canadian Games include 15 different sports and each province or territory will be permitted to send up to 246 atheletes. The federal government pays most of the shot, providing grants for construction of facilities and taking care of operational costs.

Hosting cities must also contribute and hundreds of volunteer workers will be needed to keep things running.

In addition to promoting amateur sport by providing Canadian athletes with the kind of competition required to campaign on the international level, and by building up the kind of facilities that will develop and encourage top-calibre athletes, it is hoped the games will promote better understanding across the nation.

AID UNDERSTANDING

"When people intermingle without thinking of politics," said Piers, an observor at the Mexico City Olympics, "there has to be better understanding.

"At first, as a Nova Scotian, I was pleased when I thought of what the games would do for my province.

"Now, as a Canadian, I am enthused over what they can do for our country.

"These are our first Summer Games," added the man whose wartime service included a lengthy term as skipper of the Restigouche, the famed "rusty guts" destroyer of the Canadian navy. "We hope to make them an event of which Canada will be proud."

Big Jean Wrecked Rapid Calculation

MONTREAL (CP) — Before the current Stanley Cup squabbling got under way, Scotty Bowman, the sharp young coach of St. Louis Blues, did some rapid calculation and came up with an answer that his club is considerably better than last season.

Now Bowman must be wondering just where his mental computer went wrong as the best-of-seven series resumes in St. Louis tonight with the Blues trailing Montreal Canadiens, 2-0.

"I figure we're 25 per cent better than last season when Canadiens beat us four straight in the playoffs, but only by one goal each time," Bowman said. "That should give us a fairly good chance against them the next time we meet in the playoffs — except for one thing."

Apparently that one thing materialized in the person of Montreal captain Jean Beliveau, currently playing in his 16th consecutive playoff.

Last year when Canadiens slid past the Blues in four, Beliveau played only part of the first game of the series and then retired to the sidelines. But not so this year.

Beliveau has yet to score his first goal against the Blues in the series as Canadiens won both the Sunday and Tuesday contests by identical 3-1 scores.

However, he has been the acknowledged team leader for the defending champions, earning assists on half of the six goals they have scored.

SIX COACHES DEMAND . . . . . . PROGRAM SUPPORT

Ski Team Faces Disaster

AL RAINE
. . . troubled coach

TORONTO (CP) — Ed Creed, international competitions chairman for the Canadian Amateur Ski Association, said today six coaches of Canada's national alpine ski team will quit unless the CASA supports their program for next year.

"This could be a disaster," Creed said.

The coaches concerned are Gilbert Mollard, Peter Franzen, Guy Christie, Robert Fugere, Larry Nelles and head coach Al Raine.

★ ★ ★

"Raine is the best-qualfied man in Canada to run a ski team," Creed said.

Creed was responsible for hiring Raine at a salary of $12,000 a year.

"There may be members of the association who will resent Raine's attitude and try to get him fired," Creed said. "I'll protect him as far as I can."

The upheaval on the ski team began when Raine notified several members he would not put them on the team next season. Three retired and two others were dismissed.

★ ★ ★

Raine said at the time he had notified them at the team headquarters in Nelson, B.C., because:

"I didn't want them to hear about it on the radio or read it in the newspapers when it came out at the annual CASA meeting in Winnipeg next month."

Later, a letter, unsigned, was sent to CASA representatives and to newspapers criticizing Raine, and at least one of his assistants.

The letter named as being dropped from the team Stephanie Townsend, 21, Banff; Judi Leinweber, 18, Kimberley, B.C.; Currie Chapman, 19, Montreal; Bob Swan, Old Chelsea, Que., and John Ritchie, 19, Port Arthur, Ont.

Miss Leinweber, once suggested as the successor to now-retired ski queen Nancy Greene, criticized Raine's coaching methods in an interview after the letter circulated.

"I'll quit if I don't get support from the CASA at the annual meeting," Raine was quoted.

Duncan Bowler Topped Distaff Fivepin Slate

Although a Duncan contestant topped the list of qualifiers, it's tough to pick a clear favorite for the women's fivepin title in the fifth annual Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs.

Pin-spillers competing in league play on southern Vancouver Island lanes shoot each season for Bowler-of-the-Week awards. Weekly awards in the 27 weeks of the Times-sponsored contest go to bowlers registering the top scores in each of four divisions—men's and women's fivepins, men's and women's tenpins.

Every award-winner is eligible to enter the Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs, scheduled this year on Sunday, May 11.

Adele MacInnes fired the highest women's fivepin tally of this season's contest, rolling a blazing 959, three-game series at Duncan Bowling Centre in the third week of competition.

Adele will be one of the choices to pick up the Times Trophy in fivepin rolloffs, but she can expect rugged challenges from a bevy of other entrants, including a sparkling teen-ager and seasoned campaigner of the fivepin wars.

Gloria Crow, only 15, chalked up the second-highest total of the contest, hitting a 954 figure during the 13th week. One week earlier than Mrs. MacInnes, June Peddlesden topped the 900 mark with a 902 effort.

Biggest challenge of all might come from May Wallis, who has collected a flock of titles on city lanes during recent years. Mrs. Wallis, Bowler-of-the-Year queen in 1965, qualified in the first week this time and has enjoyed one of her finest seasons.

Each of the finalists is capable of setting the pace in the rolloffs, in which each winner will receive a Times Trophy. Any rolloff champion who is a daily subscriber to the Daily Times will also receive a bonus award of $100.

This year, all the fivepinners will chase glory and cash at Town and Country Lanes, with the rolloffs starting at 1 p.m.

Tenpinners will stage their rolloffs battles at Mayfair Lanes, beginning at 2:30.

Royal Victoria juniors raced at Lake Washington last weekend in the spring section of the bi-annual McCurdy Cup competition. The competition was not completed, due to the racing conditions of very little wind combined with much "slop" from passing powerboats.

The series was awarded to the Seattle Yacht entry, the only undefeated team. The Victoria sailors were knocked out in the second round. Racing was in Uniqua 420's.

PROBLEM CHILDREN . . . . . . IN PRO GRID SPOTLIGHT

Bills Talk About Montreal

NEW YORK (AP) — The American Football League's two problem children, Buffalo and Boston, stole the spotlight at the pro football meetings Wednesday, the Bills by flirting with Seattle and Montreal and the Patriots by rejecting Memphis.

The two franchises have been bogged down in efforts to get new stadiums—Buffalo to replace War Memorial Stadium and Boston to replace Fenway Park—that meet pro football's requirements for 50,000-seat ball parks by 1970.

Ralph Wilson, owner of the Bills' expressed pessimism about Buffalo's stadium situation and said he would have to consider a move for 1970 if the problem was not rectified in two or three months. At the same time, Billy Sullivan, owner of the Patriots, expressed confidence about Boston's situation and revealed he had turned down a $16 million offer from a Memphis group.

EYES SEATTLE, TOO

"I'm being very pessimistic." said Wilson. It just seems to be bogged in the legislature with no way of breaking the logjam."

"Seattle would be a very good site and I've also thought about Montreal."

Wilson's mention of Montreal is the first time that Canadian city has been brought up as a possible site for the franchise. Montreal now has a major league baseball team and under terms of its agreement with the National League, will build a covered stadium.

"Montreal impressed me," said Wilson, "because of the reception the baseball team was given. Right now there's no stadium there so that would have to be worked out in the future."

SEVEN PLAYOFF GAMES

The 26 club owners, still wrestling with the problems of realigning for the 1970 merger of the American and National League, agreed on a playoff system culminating in the Super Bowl.

The system, based on the assumption of a 13-13 division into two conferences, calls for seven games over four weekends ending with the Super Bowl game between the champions of the two conferences.

There would be four teams playing off in each conference, the three division winners plus the second-place team with the best won-lost record in the conference. An elaborate system of breaking title ties was devised, none of which involved any tie playoff.

THREE TO SWITCH

When the two leagues completed business for the day, Commissioner Pete Rozelle said the plan to move three NFL teams into a conference with the 10 AFL teams seemed to have the greatest acceptance in both leagues.

When asked how the three teams that would move would be determined, Rozelle said, "I don't know. I am going to have some private talks with a number of teams in the next couple of days."

Rozelle indicated half a dozen NFL teams were willing to explore the plan but he emphasized that none had agreed or even been asked to move. He said there were three steps in the process, first, finding the teams willing to move; second, getting the approval of the NFL, and third, getting the approval of the AFL.

Colt Baseball Starts Tonight

Skyline Roofers and United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Piledrivers meet tonight at 6:30 in Topaz Park to open the 1969 Victoria Colt League baseball season.

On Sunday, Smith Cedar Products meets Skyline Roofers at 1 p.m., and Evening Optimists take on UBCP at 3 in the same park. Action then shifts to Layritz Park for a 6:30 p.m. game pitting Layritz against Vista Social Club.

Scott Wins, Vegas Gains Rugged Draw

SEATTLE (AP) — Young Fraser Scott of Kirkland, Wash., stopped Denny Moyer of Portland, the world's seventh-ranked middleweight, when Moyer was unable to come out for the third round of their scheduled 10-rounder Wednesday night.

A crowd of 4,105 paid $20,136 for the match.

In a 10-round preliminary Les Vegas, 147, of Vancouver, and Andy Anderson, 143, of Seattle fought to a draw. The Canadian had the advantage in the early going but both tired in the later stages and Anderson appeared to earn the draw with a 10th-round rush.

Scottish Collect Benefit Victory

Canadian Scottish collected a 5-2 victory over Victoria and District all-stars Wednesday at Royal Athletic Park during an exhibition soccer match in aid of injured clubmate Jim Irvine.

Marty Taylor smashed in two goals and Gil McIlraith, Frans Van Doesburg and John Hughes each added singles for Scottish. Rick Lamoureux and Bill Walker tallied for the all-star squad.

Vatican Appointment Irks Italian Prelates

VATICAN CITY (AP) — A hard-working, chain-smoking Frenchman, Jean Cardinal Villot, has risen to the second-highest post in the Roman Catholic Church after only two years at the Vatican. Italians in the Curia are not happy about it.

Pope Paul named Cardinal Villot, 63, Vatican secretary of state Wednesday. The former archbishop of Lyon succeeded Amleto Cardinal Cicognani, 86, who retired because of age and ill health.

The post is the church's equivalent of a prime minister as well as its foreign minister. It oversees Vatican embassies around the world.

Cardinal Villot is the first non-Italian to be named secretary of state in 55 years, since a Spaniard held the post from 1903 to 1914.

Italian prelates at the Vatican expressed both disappointment and fear. Many were bitter because the Pope had passed over such Italian cardinals with diplomatic backgrounds as Paolo Cardinal Bertoli, former nuncio to France, and Sebastino Cardinal Baggio, former nuncio to Brazil.

Though he had a distinguished career in the French episcopacy before coming to the Vatican in 1967, Cardinal Villot had never held a diplomatic post.

One Italian prelate dismissed the appointment as another gesture by Pope Paul to give the church administration an international look.

Other Vatican officials, however, were fearful of a growing group of French prelates operating in the Vatican power structure. They reported that Italian members of the Curia, angered by the appointment, had leaked the cardinal's appointment earlier this week to create embarrassment at the Vatican.

Cardinal Villet, although known in France as a progressive, has been a staunch defender of the doctrine of priestly celibacy and an opponent of any major change in the role of the priest.

Crash Proves Distress Box

OTTAWA (CP) — A northern air crash two weeks ago has established conclusively that a Canadian invention defies darkness and bad flying weather to bring rescuers quickly to the scene of air disasters.

The significance of the tragedy is that medical aid can be brought to downed aircraft soon and the expense of air searches can be cut down.

The National Research Council, reporting today on an assessment of the April 15 crash in the Northwest Territories, said that for the first time the NRC-developed crash position indicator led to nighttime discovery of a downed aircraft by air searchers.

The crash position indicator or CPI was ejected at the moment of impact from a Cessna aircraft whose three occupants died. It began immediately to send automatic distress signals that a searching Canadian Forces jet from Comox picked up and used to pinpoint the crash scene.

Although the plane was demolished, the CPI continued to perform its SOS function and was used by a larger plane the next day to guide it to the scene and enable a helicopter landing to confirm the casualty and damage toll.

The CPI, manufactured by Leigh Instruments of Carleton Place, Ont., under patent licence from Canadian Patents and Development Ltd., an NRC subsidiary, is earning Canada growing sums in domestic and export sales. The total so far is $15,000,000.

"If all aircraft operating in Northern Canada had this type of equipment, search and rescue operations would be cut drastically," Major A. E. Richards, Search and Rescue Operation, Canadian Forces headquarters, reported to NRC.

Aerial searches normally consume hundreds of flying hours and are generally confined to daylight hours and good visibility.

The CPI is immune to damage or destruction through impact or fire because it is automtically ejected from the fuselage of the downed plane and floats gently to earth. If it lands in water, it is buoyant and continues to send out a distress signal on which planes can "home" to it for many days.

Harry Stevinson, an engineer in NRC's National Aeronautical Establishment who directed early development of the CPI, said the April 15 crash between Fort Simpson and Virginia Falls, N.W.T., "is conclusive proof of the efficiency of the instrument."

Gets Regatta Post

KELOWNA (CP)—Deputy provincial secretary Laurie Wallace of Victoria Wednesday accepted the position of honorary vice-commodore of the annual summer regatta on Lake Okanagan here. The 63rd annual event will be held Aug. 6-9.

JUST AS LIKELY TO BE MAY

SAN FRANCISCO (Reuters) — California, for all its faults, is still here today.

Prophets of doom predicted that a major earthquake would strike during the month of April.

But the famous faults—geological abnormalities that cause earthquakes—produced only a few routine shakes and no damage during April.

The prophets said California would split away from the United States and sink into the Pacific Ocean. Scientists said the possibility of a major quake was there—but that it was just as likely to happen in May or any other month.

Indians Doubt Ottawa Will Respect Treaties

OTTAWA (CP) — Delegates to a national Indian conference Wednesday expressed skepticism at assurances by Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien that their treaties will be respected by the government.

Mr. Chretien told the conference that Ottawa has "every intention of honoring the treaties." But first a court must be established to interpret treaties and to decide conflicting claims.

"We have received similar assurances from other governments in the past," Harold Cardinal of Edmonton told Mr. Chretien.

He said Indians would want to be involved in any interpretation of the treaties.

Ed Bellerose of Lac La Biche, Alta., said Indians have been hearing "the same old thing . . . from Indian affairs for 100 years."

Andrew Nicholas, vice-president of the Union of New Brunswick Indians, asked for financial help so Indians could establish their own claims.

WANT NO INTERFERENCE

"We don't want the Indian affairs branch to interfere," he said.

Fred Plain of Sarnia, Ont., told the minister that Indians needed a firmer commitment from the government "than the vague one you have given us."

But the conference so far has been confined to discussion of aboriginal and treaty rights, the loss of hunting and fishing rights, and the need for an Indian claims commission.

Mr. Chretien told the delegates that he also wanted their views on the Indian Act which gives him the power to administer the lands and resources of Indians.

ASK ABOUT AUTHORITY

Did Indians want him to continue to have such authority or did they want these powers turned over to them?

The minister also said that he could not accept a suggestion that Indians themselves rewrite the Indian Act. That was the duty of government, he said.

Expected Guests Don't Show for 'Cool Aid at Work'

By PETE LOUDON

Only two city aldermen turned out Wednesday night to see Cool Aid at work — and neither was Ald. Robert Baird.

Ald. Baird, prime objector to Cool Aid — the group which operates here to assist footloose youngsters — was to have been the unofficial guest of honor.

The other sought-for guest was Victoria police chief John Gregory. He promised to send a representative but no one arrived from the force, either.

Mayor Hugh Stephen, Ald. Lily Wilson, Ald. Ian Stewart and Ald. Harold Olafson sent their regrets earlier. But all of them except Ald. Olafson are thought to be in favor of giving Cool Aid a chance.

Ald. Clyde Savage and Ald. Cecil Parrott are out of town and on the sick list, respectively.

Ald. Tom Christie and Ald. Percy Frampton accepted the invitation, heard a talk on Cool Aid aims and visited the new Cool Aid hostel. Both indicated they would support the group's request for a $3,060 intermunicipal grant.

Ald. Frampton, briefly wielding a paint roller along with the long-haired, beaver-bearded Cool Aid workers, said, "Regardless of their hair, they seem to be a nice bunch of fellows.

"I think they should be given a chance."

Ald. Christie said they were well-behaved and well-mannered.

"I'm in favor. They have the sanction of the Community Welfare Council through its director Garth Homer.

"If he thinks they are worth a try, it's worth a try as far as I'm concerned."

Both the aldermen examined Cool Aid's books and records and heard how the group during March found accommodation for 69 kids, wandering in from other centres.

They met Cool Aid supporters and advisers Hugh Wade and Peter Cotton and heard how the organization arranges legal and medical aid for the wanderers, as well as counselling from social workers.

They learned that the provincial government had already advanced a sum, part of what is meant to be a grant matching the local contribution, in order that Cool Aid could take advantage of a good rented house.

They heard how the provincial social welfare office already has referred a case to Cool Aid.

And they saw half a dozen youngsters painting the house which soon will be a hostel for short-stay accommodation for up to 20 "clients." They didn't visit five city homes which have volunteered emergency accommodation.

Now it's up to council to act on the matter of the grant.

To win the vote it's apparently necessary for one of the two uncommitted aldermen, Savage or Parrott, to join the yes-votes.

If they aren't back in time for next Thursday's council meeting, Cool Aid probably has it made. If they do come back in time they might be won over by the experience of Ald. Christie and Ald. Frampton.

And then, of course, there's the long shot that Ald. Olafson or even Ald. Baird, might change their minds . . . and give Cool Aid a chance. Cool Aid is optimistic.

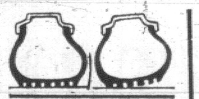
SAVE $6 on a Pair! Allstate SUPERWIDE OVAL with Fiberglas* Belts for up to DOUBLE the mileage

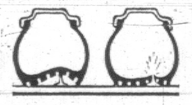
D70-14. Reg. 36.95. SALE PRICE

33.95 Exchange

1. Fiberglas belts virtually eliminate tread squirm to give up to double the mileage of conventional tires.



2. Stiff tread stays flat on the road for maximum traction. Flexible sidewalls make cornering and handling easier.



3. Because Fiberglas cord is 2½ times stronger than any other tire cord, you get better protection against penetration.

Tests prove it. Allstate Superwide Ovals, with Fiberglas belts under the tread, give up to double the mileage of conventional tires. Two stiff bands of Fiberglas hold the tread firmly on the road to prevent squirm, the main cause of tire wear.

- 20% wider tread puts bigger footprint on the road, for better traction under all conditions.
- Seven-rib tread has thousands of tiny grooves for safer traction on wet highways.
- Sporty, twin red stripes on one side, twin white stripes on the other.
- Safety-tested and proven at over 100 m.p.h.

Quebec Told 'Stay In or Pay'

By STAN McDOWELL
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Finance Minister Edgar Benson said Wednesday there it no way for Quebec to opt out of the national medicare program and still get its share of federal funds.

"The legislation is quite clear," he said, adding that the government has "no thought of changing it."

Under the national plan the federal government pays one half the national average per capita cost to any province setting up a plan to meet federal criteria.

At the end of 1972 the method of federal contribution is to be renegotiated with the provinces. The federal government favors dropping the direct payment to the provinces in return for leaving them a larger share of the direct tax field. But many provinces oppose this.

Quebec Finance Minister Paul Dozois in his budget speech Tuesday said Quebec would opt out of national medicare and set up its own universal plan, to come into effect July 1, 1970. He insisted that the federal government move over and leave enough room in the direct tax field to let Quebec collect its share of medicare funds itself.

He also demanded that between now and July, 1970, Ottawa turn over to the province the yield of the two-per cent Social Development Tax, estimated at $165,000,000.

Benson told reporters that the only way Quebec could get its share of the money would be to set up a plan that matched federal criteria and take the funds the same way other participating provinces take them, in direct payments from the federal government.

"That is the law," he said.

The federal fince minister shrugged off what appeared to be the opening round in a Quebec-Ottawa battle that is commonly seen here as an attempt by the provincial government to capitalize on nationalist sentiment with a view to a provincial election in the fall.

"It's not really a battle," he said.

The Quebec announcement is commonly seen here as an effort to respond to political pressure in favor of medicare without too obviously retreating from its often stated position that the national program is an invasion of provincial autonomy.

The present Quebec government had said several times that it will get into medicare in its own way and its own good time, beginning with a partial program for those most in need of it.

In announcing a universal plan, necessary to qualify for federal funds, the province is now understood to be demonstrating, behind the nationalist rhetoric, its readiness to make a face-saving deal with the federal government.

Federal officials, who feel that it would be difficult for Quebec to get ready for universal medicare in barely more than a year, given the existing state of medical services in the province, are convinced that the provincial demand for the right to collect its own share of the funds from an enlarged direct tax field can safely be stalled off until federal-provincial arrangements come up for revision.

STUDENTS PELT AUSTRALIAN GOVERNOR

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuters)—Sir Roden Cutler, governor of New South Wales, was pelted with tomatoes as he forced his way through students to review the Sydney University regiment parading on the campus here today.

About 2,000 students, protesting against the regiment and "what it stands for," threw vegetables and squirted fire extinguishers on the parade as Sir Roden carried out the inspection.

The governor's suite, and those of officers shielding him, were splattered with tomatoes.

Quebec Steps Up Efforts To End Teachers' Dispute

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec government stepped up its efforts to terminate a lengthy contract dispute with its 70,000 teachers Wednesday after nearly 1,500 teachers staged one-day strikes in various parts of the province.

Marcel Masse, minister without portfolio in charge of the civil service, met heads of teacher unions and school board associations in Quebec City while 34,000 students enjoyed an unscheduled holiday.

The province's teachers have been without a working contract since last July. Their current contract dispute began in mid-1967.

About 1,000 Catholic teachers left their classrooms in suburban Repentigny, in St. Jerome north of Montreal and in the Baie des Chaleurs region of the Gaspe region in eastern Quebec.

Nearly 500 Protestant teachers also walked out of 20 schools, seven in the St. Jerome region and 13 in an area southwest of Montreal extending as far as the Ontario and U.S. borders.

PLAN MONDAY WALKOUT

Protestant teachers in the Hull-Ottawa region plan to hold one-day walkouts Monday.

Meanwhile, teachers in the Quebec City region have intensified their efforts to have the dispute resolved quickly.

About 100 French-speaking, Roman Catholic teachers—all members of the 60,000-strong Quebec Teachers Corporation—occupied the QTC's offices in Quebec City Tuesday.

The teachers, calling for a stronger hand against the government and the school boards, said Wednesday they will organize a march Saturday on the legislature and the offices of the Federation of School Commissions.

A full-scale strike later this month has been threatened by several teacher units across the province but the Quebec government says it will block any such action.

The government is insisting on a single, uniform contract covering all 70,000 teachers.

New Evidence That Water Lies Beneath Moon Surface

By VICTOR COHN

WASHINGTON (WP)—There is "strong new evidence" that twelve great cratered areas on the moon—the largest of them 600 miles across—may once have been seas filled with water, a space scientist has reported here.

Paul M. Muller of California Institute of Technology's noted Jet Propulsion Laboratory added, that if this is so there may very well be "mineable, obtainable" water close beneath the moon's surface, trapped as ice between lunar particles.

If that also is true, he went on, "if water is present, it would be the most important natural resource we could find. It would mean we could build a self-sufficient base perhaps 10 times as easily as otherwise. We could make rocket fuel for further-out voyages. We would not have to haul water there."

Muller also said that "whether or not we find water may decide" from a dollar standpoint if man can afford a moon base.

JPL is the National Aeronautics and Space Administration facility (operated by Caltech under contract) that has flown all the unmanned surveyor and orbiter craft that scouted and photographed the moon.

A JPL group under Dr. James Bell, Muller disclosed, is about to make an intense study of the lunar water question — and whether or not a future moon-landing mission should seek water.

CONTROVERSIAL

Muller's lunar hypothesis, stated before the American Physical Society, is controversial. Many authorities think that lava from volcanoes and not water carved the moon's sea and river-like features.

But the theory that ocean waves and rivers did much of the job has been rekindled by a striking discovery, as Muller reported.

This was a finding by Muller and fellow mathematician Paul Sjogren, from their analysis of unexpected wobbles in the flight paths of spacecraft that circled the moon. These wobbles told them there are mysterious mass concentrations—"mascons" for short beneath the surface.

Last August the JPL men reported detecting six such mascons—great, heavy masses of material, probably including nickel-iron alloys from meteorites. This month JPL scientists report detecting six more.

All 12, Muller said, are beneath so-called ringed craters, indicating:

- The moon may have been hit 4½ billion years ago, in the same era as the formation of the earth, with at least these 12 chunks of material, perhaps pieces of earth debris or space debris as big as 100 miles across.
- These bodies struck at the present sites of the ringed craters, and there water concentrated—perhaps condensed from hot gases released through rocks and volcanoes as the then-new moon began to cool.
- Dense materials from the moon's mantle also flowed into the craters to help produce the "mass concentrations" or "gravity highs" JPL found.
- Water action gradually eroded out the ringed basins. But all the surface water eventually disappeared because the moon's gravity (one sixth of earth) was not enough to hold an atmosphere.

The mascons are among moon features which can throw off moon navigation. And they helped make NASA planners decide to fly another Apollo flight around the moon in mid-may before attempting a July landing.

Local Students To Present Art Display

Art by youth will go on display at the provincial museum tonight in an 18-day show assembled from all schools in the district.

Tonight to Saturday, school band concerts will enhance the program and students will demonstrate art techniques. Both show and concerts are free.

Retiring school superintendent Joseph Chell and his wife are guests of honor at the official opening, scheduled for 7 p.m. in the Newcombe Auditorium.

Show hours Friday and Saturday are 10 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. with demonstrations and music starting at 4:30 p.m. and a concert in the auditorium at 8 p.m. Sunday the show hours are 1:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m.

The balance of the show will be open during regular museum hours. The museum is closed Mondays.

Creditistes Press Assault On Abortion Law Changes

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's omnibus bill amending the Criminal Code inched forward in the Commons Wednesday with one opposition amendment defeated on a voice vote and two others on recorded votes.

Still facing the House at the report stage of the 120-clause bill are several amendments to its abortion section and three dealing with penal reform.

The bill still faces a major debate at third reading.

Creditiste members continued Wednesday to press for changes in the bill's controversial section which would allow abortions where the health or the life of the mother is in danger.

Other parties have taken part in the debate but not often and attendance in the House for the last three days has generally moved slightly above the quorum of 20 members, including the Speaker.

Defeated on voice vote Wednesday was a Creditiste amendment requiring written consent of a parent or guardian for an abortion on an unmarried minor.

Justice Minister John Turner argued that the bill deals only with medical aspects of abortion and does not interfere with civil law requirements for authorization which may be in force in the provinces.

REJECTS AMENDMENT

Mr. Turner also rejected a Creditiste amendment that would restrict abortions to hospitals with at least 400 beds or which are part of a university.

He said the Creditistes have no confidence in Canada's smaller hospitals. They were not ready to grant women in rural Quebec the same rights as those in metropolitan centres.

Gerard Laprise (Creditiste—Abitibi), who proposed the amendement, said his party accepts the advice of doctors who feel abortions should not be performed in small centres where "everybody knows everybody else."

Gaston Clermont (L—Gatineau) won support from three fellow Liberals, 15 Conservatives and 12 Creditistes in a vote called on his amendment which would have restricted abortions to cases where the danger to the health or life of a mother is certain.

The remaining 98 Liberals had support from 25 Conservatives and 21 New Democrats in voting down the amendment 143 to 31.

The Conservative also split in a vote on an amendment by Georges Valade (PC—Montreal St Marie) which would have limited the time for an abortion to the period between implantation in the uterus and conception.

The amendment was defeated 147 to 26 with 25 Conservatives and 20 New Democrats joining 102 Liberals in voting against it. In favor were 15 Conservatives and 11 Creditistes.

LOWERING voting age to 18 as method of rechannelling energies of young people and giving them responsibility is proposal of Senator David Croll, a Liberal member of the Upper House from Ontario.

STUDENT SENATORS INCREASED AT UBC

VANCOUVER (CP)—The senate of the University of British Columbia decided Wednesday night to increase the number of senators to 101 from 85, and triple the number of student senators to 12.

The increased student representation followed complaints by the four student senators of overwork on the 17 senate committees.

Student senator Stuart Rush said students should have proportional representation and at least half the seats on senate.

In other business, it was announced that Vancouver businessman Allan M. McGavin will be installed as UBC chancellor May 31 as part of the convocation.

Dean Walter Gage was given an ovation as he chaired his first senate meeting as UBC president.

"The applause may be longer than the period of my tenure," he said.

'Now Is the Time' Favorite Phrase Of Garden Writers

By KATHARINE WHITEHORN

LONDON—For the ordinary half-yearly gardener, the year is nine months long.

It starts in March, with crocuses, whose function is simply to catch the gardener's attention before the weeds are already in charge. In April we see with surprise and pleasure that some of the bulbs have actually come up—some in flower, others lying on the earth where the squirrel has left them. In May we buy bedding plants, many of which die and in June we sit back and look at the roses. By August, a month designed by God for coinciding with the school holidays and offering nothing much but seed pods and greenfly, we have written off this year and a dream of our plans for next—next August, that is, it being as hard to think of a season you aren't in as to remember one tune while whistling another. In October we may have a fit of passionate destruction, but by November nothing in the world would get us out at all—except, of course, the arrival of all those blasted plants we idiotically ordered in August.

Not so the experts. They have their own year altogether. They have, for example, this ritual April keening about the state of the lawn. In real life people either pay no attention to the lawn at all until you actually can't see whether you've left the tea things out or not. or they tea things out or not; or they up dandelions, purging the moss, abolishing couch grass. The main difference between the two is that the neglected lawn is always green with plantains, while the cared-for one is generally yellow with weedkiller.

On Ground Fully Prepared

By August they are bothering about next year's tulips, for heaven's sake; and in the autumn they are in their element, laying all those fuses which will blow us up next spring: as Geoffrey Taylor of the Guardian says, what puts one off gardening in the spring is the way the experts say, 'On ground which had been fully prepared in the autumn. . . .' For a short time in November, when actual gardens are dark and sour, the columns bloom with an exotic profusion of little-known lilies, hothouse orchids and miniature trees. but the all-time record in space filling is held by George Seddon who, at the time of some riots in the British Embassy garden in Moscow, wrote a richly factual piece about how to make your garden demonstrator-proof.

There is a moment of relief around Christmas, when they recommend presents ('for gardening in the lounge a plastic watering-can,' said the Times), but after that they go clean off their heads. Scrape the bark off your fruit trees, they urge hysterically; or they tell us what to do with the undershelves in the greenhouse. Winter pruning was presumably invented to give them something to write about in January other than gnomes and fencing; even as it is they urge you to do ridiculous things like getting the mower fixed before the others do, and oiling the blades of hoes: anyway, how can you oil them in January? They're all wet. Experts make appalling use of the phrase: 'Now is the time to,' the man can't surely mean now, while I'm sitting in front of the fire reading his newspaper? Time enough, surely: like my friend who came in for tea one cold March day and said: 'I've done a month's work out there today. Only trouble is, the month was November.'

Care Must Be Taken

Their very language is defeating to most of us. There is this use of the passive voice: 'Care must be taken not to allow plants to dry out . . .' Imagine yelling 'Care must be taken not to walk on the flower-beds' at your children. They make unconscious assumptions about our resources, with talk of potting-up, hardening-off, or taking out a seed drill; even the humane ones suggest moving this or that to spare bed, which one would no doubt be happy to do if someone didn't happen to be spending the night in it.

And they make inexorable use of the decent obscurity of a learned language. Roy Hay saying 'People wishing to plant a variegated shrub tend to think of Elaeginus pungens maculata' (they do?) is almost enough to make one join Frances Perry's crusade for avoiding the ugly Latin descriptions (like aster and veronica) and sticking only to our lovely native names (like bonytip fleabane and sneezeweed).

The gardening writers have. I'm told, a very depressing postbag, all about what to do with dark, muddy corners in exceptionally cold parts of Yorkshire. For all that, there are the questions we dare not ask. How long, for example, will bedding plants keep in the boot of the car, given a grey week, a drying wind and acid fumes of about Ph4? When you have caught the slugs in the orange skins and dropped them in the salt water, what do you then do with the resulting slug-and-saltwater cocktail? (Pulling the plug is no answer—small gritty stones stay in the bowl for weeks.) Will last year's seeds, filed and forgotten, come up if planted or not?

And, above all, how do you tell when anything is dead? If you dig it up and throw it on the compost it will flower there happily; but otherwise? The other day I rushed in on my husband crying, "Peace is not dead!"; it gave him quite a turn, he thought I was a student. What, indeed, to do about him, and the fact that no one does any digging except me and that blasted squirrel?

The gardening writers are, when all's said and done, up against a hopeless paradox. Half the time we just want things to produce as much color for as little effort as possible. In this mood, we want paving stones and not grass, shrubs as tolerant as a sailor's wife, bedding plants and no greenhouse; we go eagerly for plants condemned as "invasive," buy all-purpose sprays for the insects and absolutely never get the staking done in time.

But the very fact that we're at it at all implies another side: a side in which we positively wallow in trouble. Then those footling jobs like stopping the chrysanthemums and disbudding sweet peas become fun;

Dressed in traditional Norwegian costumes, the Gilstein family and their group rehearse for a performance of songs and dances. Accompanied by Rolf Gilstein on the accordion, they will entertain during a buffet supper May 10 to raise funds for the Children's International Summer Village to be held in Victoria this summer. Pictured are, seated from left, Ruby Jorde, Margaret Gilstein and Freida Gilstein, and standing, Rolf Gilstein, Asle Jorde, Hans Myhre, Andy Gilstein, Russell Smith and Eleanor Smith. The supper is sponsored by Children's International Summer Villages and the Association of Childhood Education International.

Buffet to Aid Children's Summer Village

Organizers of the children's international village to be held in Victoria this summer need $15,000.

They need it to feed, entertain and house 60 people from nine different countries who will be in Victoria this summer.

Most of those people will be 11-year-olds attending the only Children's International Summer Village to be held in Canada this year.

The village, to be set up at Westerham school on Rockland Ave. is being organized by the 12-member local chapter of the Children's International Summer Villages and the 24-member local branch of the Association of Childhood Education International.

Since the local CISV group started in 1963 they have sponsored two villages. One in 1965, was held at Shawnigan Lake.

The goal of the international villages—there are chapters in 50 countries — is promoting peace and fellowship among children of different nations.

"We choose 11-year-olds," said president Mrs. Kay Hilton, "because they are most flexible at that age. They have not taken on the prejudices of adult life and they don't pay attention to the color of a person's skin".

"We will direct some of our money and time to the village this year as it so closely goes along with our theme," said Mrs. J. Pettersen, president of the local group.

But back to the $15,000.

Some of it will come in the form of government grants. Some will come in private donations.

"The rest we'll have to raise," said Mrs. Hilton.

One fund-raising event will be a buffet supper to be held May 10 from 6:30 p.m. to 9 p.m. in the First United Church hall on Balmoral Avenue.

Fourteen different national dishes will be served and entertainment will be provided by a Norwegian family, the Andy Gilsteins.

Recently four Victoria area children, Chuck Ferguson, David Work, Bonnie Carpenter and Kathy Feltham were chosen to act as hosts to the visiting children.

"We chose bright, interested children but they aren't necessarily members of the CISV," she said. She explained that the organization has a loose membership and the only commond bond is an interest in international fellowship.

The theme this year for the Association of Childhood Education International is education around the world—which explains this group's interest in the village.

Student Designers Stay Conservative

NEW YORK (AP) — A peek into fashion's future indicates the well-dressed woman of 1979 may not look much different from her style-conscious sister of today.

The Parsons School of Design offered that peek Wednesday when it presented its annual fashion show of clothes created by its graduating students.

The would-be Norman Norells and Chester Weinbergs generally chose conservative shapes and styles. Skirts were extremely short or down-to-the-floor, no midis or maxis. Shapes were fitted through the bust and waist with free-flowing skirts.

The youngsters also scorned the see-through look, although they bared much of the body with cut-outs and halter tops. Simple jersey dresses, with a bib in front and lacing in back were offered in black, burgundy and navy for both day and evening wear by several students.

There were fewer pants than one might have expected from students of the trouser revolution. When slacks were presented, they always formed part of an ensemble, topped by tunics, sleeveless vests or tweed suit jackets.

One unusual costume included a black-and-white tweed wool dress worn over white linen shorts which peeped out for about an inch under the hem of the skirt.

Among the hits of the show was a simple evening shirtwaist with short skirt. The front of the dress was made of layers of white organdy, the back of black velvet.

Proceeds to Pave Parking Lot

Young soloists will sing for a paved parking lot when the Women's Guild of St. David's-by-the-Sea hold their annual spring sale and tea Saturday at 2 p.m. at the church hall. During the tea hour, Cathy John, who came in second in the sacred solo class at the recent music festival, will sing her prize-winning number. Also singing will be Allison Newberry and Laura Coomber. Tea will be served all afternoon and there will be many stalls including plants, miscellaneous articles and a home-cooking stall that will feature delicatessen dishes.

Army Women Attending Annual Corps Meeting

Eighteen Victoria members of the Canadian Women's Army Corps will attend an annual corps conference in Vancouver Saturday.

The one-day meeting will be devoted to a discussion of CWAC training and administrative matters of concern to all units in the province.

The contingent, led by Captain Diana McBratney, represents 155 Company of the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps and the Canadian Scottish Regiment, both headquartered at the Bay Street Armory.

A new rifle marksmanship trophy, struck by Colonel D. N. D. Deane-Freeman, who recently retired from the Canadian Armed Forces as Commender Pacific Region in Vancouver, will be presented by him at the conference mess dinner.

To be awarded annually, the first CWAC team to receive it will be one from 15 Field Regiment, Royal Canadian Artillery, Vancouver. Of the seven entered in the competition three Victoria teams placed third, fourth and fifth.

Tired Bride-to-Be Makes a Confession

By PENNY SAVER

The girl from down the street was looking tired and disconsolate as she wrestled her parcels off the bus. I saved one that was about to hit the ground and invited her to my house, almost a block closer to the stop than hers, for a coffee "In the words of that now famous cowboy—Thanks, I needed that," she quipped after her first swig of the steaming brew. "Honestly, Mrs. Saver, I never thought getting married would be so complicated. It's a wonder I haven't lost my mind while juggling guest lists and catering needs with one hand and flowers and the soloist with the other. And the expense! When I think of how far I am putting Dad in the red I wish we had eloped. I'm helping out with my own savings, of course, but they are limited. I've hit every sale I could find for my trouseau and now I'm looking for a jewelry sale so I can get a bit of a bargain on my gifts to my attendants."

It just so happens that I know of a sale of cultured pearls that will continue until the middle of May. Cultured pearls come for the most part from Japan, where beds of oysters are injected with grit then left to do their pearly thing. I'm no judge of pearls, excellence thereof, but these look suitably pearly and to my untrained eye seem well matched as to color and size when they appear in strands.

Moreover they are substantially reduced in price just when people want to buy items of this sort as wedding gifts, Mother's day gifts, graduation gifts, or spring birthday gifts.

Prices Reduced a Third

Regularly the pearl necklaces this shop carries range from $36 for one short strand of pearls to $190 for necklaces using many more, much larger pearls. While this sale lasts these same strands of pearls will range from $24 to $130—approximately one third off.

Rings that regularly sell for $22.70 are now priced at $15.50. I saw two that are lovely, both set in 10 carat gold. One has a solitary pearl set in a sweep of gold that rises up around it like a wave, or the buttress of a Gothic cathedral. Another has three pearls set in a row and echoing their shape are loops of gold—very plain, but very effective.

For only $5 there are ear-posts in 14 carat gold. Each is topped with a solitary pearl. These earrings regularly sell for $7.59.

In keeping with the plain look are pendant necklaces in silver each fine chain holds a single pearl. These necklaces regularly sell for $15 but are now priced at $10.

If you would like to know where to find this sale on cultured pearl jewelry please call 382-3131 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m.

THE NO-GIMMICK DIET

Increased Exercise Compliments Effective Diet

By WINNIFRED C. JARDINE

Tenth in a Series

The heavy state of the nation — weight-wise, that is — can be pretty much chalked up to two things: Too much food and too little exercise.

Doctors agree that hand in hand with a program of dieting there must also be a program of increased exercise, if real success is to be attained.

The push-button era in which we live is a breeding ground for overweight women.

Where she once washed and dried her dishes, put her wash through a band wringer or even scrubbed it on a wash board and hung it out to dry, Mrs. Homemaker now merely pushes buttons to have these jobs done. She is deprived of much of the exercise her mother and grandmother had.

Dr. Herbert Pollack, professor of medicine at George Washington University, has estimated that this semi-automation in and around the house denies the average homemaker the chance to use up about 1,000 calories a day — calories that could turn into fat at the rate of 1 pound every 3½ days!

Every action and movement of our bodies uses up some of the calories we acquire in our eating. If we eat more calories than the activity of bodies can use up, those extra calories turn to fat. If we eat less calories than the activity of our body needs, then it uses some of our excess fat and we lose weight.

One-half hour of skiing requires as many calories of energy to perform as are supplied by a piece of apple pie. The problem, obviously, is that it takes only a minute to eat the pie, while the full 30 minutes of hard skiing are required to use it up.

For this reason, exercise alone cannot be counted on to do the whole job of trimming down weight. But increased activity along with a decrease in food intake makes a winning program of weight-losing.

Even without engaging in some special vigorous sport each day, a woman can increase physical activity around the house.

Instead of sitting to watch TV she can spend an hour outside watching the children at their play and it will burn an extra 80 calories. (If she plays hard with them, the number of calories used will go up.)

By walking a mile to do an errand, she can utilize another 80 calories.

Washing and drying dishes for the day's three meals burn up another 120 calories. Bending, stooping, and chasing the baby for an hour can account for 150 to 200 calories.

In her recreation, she can go bowling instead of spending the afternoon at "dessert and bridge." And she can instigate a program for the family of more sledding and shuffle board and fewer movies with popcorn.

As mentioned, no woman can count on exercise alone for trimming her down. But regular exercise over the period of a year along with constant care in the eating department could mean the equivalent of six or seven pounds of body weight gained or lost.

Rumor to the contrary, there seems to be little evidence that increased activities offer much stimulation to the appetite. The old excuse for avoiding exercise "that it makes me eat more anyway" is not sound, according to medical authorites.

But while it may not sharpen appetites appreciably, exercise does stimulate thirst, and it should be noted here that the best way to quench a thirst anytime, but particularly during a period of reducing, is with water.

In the first place, the body needs from six to eight glasses of water each day for its best functioning, but few of us get it unless we use water to quench our thirst.

Secondly, the beverages we use as thirst-quenchers, (milk, fruit juice, carbonated beverages, punch, etc.) not only rob us of the water we should be getting, but they also add extra calories to our daily intake.

And unless these beverages have been planned for in the daily menu plans — even the highly nutritious ones such as milk and fruit juice can throw us off our diet pattern.

DEAR ABBY . . .

His Boat Hobby Makes Her Sick!

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: All of a sudden, my husband loves sailing more than anything in the world. I thought it would be fun, but after we got a boat I found that I was terrified to go out on the lake in it.

Last summer I really tried, but my stomach was tied in knots every time I was on the boat and I just couldn't enjoy myself.

My husband knows how I feel, but he just gets mad and says if I gave myself a chance I'd learn to like it. Well, I have tried, and I just can't. I think I should tell you that my husband never sailed before we were married.

We've been married for three years and have two little ones. I really love my husband, but I don't want to sail with him.

Another thing. Now he's talking about getting a bigger boat for $5,000. Don't you think he's selfish to invest that kind of money in a hobby only he enjoys?—Hates Sailing.

DEAR HATES: If you've honestly tried to sail, and can't, you shouldn't be forced to go. I don't know how much your husband can afford to spend, but $5,000 seems high for a hobby only he enjoys. I'd say your marriage was headed for troubled waters, so you had better set sail for some marriage counselling.

DEAR ABBY: This man I'm going with claims that he is a "confirmed bachelor"—and there isn't a woman living who could change his mind. Is this possible?—Jan.

DEAR JAN: Yes. He's the kind of man who is convinced that the only vital marriage was the one that produced him.

CONFIDENTIAL TO H.F.B.: Beauty is a gift. Charm must be cultivated. A very perceptive man once said, "A beautiful woman is one I notice. A charming woman is one who notices ME."

Widow Tries to Vindicate the Villainous Pancho Villa

By TERRANCE W. McGARRY

HIDALGO DEL PARRAL, Mexico (UPI) — Through the grey hair and the wrinkles, you can still see the image of the 17-year-old girl who strode into the northern Mexican sunshine that day in 1910, heart beating wildly, to plead for the lives of her parents with Pancho Villa.

And wound up marrying him.

To this day, there are few official monuments in Mexico to the bandit-guerrilla who blazed a trail of death and legend across the sun-seared deserts of northern Mexico during the revolutionary days. Some old enemies still live and controversy still surrounds his name.

But the outstanding monument is his widow, Senora Luz Villa, a lively lady of 75, who has dedicated her life to vindicating the bloodstained memory of "Dear Pancho."

She remembers the day they met. A screenwriter might hesitate to use the real version. It was too much like a movie.

"My parents had a general store in the little town of San Andres," she recalled in an interview. "On Nov. 21, 1910, Pancho rode into town at the head of his troops, several hundred of them on horseback, and one of his captains came into the store, covered with dust.

"He asked my mother for a loan of the money in the till. We were very frightened, because we had only a little money and said we needed that to pay our debts in Chihuahua city.

"'I will report this to the man outside,' said the captain."

(Many storekeepers and ranchers were summarily shot by Villa for refusing such "loans," although the loyal widow Villa would not refer to the killings.)

"I went with him. My mother thought we would be robbed of all we had. The captain took me to Pancho, and I told him how little money we had, and how we needed it. He said, 'Okay, then just give me your food stock to feed my boys. They're wore out.'

WEDDING DAY

"That was how we met. Six months later, in May, 1911, we were married in our village church. A funny thing happened first. I went into Camargo City to buy a wedding dress, but the one I wanted at the store was already sold, the sales girl said.

"Then she took down our names to embroider on the wedding sash, as was the custom in those days. When the store manager heard I was marrying Pancho Villa he came rushing over, wringing his hands and apologizing. I got the dress afer all.

"We returned to San Andres aboard a train loaded with Pancho's men, and many friends, with a band playing on a flatcar. There were some Amerians along, including a Mr. McClain, an old friend of Pancho's.

"Pancho said, 'Let's go take a look at the church.' While we were there, good Father Munoz, anxious to do his duty, approached Pancho, and asked him whether he wanted to confess his sins before the wedding.

"Pancho replied: 'Look, to hear my confession, Padre, you would need at least eight days, and I've only got two days for this wedding Besides, it would take a bigger heart than mine to tell you all the things the good Lord has given me licence to do. But if you want to, Padre, just add up all the sins in a pile, absolve me of the words, and we're quits.' (Pongale a monton que iguale, absuelvamey y arreglados.)

SACRILEGIOUS

"Pancho's words struck me as sacrilegious, and the good padre hurried away, holding his ears."

"The next morning, with the church filled with Pancho's men and many cowboys from the surrounding ranches, I bound my life to his, and even after all these years that morning seems like yesterday."

She still lives in Hidalgo Del Parral, the town where Villa was cut down by ambushers, armed with 30-30 carbines, as he rode down the main street one hot July afternoon in 1923 in a Dodge touring car.

She keeps a museum there of Villa relics, including the bullet-riddled auto. Since then she has been a benefactor to the "Dorados," the men who followed her husband on his breakneck cavalry campaigns. She provides scholarship funds for their children and grandchildren to go to college, sending some to study in Denver and in San Antonio, Tex.

Four decades of work by the widow and the survivors of Villa's band paid off two years ago when the Mexican Congress — after long and bitter debate — declared Villa an official hero of the Mexican revolution 1910.

Although his battles played a large part in winning the revolution, he was denied such recognition earlier. His opponents charged he was more a bloodthirsty bandit than a soldier (he massacred prisoners in groups of up to 80), brought American troops to Mexico by his grudge attack against Columbus, N.M., and went on fighting against the government the revolution established. One of the chief speakers against the bill was an old Congressman who, as a young cavalry officer, led a government campaign against Villa.

When it became obvious the bill would pass, the surviving villistas chartered airplanes and buses and poured into Mexico City from the Chihuahua homeland to pack the galleries of the congress. Greyhaired, bald, wrinkled, some hobbling with arthritis, they bore little resemblance to the wild band that terrorized the north half a century ago.

But as the votes mounted up on the floor below, they broke out trumpets and fiddles, and filled the building with the songs they sang around desert campfires, and riding freight trains to battle when they were young.

"It was one of the greatest days of my life," Senora Villa said.

Brentwood Women Plan Dogwood Tea Saturday

Members of Brentwood College Memorial Chapel ACW are sponsoring a dogwood tea and bazaar to be held Saturday, from 2 to 4:30 p.m. in the dining room and lounge of Brenta Lodge, Brentwood Drive.

Archdeacon E. A. Maddocks will open the tea, which is being convened by the evening branch. There will be stalls of home cooking, needlework, plants, books, children's gifts and miscellaneous items. Mrs. A. S. McNeil, president of the afternoon branch, will welcome guests.

Woman Works For Union

TORONTO (CP) — Olive Chester, an employee of a labor union, has fought other unions for better pay for their own hired help.

She has worked with Local 343 of the Office and Professional Employees' International Union for about 12 years. As business representative she is concerned with 100 agreements—of which all but three are with other unions.

Most agreements cover the one or two girls who are employed by other unions in their offices across Canada. Her job, supposed to be part-time, often takes up to 40 hours a week.

"I don't find it easy to say no, so the job just keeps growing," she told an interviewer. Rather than say no, she now is quitting her job.

The new business agent is Beth Collen, 27, who has worked with the Canadian Labour Congress in Toronto and Ottawa. She is married and has three children. Besides working and raising her family, she is working on a bachelor of arts degree.

Mrs. Chester said that dealing with other unions doesn't make the job any easier. Some union negotiators are as tough as the management of the firms they work for.

Mrs. Chester said proudly that many of the clerk-typists in her local earn from $85 to $115 a week and secretaries generally earn from $120 to $150 a week. She has fought for better fringe benefits, too, and most local members work a 32½-hour week.

Of women in non-union offices she said: "They're scared. . . . A boss in an office can get closer in his coercion, and the threats are far more real than they are in a plant with the guys on an assembly line. Office workers have no job security.

Mystery Woman Returns Treasures

OCEANSIDE, Calif. (AP)—A woman walked into San Luis Rey mission with two packages wrapped in newspapers under her arm. Without identifying herself, she set them down and left. The packages contained a 345-year-old oil painting and an 18th century crucifix stolen from the Roman Catholic mission in 1965. Rev. Valentine Healy said both were in good condition.

LEGAL FORUM

Common Law, Divorce, Landlords Highlight Questions to Lawyers

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

A common law wife has no legal status.

But she has a claim to property owned by herself and her common law husband if she has advanced money to purchase the joint property.

Victoria lawyer Marney Stevenson made this clear in answer to a question in the McPherson Playhouse Wednesday night.

She was speaking at the fourth annual Legal Forum sponsored by the Victoria Daily Times, Radio Station CJVI and the Vicotira Bar Association.

Every seat was taken in advance, the theatre was packed and the two-hour program of questions and answers was broadcast by CJVI.

Mr. Justice Alan Macfarlane, former Liberal member for Oak Bay in the B.C. Legislature, was moderator.

The panellists were lawyers Gerald A. Neeley, Cecil O. D. Branson, Mrs. Stevenson and Bruce K. Aldridge.

Parents Responsible

What responsibility do parents have for the acts of an 18-year-old child no longer living at home?

This was one of 24 advance questions placed before the panel.

Cecil Branson said parents are responsible if the boy or girl commits damage to property, injures another party or incurs debts.

"You cannot escape liability for the acts of a minor," he said.

What protection do you have if you are the holder of a second mortgage which is not being paid?

Branson said the only protection is to ask the court for a foreclosure on the second mortgage.

"Otherwise you are liable," he said.

Is a handwritten will acceptable in the courts?

"Yes," said Mr. Justice Macfarlane, "but the will must have two witnesses to it — that is two signatures by authenticated persons, signed at the time the will was made."

Eviction Problem

Can a landlord evict me if I am two months in arrears with my rent?

"He can make an application to the court for possession. But he must notify the tenant he is doing so, in order that the tenant can give his side of the case," answered Mrs. Stevenson.

Can a buyer back out of a real estate deal within 48 hours with no penalty?

Mr. Justice Macfarlane said the buyer has the right to withdraw from an agreement provided he has not put his signature to a binding document.

If he thinks he has been deceived into signing such a document, he was the right of appeal to the courts.

Is it possible to evict a tenant for being noisy and destructive?

"However noisy or destructive the tenant may be you must give him a month's noice to quit," said Bruce Alderidge.

"You cannot tell him to leave immediately. But you can call the police if he is destructive."

Raising of Rent

My landlord has raised my rent three times in the past year. Is there any law against this?

"The relationship between landlord and tenant is something we have inherited from medieval England," said Mr. Justice Macfarlane.

"It is uncertain and confusing. There is no law against rent increase unless you have a lease in which the rent is specified."

Questioned as to the difference between a decree nisi and a decree absolute in a divorce action, Mrs. Stevenson replied:

"There is a 90-day waiting period before a decree nisi becomes a decree absolute. The parties involved cannot remarry until th edecree absolute is granted."

"If I haven't seen my husband for 20 years, can I assume I am free?" asked a woman in the audience.

"You can ask the court for an order granting presumption of death," said Mrs. Stevenson. "But legally you are still married and must make application for divorce before you are free to marry again."

Separated in Home

Can a man or woman sue for divorce on grounds of separation if they are living in the same house?

Yes, said Mrs. Stevenson, provided they can show they have lived completely separate lives—with separate bedrooms and separate meals. Divorces have been granted to persons living under the same roof.

Can a police officer enter your home without a search warrant?

"No," said Cecil Branson, "except in a case where the police have good grounds for suspecting you have drugs or illegal apparatus, such as a whisky still, on your premises."

The questions and answers were given in a light-hearted, good-humored yet earnest fashion.

Some of the questions sounded naive and the answers obvious—but the lawyers gave no indication they thought so. They spoke simply in a language that could be understood by almost anyone.

Several out-of-town visitors attended and one was James K. Milhurst, a chartered accountant, of Bellingham, Wash.

"This is a unique event," he said, "and I wish we could have something like it in Bellingham. "To people involved in the law and public life, some of the questions may sound naive.

"But to persons living a sheltered life—particularly elderly people—there is often much confusion on legal matters. And small issues can become major worries."

At the close, Mr. Justice Macfarlane said he regretted that "a whole raft" of questions submitted in writing during the second half could not be answered because time had run out.

"But we do appreciate your confidence in asking us to give you legal opinions on so many different subjects," he said.

John C. Cowan, president of Victoria Bar Association, said he was "very pleased" with the forum.

"We tried to keep it bright," he said, "because it's difficult to keep an audience interested in legal matters for two hours.

"The general reaction we've had, both from those in the theatre and those who were listening on the air, is very favorable."

Stronghold Faces New Assault

LAGOS (Reuters) — Federal Nigerian troops, ousted from the Ibo tribal stronghold of Owerri after several weeks of siege by Biafrans, are regrouping for another strike on the strategic city, informed military sources said today.

They said units of the 16th Brigade of the federal 3rd Marine Commando Division have taken up positions on Owerri's outskirts and are awaiting final orders to attack secessionist troops.

The federals lost Owerri to the Biafrans about two weeks ago after being besieged in the city since the beginning of March. It had been held by federal forces since September.

The city commands the main roads to federal-held Port Harcourt, 45 miles south, and the vital Biafran airstrip at Uli-Ihiala, about 30 miles north.

In an interview published today in the Nigerian Daily Times, Lt.-Col. Utuk, commander of the troops which pulled out of Owerri, denied Biafran claims that most of the 1,500 federal troops encircled in Owerri were killed.

Births Increase, Marriages Drop Say Vital Stats

OTTAWA (CP) — There were more births in Canada during the first quarter of the year than in the same period of 1968, while marriages and deaths declined, Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today.

The 29,990 births in March raised the total for the first three months to 90,190, which is 2.6 per cent higher than the first quarter of 1968 but 3.9 per cent below the three-year average pace from 1966 to 1968.

A total 7,732 couples had March weddings, bringing the first-quarter total to 26,307, down 1.9 per cent from last year but 9.6 per cent ahead of the average during the previous three years.

Deaths numbered 12,694 in March and 40,910 in the quarter, down 2.8 per cent from the 1968 quarter, and up by three per cent from the three-year rate.

POWER FAILURE SEES HYSTERIA

SYDNEY (UPI)—A 45-min. power blackout this afternoon brought hysteria and confusion to Sydney.

Business and industry came to a standstill, railway services halted trapping hundreds underground as emergency services failed.

Thousands were caught in elevators, causing hysteria. Banks employed emergency security measures and many radio stations went off the air.

Electric clocks stopped at 2:19 p.m. when a bulldozer cut a cable in a Sydney suburb.

Oldest Mountie Dies at 92

The oldest surviving member of the North West Mounted Police died here Tuesday at the age of 92.

Lt.-Col. Christian Junget joined the NWMP in 1898 after immigrating from Denmark, and served most of his career in western Canada.

He rose through the ranks and later became RCMP assistant-commissioner for the Maritimes.

He lived in Victoria since retirement in 1935, and was a member of the RCMP Veterans Association. He was honored in Canada as Knight Commander of the Temple for Preceptory, and was also a member of the Azhan Temple, Calgary.

Lt.-Col Junget is survived by two daughters, Mrs. T. D. (Catherine) McClaren and Mrs. G. A. (Margaret) Robertson, both of Victoria, and four grandchildren and a sister in Denmark.

Grenade Kills Four

SAIGON (Reuters) — Four Buddhists were killed Wednesday night and 25 injured when a grenade was thrown into a crowded temple in the Mekong Delta during a service, a South Vietnamese government spokesman said today.

Passport Chaos Charged

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition MPs charged Wednesday there is confusion and chaos in the government passport office and that the government had failed to prepare for it.

Max Saltsman (NDP-Waterloo) said the Commons is in danger of bogging down because MPs are almost totally occupied with looking after constituents' passport problems.

The complaints came after External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp announced in the Commons a series of moves designed to speed handling of passports.

Mr. Sharp said the office last week received 12,000 applications and this volume is expected to continue with only slight easing until mid-June.

He realized this caused inconvenience and said several measures have been taken to reduce delays:

Additional accomooation was being added to the passport office.

Nine departmental staffers with experience in the work were being lent to the office, and 27 students who worked there last summer would be returning.

Daily overtime had been increased and the staff would work Saturday until the situation is resolved. This change would take into account staff problems and he hoped it would not be required beyond this week.

Three additional telephone lines had been added and the examiner staff hand been reorganized.

An advertising campaign had been launched to help people get passports without delay.

SHOULD BE CAREFUL

Mr. Sharp said applicants could help by starting applications earlier, taking greater care in completing them and making sure required documents, photos and fees were included.

Earlier this week Mr. Sharp turned down a House proposal to postpone the change in procedure announced in January under which new passports are required every five years. Previously a passport could be renewed for a second five-year period.

On Wednesday, he also said that fees are returned to people who cancel passport applications unless the passport has reached the stage where it is being prepared or has been completed.

R. G. L. Fairweather (PC—Fundy-Royal) said the passport office staff members had shown patience while working under intolerable conditions and for intolerable hours.

The changes would have been implemented sooner but for the low priority given to the office by external affairs.

MPs of all parties had been subjected to difficult importunings from citizens but had hesitated to complain for fear of adding to the office's difficulties.

Mr. Fairweather suggested a speed-up of department plans to open regional passport offices in Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver.

Mr. Saltsman said absolute chaos exists in the passport office and the government was unprepared for the rush. People were sitting in every airport in the country waiting for passports that had not and would not come.

The confusion in the passport office was almost beyond belief, with people running around and phones ringing.

CHINESE FREEZE AS RIVER THAWS

MOSCOW (Reuters) — The ice on the Soviet-Chinese Ussuri River has thawed and the Chinese have stopped shelling Damansky Island, scene of fighting between the two countries in March, a Soviet newspaper says.

The on-the-spot report was published in the newspaper Sovietskaya Rossiya.

THANK YOU VICTORIA

The management and staff of Shawnigan Building Supplies Ltd. would like to extend our sincere thanks to our customers who supported us since our disastrous fire last October 30th. These past six months have been difficult what with operating out of cramped quarters and rebuilding our new store. Our customers have suffered inconvenience because of this, but many have been loyal supporters. We have tried hard to give prompt service whilst operating under these conditions and we think you will agree, when you see our modern new store, that our mutual patience has been worthwhile. Shawnigan is proud to offer these sparkling new facilities to the people of Greater Victoria. We think you will enjoy the spaciousness, cleanliness, warmth and excellent stock selection and displays in our new showrooms. Bring your family to Shawnigan this weekend and join in the Grand Opening activities. We feel sure you will like it.

Fisheries Pollution Attack Makes Gains

By PAUL DUNN

OTTAWA (CP) — Despite the growing pollution menace, federal fisheries scientists report good progress in controlling the hazard in their field.

A report in the fisheries department's magazine Fisheries of Canada details the attack on water pollution, mainly on the West Coast. The problems in the Atlantic region are being handled in much the same manner.

Pulp mills present the greatest pollution problem in British Columbia, specially to salmon. About 20 mills are in operation and most are on rivers inhabited by one or more of the five species of Pacific salmon.

Four of the mills are on inland waters beyond tidal influence. Tides help flush out harmful effluent before the oxygen in the water is depleted and toxicity problems develop.

Pulp mills in non-tidal waters use a relatively-simple technique of detoxifying water put back into streams.

Effluent from the mill is discharged into a pond or basin from 12 to 15 feet deep to which nitrogen and phosphorus are added. The basin is seeded with sewage bacteria which digest organisms in the mill effluent and hasten decomposition. The basins are supplied with copious amounts of oxygen.

PESTICIDES PROBLEM

Pesticides are another major B. C. pollutant. These chemicals are used extensively to reduce insect pests, control mosquitoes and protect log booms from attack by boring ambrosia beetles.

Most insect-control programs involve use of chemicals that are highly toxic to fish.

Fisheries scientists advocate avoiding spraying insecticides over streams and river estuaries and, instead, exploiting knowledge of the life cycles of fish species.

Coho salmon fry of the year arrive in waters along the shores of Coichan Lake on Vancouver Island before mid-April. Aerial spraying of log booms with benzenehexachloride to prevent ambrosia attack must precede this date .

In major forest insect-spraying programs, treatment is restricted to areas in which an additional season of pest attack would kill the trees. Use of chemicals which will control pests but not cause acute water toxicity is recommended.

Wastes from mining operations are an increasing problem. Here the danger is finely crushed rock or "tailings" from mining and milling. Large mines discharge up to 20,000 tons of tailings a day.

In a stream, tailings settle and blanket the bottom. Fish such as salmon deposit their eggs in nests on the bottom and the tailings block the percolation of water—and thus oxygen—to the embryonic fish. Organisms which feed fish are also destroyed.

Biologists recommend impounding tailings in ponds adjacent to the mine or mill site and allowing them to settle.

To combat toxic discharges of effluent from manufacturing plants, biologists recommend that spent acid and alkali cleaning solutions be mixed to a degree of neutrality that is not damaging to fishing waters.

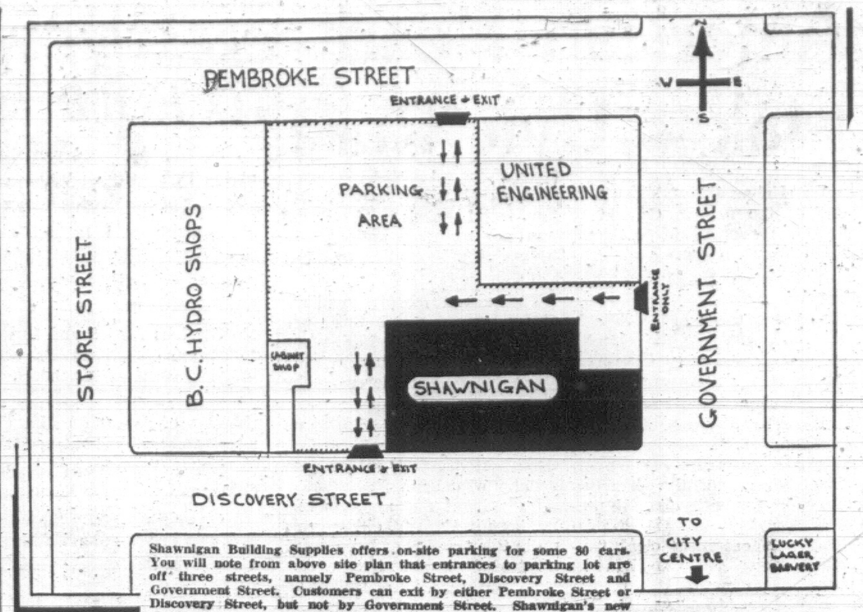
Where flue dust from cement manufacturing causes a pollution problem, the dust may be wetted, partly fed back to the kilns and the remainder neutralized with the carbon monoxide from exhaust gases.

Domestic sewage is not a major problem, and treatment facilities increase with the growth in poplation. However, if facilities do not keep pace, oxygen problems arise in streams and undesirable changes in environment result.

Car Wash Slated

District 108, Junior Forest Wardens, will hold a car wash at Woodward's Service Station, Mayfair, Saturday between 9:30 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Funds collected will be used to assist future organization and their forestry camp near Squamish.



Shawnigan Building Supplies offers on-site parking for some 80 cars. You will note from above site plan that entrances to parking lot are off three streets, namely Pembroke Street, Discovery Street and Government Street. Customers can exit by either Pembroke Street or Discovery Street, but not by Government Street. Shawnigan's new showrooms are designed to allow easy access to merchandise, which makes for easy and fast shopping.

American Head Makes Uvic Rare

The University of Victoria is one of the few in Canada to appoint an American president, according to a survey.

And, when Dr. Bruce Partridge, from Johns Hopkins University, takes office July 1, 41 per cent of the faculty members will be Canadian, which is a 3 per cent decline over the past four years.

A controversy over dwindling numbers of Canadians holding teaching posts in the universities began recently when two Carleton University English professors called on the administration to ensure a clear two-thirds majority of Canadians in every department.

Here's the breakdown of Uvic faculty nationalities from a survey conducted this week by university information officer David Dunsuir:

- Canadian—41 percent;
- American—27 per cent;
- British—23 percent;
- Commonwealth and others—9 per cent.

The influx of Americans is based on the rapidly-expanding needs of the Canadian university system. Instant universities such as Simon Fraser would not have been possible without the availability of large numbers of American scholars to staff their departments.

Academics in this country are now concerned that in areas such as Canadian history and the social sciences American teachers might unthinkingly ignore what is distinctive about Canada.

The percentage of Canadians at Uvic represents a three per cent drop from 1965. The number of Americans, on the other hand, has increased by almost nine per cent.

Dunsmuir based his survey on "where faculty members took their first degree", rather than country of origin.

He pointed out many, while not born in Canada, either grew up in this country or have spent most of their adult lives here.

"If you put a lot of weight on country of origin, you're getting pretty nationalistic."

Like other new universities across the country, Uvic has more than doubled both its faculty and enrolment. When it received its charter in 1963 there were 140 teachers—next fall there will be almost 400.

Salaries in some Canadian schools are higher than they are in many smaller schools in the U.S.

Many American professors say they like the "relaxed climate" of Canadian universities, where they can make more of an impact as individuals, and where they are under less pressure to become Ph. D's or to "publish or perish'.

CREATIVE WRITERS TO HOLD MEET HERE

Seventy poets, playwrights and fiction writers will meet at the University of Victoria next week when the Northwest Manuscript Conference comes to B.C. for the first time.

Students and faculty members from 13 colleges and universities in the U.C. Pacific Northwest will take part in the two-day conference hosted by members of Uvic's creative writing program.

Sessions May 9 and 10 will give students an opportunity to examine each other's work and receive criticism from teachers from other schools.

Two special programs will be open to the public: a showing of poetry on film (May 9), and readings by guest poets (May 10), in Room 144 or the MacLaurin Building.

Films to be shown include two by Montreal poet Leonard Cohen and animator Norman McLaren.

Other films study the work of poets Theodor Roethke, W. B. Yeats and Vernon Watkins.

Tenders Opened

Farmer Construction Ltd. of Victoria has submitted the lowest of four bids for construction of a biology building for the University of Victoria.

Tenders for the three-storey, concrete and glass structure, scheduled for completion by August, 1970, were opened Wednesday by campus planning officials.

The Farmer Construction bid was $2,396,000. High bid of $2,637,000 came from Dillingham Corporation Canada Ltd. of Vancouver.

The new building will house laboratories, faculty offices and research areas. All Uvic biologists will be located in it, with the exception of marine biologists, who will continue to share the six-year-old Elliott Building with the physics and chemistry departments.

Workshop to Focus On Brain Damage

About 200 specialists from a wide variety of fields will meet at the University of Victoria Saturday and Sunday for a workshop on brain damage.

The fourth annual neuropsychology workshop will include papers and discussion sessions for psychologists, general practitioners, teachers, social workers, nurses and anyone dealing with brain-damaged children.

The workshop is open to the public, with registration from 9 to 10 a.m. Saturday in Room 144 of the MacLaurin Building. A $1 fee will cover all events except a Saturday evening banquet.

First speaker of the day, Dr. Karl Pribram of Stanford University Medical School, will discuss Language and the Brain at 10:15 a.m.

Dr. Pribram is an internationally known neurologist and psychologist who has written many studies of applications of neurpsychological findings to education.

Sunday, Dr. Simon Horenstein of Western Reserve University, Cleveland, will speak on the effects of brain damage on personality and emotions.

Sponsored by the provincial government, the workshop was planned by the university's neuropsychology laboratory and the B.C. Psychological Association.

American Poet Hired by Uvic

A noted American poet has accepted a one-year teaching position in the University of Victoria's creative writing program.

Robert Sward, 33, will replace Professor Robin Skelton, director of creative writing, who is due to take sabbatical leave during the 1969-70 session.

Sward has published three books of poetry: Uncle Dog, Kissing the Dawn and The 1,000-Year-Old Fiancee.

He has also edited an anthology entitled Some Haystacks Don't Even Have Any Needle and Other Prose.

He will teach two courses on the writing of poetry.

HOME GARDEN

Cool Weather Plants

By HILDA BEASTALL

If the first of May comes in with cool winds it means that only the cool weather plants can safely be put out into the garden.

Hilda

This refers mainly to bedding, or annual flower and vegetable plants grown under cover from seeds this spring.

After a gradual hardening to outdoor conditions, which includes getting accustomed to spring winds, the hardier annuals will go ahead.

Included in this group of vegetable plants are summer cauliflower and cabbage, and lettuce.

A timely tip for gardeners new to growing their own vegetables—cabbage and lettuce plants grow usually to a size where one will be sufficient for a meal for six people. So a dozen cabbage may last for a month, while a dozen lettuce may be gone in ten days when used for both salads and sandwiches.

This points towards a tiny pinch of seed being sown outdoors now and at frequent intervals (in the case of lettuce) so that a continuous supply will be available just when required.

The hardier flowering annuals to put into the garden now after acclimatizing are snapdragons, sweet peas, stocks, salpiglossis, scabiosa, all kinds of dianthuses (pinks) and nicotines.

While early May is frequently far too cool and windy to put out warm weather plants, some of these can be easily started indoors now. They will then be ready for putting out at the end of May or in early June.

Cucumbers, both pickling and table, squashes and marrows, and the flowers the big African marigolds—all these germinate quickly at a temperature of 70 degrees indoors. With the strong spring light they make rapid growth, being ready for hardening outdoors as soon as warmer weather arrives.

Another sowing of your favorite squash outdoors at the end of May will give a longer season of production, expecially of young fruits late in fall when the first crop is busy maturing on the vines for storage.

In some years, these two sowings become equalized in growth later in the season, resulting in merely more fruits. But if you have certain favorite kinds, it pays to have an abundance.

THIS SUPER-LONG DOG recently drew a few gasps from strollers in Vancouver's Stanley Park. But a peek behind the tree revealed that two dogs were pulling off an old stunt. (CP Wirephoto.)

Expo Bus To Freak Out Canadians

OTTAWA (CP) — A wildly colored bus with flashing caution lights pulled up in front of the Parliament buildings recently and out of it, into the chill gloom of a rainy day, stepped Prime Minister Trudeau.

He was greeted by the squeals and clapping of about 40 Ottawa high school students who clustered around him, snapping pictures, and getting autographs. The prime minister had just completed a short drive around Parliament Hill in the bus.

The students, who had not been told he would be in it, proved a delight for cameramen capturing the scene. It will form part of a four-minute film to be shown in the Canadian pavilion at Expo 70, the 1970 world fair in Osaka, Japan.

The occasion also marked the start of a journey across Canada by the "super bus."

The yellow bus, psychedelically decorated with brightly colored stripes, circles, checks and rays, is to go to Montreal and Eastern Canada, then across the country to Vancouver. From there, it will be shipped to Japan.

All the while, cameramen inside it will be recording not only glimpses of Canada, but also people's reactions to the unusual vehicle, its side windows decorated with black-and-white pictures.

On one side of the bus, phototraphs show the prime minister, former prime minister Lester B. Pearson, former Ottawa mayor Charlotte Whitton and Monteal singer Monique Leyrac. The other side shows a dog team and sled.

The aim of the film is to show "that the blending and interconnection of diverse elements of old-world culture, language and personality with the vitality of a young country," make the Canadian character unique, pavilion planners said in a statement.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

When a Rain-Maker Made the Hat Wet

By BOB BOWMAN

It might be said that the citizens of Medicine Hat go from one extreme to another.

Bowman

Rudyard Kipling described Medicine Hat as the town "with all hell for a basement" because of the fields of natural gas on which it stands.

Perhaps this is why Medicine Hat is one of the driest areas on the prairies and its citizens have always been interested in rain-making experiments. Years ago one of the proposals was to create rain by placing magnets on the moon. No doubt the idea has been given to the American and Russian astronauts who are trying to land there.

One of Medicine Hat's most successful rain-making experiments began on May 1, 1921, when citizens contributed $8,000 to engage the services of Charles M. Hatfield, described as a "rain-making wizard" from California. He agreed to make four inches of rain fall on the area between May and August.

Hatfield built a tower at Chappice Lake about 20 miles northeast of Medicine Hat. There was a tank on top of the tower into which he poured secret ingredients, and three days later rain began to fall. In fact Hatfield was too successful and farmers began to ask him to hold back.

There was great excitement from May 1 to Aug. 1, and people got their money's worth in entertainment. Sometimes there was too much rain. At other times no rain fell and people went back to the old method of praying.

'ABSURD THING'

Who knows which method was most successful? In any case the area got a "million dollar" rain at the end of July, and Hatfield took down his tower and left. He would only accept $5,000 for his services.

Other communities tried to hire Hatfield for the following year despite the fact that Dominion meteorologist Sir Frederick Stupart said his engagement was the "most absurd thing ever perpetrated in the west." The average rainfall in the Medicine Hat area is 6.22 inches, and only four inches fell during Hatfield's experiment!

ASK ANDY

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a World Book Atlas.

Andy sends a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Janelle Spain, age 13, of Sioux City, Iowa, for her question:

Why doesn't the hard working heart get tired?

There are many kinds of work and they all require effort, or energy. We can measure energy and compare the effort used to do different jobs. For example, the heart uses energy to pump and we can compare this effort with a lifting machine. During an average day, your hard working heart uses enough energy to lift your body a mile above the ground.

The heart starts to beat before birth and continues day and night until the last moment of life. The muscles and eyes, the stomach and other organs require reasonable rest periods and every night the whole body requires seven or eight hours of restful sleep. But through all this loafing, the busy heart continues its beat, drum-drumming the streaming blood throughout all the living tissues. It seems to take no rest at all, but this is not true. Actually it does as much loafing as the rest of the body. But it rests in its own special way.

Some people get thrrough very long, busy days by taking short catnaps now and then. Well, the heart is a highly talented catnapper. Instead of taking one long rest period every day, it takes about 72 short naps every minute day and night. Every time it beats lubb-dupp, it pauses to rest for maybe three-fifths of a second. Minute by minute, these miniatrue catnaps tot up to quite a lot of loafing. Altogether, the heart rests just as long or lnoger than the rest of the body. This is why, provided you treat it sensibly, the heart can carry on its day and night pumping duties without becoming tired.

Pumps Faster

Of course, the heart can be overtaxed and strained beyond its endurance. It does its best to cope with extra exertion and works so hard that finally it may become tired and fail to beat altogether. However, these are extreme conditions that do not apply to normal daily work or to the exercise we need to keep our bodies in proper condition. Healthy people who loaf around with the excuse that they do not want to overwork their hearts are kidding themselves. The heart is built to speed up to supply extra oxygen to the mucles during periods of exercise. It seems to enjoy a spell of fast pumping. In any case, if a healthy body fails to take a few daily spells of brisk exercise, the heart forgets how to pump faster and gets sadly out of conditon.

During a brisk run, the heart can double its normal work — but after every pulsing beat it always takes a brief pause. When the exercise is finished, the pulse rate remains fast for a few minutes. So you pause to catch your breath and allow your still racing heart to slow down. This is important. It continues to slow down and reaches the normal pulse rate of 70 to 75 pumps per minute. Then it may continue to beat even slower than normal for a while. This is another way the heart uses to rest itself. It uses another method while you sleep When your body is quietly resting, it takes advantage of the situation to beat a little slower. And always day and night, resting or exercising, every heartbeat ends with a brief catnap.

Let's figure the average hearbeat to be 72 pulses per minute. Each pulse is somewhat like the squeezing of a fist. The upper and lower chambers of the heart contract in two flowing operations. The upper chambers contract in 0.1 seconds, the lower chambers in 0.3 seconds. This completes a pulse. Then the heart muscles loaf for 0.4 seconds while blood fills the chambers for the next pulsing beat.

★ ★ ★

Andy sends a World Book Atlas to Andrea Lefebvre, age 12 of Niagara Falls, Ont., for her question:

Where do cosmic rays come from?

Our planet is under continuous bombardment from space. No, we are not under attack from hostile aliens. The infinitesimal bullets are the nuclei of atoms travelling at tremendous speeds. Their speeds give them dangerous penetrating power, but fortunately these missiles from afar do not reach the surface of the earth. As they crash through our atmosphere they shatter themselves apart in collisions with gaseous molecules of the air. The fragments of these collisions are somewhat slower and less penetrating. They continue down to the surface and many pierce deep into the ground.

The particles that come from afar are primary cosmic rays. Most of them are ions of hydrogen and helium — atomic nuclei stripped of their electrons. Some come from solar flares and other nuclear upheavals on the sun. Others are thought to come from far out in space beyond the solar system,

Film Follows Marco Polo

A remote, independent kingdom, located in the Himalayan Mountains which suggested the locale and theme for James Hilton's novel Lost Horizon, is the subject of a documentary film to be shown at McPherson Playhouse Friday at 8:30 p.m.

Hunza, the Valley of Eternal Youth, was produced by author, lecturer and globe-trotter Renee Taylor, and recently won first prize at the World Film Festival at Laguna Beach, Calif.

Miss Taylor will narrate the film which portrays a land of mystery where people live to a ripe age in perfect mental and physical health, where disease is practically unknown and men father children at 90.

Hunza is a community of over 35,000 living without crime, jails, police force or army.

This is the first film ever made in the magnificent valley and which retraces the trail of Marco Polo. The valley is generally closed to visitors and only a fortunate few have managed to secure a permit to enter.

Youths to Tour For Sing Out

Two Victoria students will spend the summer and fall touring the continent in support of the Sing Out organization.

Representative of the 160-member Sing Out group here, Larry Owen, 19, and Bernie Cote, 19, leave May 8 on a cross-Canada car tour of about 30 similar groups, all part of the Up with People Program.

June 12 they will hook up with a touring concert group for a circuit of the U.S. and Latin America before arriving back here in December.

CBC Reconsiders Decision

OTTAWA (CP)—State Secretary Gerard Pelletier told the Commons Wednesday the CBC is "not indifferent" to the protests it has been receiving over dropping the Don Messer Jubilee program.

He was asked by former prime minister John Diefenbaker to find out quickly what the CBC plans to do.

Pelletier said the protests have been turned over to the CBC for study while it is reconsidering the decision. Diefenbaker said thousands of Canadians want the Messer show retained, but "the Black Panther and the like have the inside track."

HOGAN
... 'see dollar at work'

IWA MEMBERS VOTING ON DUES INCREASE

DUNCAN — Results of a vote on whether monthly union dues will be raised to $6 from the current $5 levy will be known in about two weeks, an official of Local 1-80 of the International Woodworkers of America said today.

President Weldon Jubenville said the membership is expected to approve the increase sought in a ballot now being carried out.

Jubenville said administering a union was like maintaining a home. "You can only delete so many items off the grocery list before somebody is going to go hungry."

Membership dues, he said, have only increased 85 cents per month, or half a cent per hour, since 1963.

'Hold Line' Budget For North Cowichan

NORTH COWICHAN — Mayor Don Morton brought down a "hold the line" budget of $3,988,923 Wednesday night that exceeded the provisional budget by $215,245.

He said he was "quite satisfied" with this, his 10th, annual budget presentation.

The general purpose mill rate is shown at 18 mills, an increase of 1.60 mills. School District 65 (Cowichan) mill rate was down 5.52 mills to 30.12 and School District 67 (Ladysmith) also was down 2.98 to 39.46 mills.

The other charges on the mill rate are: Cowichan Valley Regional Hospital District, 2.01 mills; North Cowichan (Chemainus) recreational area, 4.50 mills; Regional District of Cowichan Valley administration, .17 mills, and ambulance area (regional district), .57 mills.

Largest increases include surplus appropriation, $76,389; debt charges, net $70,097; education, $66,008; social welfare, $35,000, and Regional Hospital District, $22,302.

Morton said the social welfare increase to $240,000 was a "frightening amount." It was $46,734 more than in 1968.

"We were shocked by this increase," he said, "but confident that most assistance went to the people who need it. No doubt there are a few malingerers, but they are in the minority."

Alderman Dennis Hogan said the average taxpayer gauged his tax contribution by the amount of public works he sees. "One dollar out of every $8 actually goes to public works."

Provision has been made in the budget for the employment of a court stenographer and court reporter as well as rental of the magistrate's court. These costs are borne one-third each by the municipality, the city and the provincial government.

However, since April 1 this year, the municipality no longer is responsible for the salary of the magistrate with a saving of $2,000.

A sum of $13,000 has been included for the operation of the incinerator.

Clerk A. VandeCasteyen said although the debt charges amounted to an increase of $70,097, there is very little increase in debt.

"Due to different accounting procedures the approximate increase is a recoverable item on the revenue side of the ledger."

Fire Victim Identified

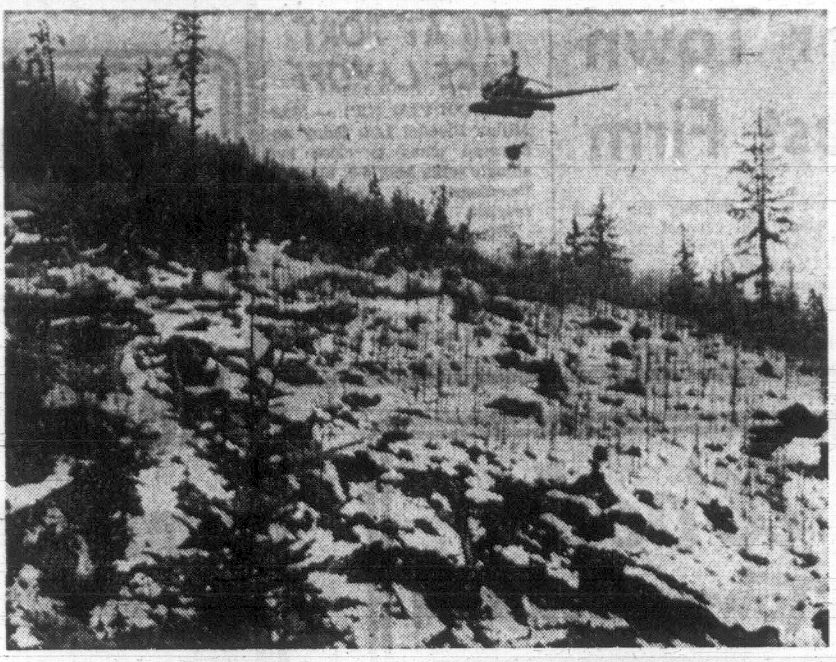
PORT HARDY (CP) — A 15-year-old youth who died in a house fire at a Winter Harbor fishing camp 20 miles from this northern Vancouver Island community Wednesday has been identified as Robert Simon Clair.

Police said the boy was trying to light a stove with kerosene when the fire erupted. Neighbors were unable to reach the scene in time to save him.

Juveniles Guilty Of School Theft

SHAWNIGAN LAKE—Four Duncan juveniles who pleaded guilty to breaking, entering and theft at George Bonner secondary school at Cobble Hill will be sentenced June 7.

Court was told access was made by breaking a library window April 12. A pre-sentence report will be prepared.



BIRTH OF A FOREST is depicted here as slow-moving helicopter scatters Douglas fir seed over 600 acres of logged-over, Crown-owned land near Hope. An estimated 22,500,000 seeds were broadcast early this month over land in a 60-foot strip pattern. British Columbia Forest Service officials hope for at least a 75 per cent survival rate. It was the largest aerial seeding operation conducted by the forest service in the coastal region. Inaccessibility of the area, due to washed-out roads and bridges, made planting of seedlings almost impossible to meet seasonal planting deadline. (B.C. Forest Service photo.)

Youth Seeking Place to Meet

DUNCAN — A group who formed six weeks ago under the name Cowichan Youth are looking for a place to meet their friends, talk, drink coffee and "just sit and think".

No liquor or drugs will be allowed on the premises, says spokesman Chris Calverley.

Hopes of getting a building at the Old King's Daughters' hospital did not materialize because of a clause in the will leaving the property to the district precluded uses of this sort.

The Cowichan Youth, the spokesman said, "intend to make their presence known in the community" by involving themselves in various worthwhile community endeavors.

On Saturday 20 members will be on duty in relays to wash cars on the Shop Easy parking lot to raise money for a sheltered workshop for retarded adults.

Businessman Ken Barnett and local probation officer Don Willoughby are assisting the members in forming the club but the projects and aims are strictly for and by the young people themselves.

'Outside' Link for Town Planned by Forest Firm

An isolated community on the west coast of Vancouver Island will be linked by road to the Island's east coast next year.

Work has started on a road which will connect the mining town of Zeballos with Port Hardy and Gold River.

Zeballos is situated at the head of Zeballos Inlet, about 70 miles north of Tofino.

Tahsis Company is building the road from Zeballos which will connect with the Port Hardy and Gold River roads, linking the community with Campbell River.

It will be completed next year.

Another road linking Zeballos with the Fair Harbor in Kyuoquot Sound to the north will eventually be built by the company.

110 AT PORT FACE LAYOFF

VANCOUVER (CP) — MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. today announced plans to close two shingle mills May 5-9, blaming "weakness" in the shingle market.

Affected will be the Somass mill at Port Alberni, which employs about 110 men, and the company's Red Band Division in Vancouver, which employs about 220.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to express our deepest gratitude and thanks to our many kind friends and neighbours for all their help. Also the many cards of sympathy and beautiful flowers. Also Dr. May for his kindness over the years. In the loss of a dearly loved husband, father and grandfather. — Lillian Mackay, Verna Sparkes, Daryl and Cheryl.

We wish to express our sincere thanks and appreciation to our many friends and relatives who were so kind to us during our recent bereavement in the loss of our parents.—Szegedi family.

9 IN MEMORIAM

HOLLAND—Frederick George, who passed away May 1, 1968.
The face I loved is now laid low,
His loving voice is still,
The hand so often clasped in mine,
Lies now in death's cold chill.
I often sit and think of him
When I am all alone;
For memory is the only thing
That grief can call its own.
—Ever remembered, Mrs. Mary Holland.

HOLLAND—In memory of our father and grandfather, Fred Holland.
The rolling stream of life rolls on,
But still the vacant chair
Recalls the love, the voice, the smile
Of the one who once sat there.
—Ever remembered, Tom, Evelyn and family.

HOLLAND—Frederick George, who passed away May 1, 1968.
One year has passed since that sad day,
When one we loved was called away;
God took him home—it was His will;
Within our hearts he liveth still.
—Mary Jane, Bill and children.

BRIDGE LESSON

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Sometimes our friend the Unlucky Expert really is plagued with adversity. Today's hand shows him at his unluckiest. There is nothing much wrong with South's six-diamond contract except that somehow or other the particular South who played against our friend was the only player to make it.

Opening lead—♣J

The Unlucky Expert made the normal lead of the jack of clubs. South won with the king and after going through a process of cerebration, decided that it wasn't a good day for finesses. Therefore he cashed his ace of diamonds and led a second diamond toward dummy. The Unlucky Expert went up with his king and led a third trump.

South was in his own hand. He cashed his other high club and the ace and king of spades, and ruffed a third spade in dummy. He cashed dummy's ace of hearts and queen of clubs to discard his next to last spade. Then he ruffed dummy's last club to get back to his hand.

Everyone was now down to two cards. West held two hearts, East one heart and the queen of spades, dummy the king and jack of hearts and South the 10 of spades and nine of hearts.

South knew all of this except he didn't know which opponent held the heart-queen. He had noted the drop of the heart 10 from East but East was smart enough to have chucked the 10 and hung on to a low one, so South could not be sure. What he could be sure of was that an unsuccessful heart finesse at this point would put him down two. Anyway, South wasn't a finesser by nature so he went up with dummy's king of hearts and the Unlucky Expert had his usual unlucky result.

65 MOTORCYCLES

P.M.S. LTD.

Thinking of purchasing a new bike in 1969?

REMEMBER
THESE FACTS

(1) HONDA is now, has been and always will be the world's most popular motorcycle.

(2) JAPAN manufactured during 1968 1,128,268 motorcycles. Of these Honda made and sold 818,714 or 72.6 per cent of the total produced. The balance was made up of:
Yamaha 12.9 per cent
Suzuki 7.9 per cent
Kawasaki 4.3 per cent
Bridgestone 2.3 per cent

(3) We have the LARGEST and most COMPLETE STOCK of parts and accessories on Vancouver Island and are in the process of tripling our parts supply to give you, our customer, better and more complete service.

(4) Our service department is continually striving to give better service to our customers.

(5) Norton Commando is the fastest production machine in the world to date — "Bar none".

So don't delay, see us before you buy at . . .

PEARSON MOTORCYCLE SALES LTD.
3388 Douglas St.

Open 9 - 9 on Fridays.

P.S. Easy "bank" financing — not over 21? No co-signing necessary.

THINKING OF PURCHASING A NEW BIKE THIS YEAR?

CONSIDER THESE FACTS:

(1) Yamaha and Triumph are by far Victoria's most popular bikes—just look around.

(2) Our mechanical staff is recognized as being the finest and our service and warranty are given top priority at all times.

(3) Need parts? We have one of the largest stocks of Yamaha and Triumph parts in Western Canada.

(4) Yamaha and Triumph have fast and high resale value.

(5) It costs no more to purchase from us. Quite often we can save you money because we do our own financing.

I'M PROUD OF MYSELF AND WELL I MIGHT BE

I'm built high on a 60'x223' lot with a terrific view of the City and landscaped for a week-end gardener. Tucked away at the back I have a private family area with a 32'x16' HEATED FILTERED SWIMMING POOL, back barbecue and garden patio. There is a two-car garage with plenty of blacktop parking for boats or what have you; and these are just my exterior assets — so come along inside. My living room has terrific lighting with wrap around windows, a brick fireplace, glassed-in book cases. Family dining room which includes my wrought iron chandelier. My kitchen is tremendous with full family dining area, plus a separate utility room wired for washer and dryer. I have THREE TWIN sized bedrooms with double closets with built-in drawers. Yes I have a full high basement with a second bathroom, loads of work and play space, PLUS a 40' completely finished family room with fireplace and built-in bar. I'm approximately 15 years young and just a few minutes drive from City centre. My price is $42,500 with excellent terms. Please, do not ask to drive past — Come and see for yourself by calling

Before the Magistrate

An 18-year-old youth who earlier pleaded guilty in central court to assaulting a 15-year-old boy was told Wednesday by Magistrate William Ostler his conduct was contemptuous.

Lee D. Cooke, 602 Kelly, was one of two older boys who jumped out of their car on Metchosin Road April 5 and set upon three young boys walking on the side.

Looke was put on a year's probation, orderd to post a $350 good behavior bond, abstain from alcohol for a year and pay $23.45 for a pair of glasses he broke.

"It's a simple matter bullying people in the community when you are with a group of older boys," said the magistrate.

"The assault was quite unjustifiable."

Court was told earlier that Cooke struck the 15-year-old boy on the head and broke his glasses. Cooke's companion struck one of the other boys.

Edward G. Thomas, 21, of 2314 Bellamy, was sentenced to 10 days in jail for driving while his right to obtain a licence was suspended. Hans Kumbouck, of Cowichan Station, was jailed a month for driving while suspended.

Philip R. Griffith, 20, of 3604 Quadra, was committed for judge and jury trial on a charge of dangerous driving. Bail was set at $750.

Griffith was involved in a fatal accidnet on McKenzie Avenue Dec. 1 in which Delores Halbert, 65 Kingham Place, was killed.

Stanley Powell, 2942 Leigh, was fined $150 for failing to remain at the scene of an accident.

Britain Loses to U.S. In War of the Words

LONDON (UPI) — Britain surrendered to the United States in the war of the words Wednesday.

The Oxford University Press issued a dictionary in which the Queen's English makes way for the American language.

The 1,048-page fifth edition of the pocket Oxford Dictionary prefers "curb" and "tire" over "kerb" and "tyre," old standbys of the Queen's English.

A publisher's spokesman said, "the changes made for the fifth edition are a reflection of the social history of England since 1942 when the last edition was published."

The new dictionary includes for the first time "teenagers," "p aperbacks," "T-shirts," "sacred cow," and "supermarket."

SICK JOKE

Even the "sick joke" is now in.

Old English usage has given way on other pages. A "driver" is no longer defined as a "coachman." A "suitcase" is no longer explained as a "small portmanteau."

The British have not surrendered unconditionally. The non-American "U" remains in "colour" and "flavour." But the change has caused some division of "labour."

On Page 445 the dictionary acknowledges the root word is "labor"—minus the "U"—and spells "laborious" without the special English vowel between the "O" and the "R."

The dictionary has a supplement of Aunstralian and New Zealand English. It explains that in New Zealand "hooray" means "goodbye."

It says a "bunyip" is an Australian monster.

According to the supplement, there is Buckley's chance (no chance) the British reader who gives it a burl (a try) will go crook (become angry) unless he regards the dictionary as a nohoper (useless) for reporting that, Down Under, an Englishman is a "choom."

NOT CHEAP DIRT

Gold Rush Sweeps Vacant Lot

FORT WORTH (UPI) — A boy knocked a baseball into a vacant lot, stopped to pick it up and found a $20 bill buried in the dirt — and the great 1969 Fort Worth gold rush was under way.

Some treasure hunters found old and torn clothes. Others found broken costume jewelry.

And some found money — more than $800 of it in the frantic hours of digging since the "gold rush" was started by the boy with the baseball Tuesday.

Bill Neal Sr. brought his wife, 16-year-old son Bill Jr., 13-year-old son Chris, 12-year-old daughter Susan, 6-year-old son Danny and the family dog to the lot. They tried uncussessfully to teach the dog to dig for money. The family did better and found $170.

Cars lined up at the end of the field and turned on headlights to illuminate the vacant lot at night. Others carried flashlights.

Fort Worth police did not have too much to say about the situation.

"Somebody threw a dump-truck load of fill dirt in there," one officer said "Where it came from I don't know."

Mrs. Mel Smith, 30, dug all night Tuesday and came back Wednesday morning with her 2-year-old son Victor. Between them, they collected $140, including one of two $100 bills found on the lot.

Loans Set Record

OTTAWA (CP)—Co-operative purchase of grain dryers after a wet harvest on the Prairies helped push government loans to farmer equipment syndicates to a record total in the last fiscal year.

George Owen, chairman of the Farm Credit Corp., told the Senate banking and commerce committee today loans under the Farm Machinery Syndicates Credit Act amounted to $1,672,000 in the year ended March 31.

Fair Shake or Else Smallwood Declares

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Premier Joseph Smallwood, a Liberal from away back, said Wednesday he would become "the most vocal anti-Liberal in Canada" if Ottawa doesn't give Newfoundland a fair shake.

He told the Newfoundland legislature he would publicly break with the federal government if its new department of regional economic expansion doesn't bring industrial incentives and other benefits to his province.

And he said he wouldn't be satisfied with "only a FRED program," the name given to the Fund for Rural Economic Development. The plan, which had included a large-scale development of western Newfoundland, was shelved recently in favor of an undefined scheme for the whole province.

But he said: "I don't think they will turn us down."

The premier's comments came during discussion of resettlement, a federal-provincial program that financially assists Newfoundlanders to move from isolated hamlets to more viable settlements.

Pointing out that more than 30,000 persons have left Newfoundland in the last seven years, he said it was "the greatest peril ever to face this province."

Court Action

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP)—Judge Dale Missildine of district court said he would start issuing contempt of court warrants today against more than 300 city firemen who went on strike in defiance of his injunction.

Border Change In Viet Called Gerrymander

By IAN WRIGHT
The Manchester Guardian

SAIGON—The South Vietnamese government is redrawing the country's administrative map with an eye on the Paris peace conference.

Some U.S. advisers call the changes gerrymandering, others a long needed reform. The project's official name is "village incorporation" and "Hamlet consolidation," and it is happening all over South Vietnam.

The country-wide alteration of village and hamlet boundaries is meant to streamline administration, reflect population shifts and by a stroke of the pen remove from the map hamlets that are now officially called "Viet Cong controlled."

While the scheme has its roots in a genuine need to reassess the way local government works, the lack of publicity suggests to some observers that it is in part a political ploy. Said one senior U.S. adviser, "it's not all political—but it's certainly not just administrative."

END OF YEAR

President Nguyen Van Thieu has said that he requires all of the country to be under government control by the end of the year. The redistricting is one way of achieving it—on paper. "If we can win this way in Paris," another American said, "we'd be foolish to do otherwise."

No one yet knows how far the boundary changes will go. The president and the ministry of the interior have told all 44 province chiefs to submit detailed plans for doing away with villages which are (1) in poor economic condition (2) not functioning administratively and (3) too insecure. So far 11 provinces have reported back, but no one is very happy with the results and the president is calling for quicker returns and action.

HOLD ELECTIONS

Villages in Vietnam are largish geographical areas containing several thousand people, not just houses at a cross-road. Since the local government elections in March, the majority of them have elected governments (which are predominently composed of military men or government employees).

Take Dinh Tuong, a populous province in the Delta about 50 miles from Saigon. It now has 93 villages. And 66 of them have elected councils. If the province chief's boundary suggestions are accepted, some 15 villages out of those remaining will disappear, and the rest of the villages will hold elections in June. Thus by the end of the year, Saigon will be able to claim quite truthfully that all villages in Dinh Tuong have elected governments.

The Hamlet situation is a bit different. Villages are subdivided into several hamlets and the boundaries of these may be changed by the province chief. These powerful individuals—all military men—have been instructed by the government to realign things so that no Hamlet lies outside what is called "government control."

HUGE AREAS

This means that hamlets which are officially classed as "Viet Cong controlled" or "contested" will simply be joined to other hamlets which are now classed as "relatively secure" or government controlled.

In spite of an improving pacification effort in places like Dinh Tuong, there are still huge areas of the countryside where you cannot go unarmed during daylight.

Elections and boundaries will not change this military situation. Said one American official, "it doesn't much matter what the government says as long as it doesn't fool itself."

One aim of the changes is to deny to the National Liberation Front the appearance of control which the American hamlet security evaluation system vouchsafes. The government claims that many of the NLF's liberation committees represent empty spaces from which the population moved years ago.

On the other hand the government has only a sketchy knowledge of the Viet Cong controlled hamlets—and on the last count there were 2,600 of them, representing 20 per cent of the hamlets in South Vietnam and containing 10 per cent of the country's population. These figures come from the U.S. hamlet evaluation system, and the Front, of course, claims many more.

Peking Talks Peace Prelude?

By COLIN McCULLOUGH
Copyright, The Globe and Mail

PEKING — The Paris peace talks may be on the verge of reaching a new stage with the return to France in the next few days of a high-ranking member of the North Vietnamese government.

Le Duc Tho, a member of the politburo and secretariat of Lao Dong (the North Vietnamese Communist Party) left Peking Wednesday for Moscow and from there will go on to Paris. He was seen off by Chinese Vice Foreign Minister Han Nien-Lung, and presumably had talks with Chinese officials in Peking. It is not known whether he will be talking to Soviet leaders.

Le Duc Tho, who has been listed as special adviser to Xuan Thuy, leader of the North Vietnamese delegation, has not taken a direct part in the negotiations in Paris but is regarded by some diplomats as the personal emissary of president Ho Chi-minh.

He left Paris for Hanoi Oct. 14, stopping en route in Moscow and Peking. He is reported to have carried with him a United States offer to stop the bombing and agree to admission of the National Liberation Front to the Paris talks provided that North Vietnam evacuate the demilitarized zone, end attacks on South Vietnamese cities and agree to the Saigon government's participation in the Paris talks.

On Oct. 19 and 21 the Soviet ambassador to Washington, Anatoly Dobrynin, requested and received interviews with United States Secretary of State Dean Rusk. President Lyndon Johnson announced the bombing halt on Oct. 31.

Earlier this month new Secretary of State Rogers said the U.S. hoped to reach agreement with North Vietnam this year on the mutual withdrawal of some troops. He said the U.S. had a fair and reasonable plan for ending the war and that he had high hopes for its success, though he declined to give any details.

POPULAR VOTE

President Thieu, meanwhile, proposed creation of new political parties in South Vietnam and admission of the National Liberation Front into the political life and reunification of Vietnam by popular vote.

The National Front delegation in Paris denounced these suggestions but Le Duc Tho may be bringing specific counter-proposals from his government.

Chinese officials have mentioned Vietnam twice publicly in the last few days.

Hsieh Fu-Chih, vice-premier and chairman of the Peking revolutionary committee, said on Saturday that in Vietnam and the Middle East the United States and the Soviet Union work in co-ordination to "stamp out the flames of revolution."

Vice-Chairman Lin Piao, in his political report to the ninth party congress released on Sunday, said the armed struggles of the people of Southern Vietnam and other countries were "vigorously surging forward."

The North Vietnamese Communist Party incidentally sent a message of congratulations on the opening of the ninth congress and thanked China for her support and assistance.

University Psychologists Get $42,000

Research grants totalling $42,000 have been awarded by national agencies to four University of Victoria psychologists.

Recipients are Dr. Otfried Spreen, Dr. W. H. Gaddes, Dr. H. J. Simmons and Dr. R. B. May.

Dr. Spreen, director of the university's neuro-psychology laboratory has had two grants renewed by the department o national health and welfare.

A $16,200 grant will support a continuing study of the effects of brain damage on language abilities.

The second grant, for $16,000, goes toward a joint project of Dr. Spreen and Dr. Gaddes, to develop means of evaluating impairment caused by brain injuries.

Dr. Simmons will receive a renewal grant of $5,000 from the National Research Council to study the behavioral significance of the septal forebrain nuclei, part of the central nervous system.

NRC has also awarded Dr. May renewal grant for $5,000 for a study of how young children learn.

PEACE SEAT DEMANDED

PHNOM PENH (AFP)—Prince Sihanouk demanded Wednesday a seat for Cambodia at the Paris Vietnam peace talks.

The Cambodian chief of state heatedly denounced both "Asian Communist expansionism and American imperialism".

He said at a press conference that he "rejected" the recent American delcaration recognizing Cambodia's existing borders, and that he had sent troops against Viet Cong and Northwest Vietnamese occupying part of the northeast of the country.

Flower Stomp Nipped in the Bud

Angry public reaction has cooled the proposal that welfare recipients trample flower beds to bring attention to their children's needs.

"People get more excited about flowers than about children," said Reg Clarkson, a social worker and executive secretary of Victoria Low Income Group.

Clarkson said Wednesday that the LIG at a meeting tonight in First United Church would discuss the flower-stomping plan. It was proposed to bring public and government attention to the needs of children of welfare recipients. He suggested a demonstration in flower beds on the lawns of the Legislative Buildings.

Wednesday night Clarkson received many phone calls protesting the vandalizing of flowers.

"People see this as a violent act and on that basis we couldn't do it. The mothers (of the LIG) wouldn't go for it. But we'll thrash it out tonight."

He said it will probably be decided to once more go to see Welfare Minister Dan Campbell.

Besides requesting more generous allowances for children, Clarkson thought the LIG would again protest what they term "abusive" handling of some welfare cases by some social workers.

Study Methods Teachers Asked

The Greater Victoria school board asked its teachers to comment and make recommendations in three sensitive areas of the school system Wednesday night:

- The necessity and extent of school discipline.
- The effectiveness of curriculum, particularly for vocational students.
- The problem of extending continuous progress teaching techniques from elementary into high schools.

The request came from school board chairman Carron Jameson in a meeting between trustees and representatives of the 1,260-member Greater Victoria Teachers' Association.

Seven of the nine trustees and 10 teachers and principals took part in the 90-minute discussion, one of a series of meetings aimed at drawing the two groups into greater harmony.

GVTA president John Smith indicated the teachers will tackle the suggested topics.

Communications between themselves, parents, students and general public was the knotty problem the meeting focused on.

Smith said he believes the relationship between school board and teachers is improving. At and earlier meeting trustees indicated they are ready to give teachers a role in education planning and Smith said when this happens teachers will have "a much keener appreciation of the problems involved."

The suggestion of a newsletter jointly produced by the board and teachers drew favorable comment from both parties but production details weren't discussed.

Teachers commented on the deluge of information on paper they now receive and agreed they have still not solved the problem of communication between themselves.

"The kids are poor postmen," said teacher Margaret Seens of Victoria high school when the discussion turned to the difficulty of getting a teacher-trustee news sheet home to parents.

Parent volunteers helping out at McKenzie elementary school have helped to a better public understanding of the system, said teacher Mrs. Peggy Novak.

Teachers' attitudes have changed and they are much happier now about classroom visitors, she suggested.

Mrs. Wyn Littleton, a counsellor at S.J. Willis junior secondary, said closer links with Canada Manpower are needed on the schools' vocational programs.

"We're not really too good at letting people know what we're trying to do and finding out what they (businessmen) want," said teacher Rod Sample.

Labor Mystified By Court Order

Victoria Labor Council officers are mystified by an injunction which prohibits them from doing something they say they have never done.

The council is the central labor body in the area and has 70 affiliated unions with about 13,000 members.

Executive members held a special meeting Tuesday night to discuss the court order which includes them with strikers from Hy-Fidelity Photos Ltd. in prohibiting "watching, besetting or picketing" stores doing business with the struck film-processing firm.

The injunction, issued by Mr. Justice R. A. Wootton, specifically names council president Jack Groves, vice - president John Schibli and secretary-treasurer Larry Ryan.

NEED FOR LOGIC

"Court orders have to be observed and respected but they have to be logical," Ryan said today. "Otherwise they bring the law into disrepute."

Labor council representatives have never taken part in picketing firms doing business with Hy-Fidelity and have never planned to, he added.

The strike at Hy-Fidelity, with premises at 750 Discovery, began last Nov. 20 when the Teamsters Union, newly-certified as bargaining agents, was unsuccessful in negotiating a first contract.

Two of three wokers voted to strike but the union contends that six employees laid off just before the vote are involved as well.

MEDIATOR ROLE

Ryan said that the labor council tried unsuccessfully to play a mediator's role in the early stages by bringing both sides to the bargaining table.

Later, labor council executive members made token appearances on the picket lines outside the Discovery Street premises as a labor "solidarity gesture," even though the Teamsters Union is not affiliated with the council.

The council's interest in the stike stems from its position as the central labor body in the area, concerned generally with the progress of labor relations, said Ryan.

"It would seem someone is trying to deny us our central character."

St. John Editor Wins Humor Prize

ORILLIA, Ont. (CP) — Stuart Trueman sees something funny in almost everything.

The editor of The Telegraph-Journal and The Times-Globe in Saint John, N.B., has been writing about the funny side of things for years, rollicking yarns of his and other people's flubs, fumbles and tumbles.

Last year those stories were collected and put into a book — You're Only As Old As You Act.

The book was announced Wednesday as the best book of humor published in Canada in 1968 and to Mr. Trueman goes the Stephen Leacock Award for Humor, a silver medal. It will be presented to him at a dinner here Saturday, June 7.

The award is the 22nd by Stephen Leacock Associates, formed in 1944, the year of Leacock's death, to commemorate the man who made this lake resort town 100 miles north of Toronto famous as Mariposa in his humorous writings.

SECOND TIME

Mr. Trueman also has written a humorous novel about a madcap old maid — Cousin Elva — which was a Leacock Award entry in 1956. The Ordeal of John Gyles, dealing with New Brunswick history, and numerous magazine articles.

He began his newspaper career as a sports cartoonist for the Saint John papers and did his own illustrations for You're Only As Old As You Act.

There were five other entries for the 1968 award:

A Scar is Born, by Eric Nicol of Vancouver, a three-time award winner; The Garden of Needham, by Richard Needham of Toronto, who won the 1967 award; Seven for the Road by Stephen McNamee of Montreal and Cocksure and Hunting Tigers Under Glass, both by Mordecai Richler of Montreal.

Two Receive Man's Kidneys

TORONTO (CP) — Two recipients of a kidney transplant at Toronto General Hospital are in satisfactory condition, hospital officials said Wednesday.

Amelix Cox, 48, of Toronto, and Nicholas Federchuk, 44, of Porcupine, Ont., Tuesday received the kidneys of Leonard Paul Saunders, 28, of Port Perry, Ont. He died Tuesday following a motorcycle accident Saturday.

Heiress Marries

NEW YORK (AP)—Marie Livanos, daughter of the late Greek shipping tycoon, was married Wednesday to Stephane A. Cattaui, an investment banker from Paris. The bride is the daughter of Kakia Livanos of Manhattan and the late George M. Livanos, who headed the G. M. Livanos Shipping Co. The new Mrs. Cattaui has been a staff writer with the Encyclopedia Britannica and a researcher-writer with Time-Life Books.

New Faces Appear in Black Power Movement

By AUSTIN SCOTT

WASHINGTON (AP) — Black student uprisings at campuses across the United States point up a trend toward decentralization of the Black Power movement.

New faces have been thrust into positions of prominence in recent months as such Black Power advocates as Stokely Carmichael, H. Rap Brown and Floyd McKissick dropped from public view.

Carmichael has been out of the country since early this year travelling in Europe and Africa, where he and Miriam Makeba, his African-born wife, may eventually decide to stay.

Brown, sources report, is living quietly in New York City, making only an occasional appearance. He has just published a book, Die Nigger, Die.

McKissick, who quit as national director of the Congress of Racial Equality last year, is hard at work on his black Soul City project.

These were the people who took it upon themselves to spread the gospel when the words Black Power were a fearful-sounding slogan that sowed confusion among most who heard it, black and white.

The new faces don't do the kind of coast-to-coast preaching that Carmichael did, but they may feel they don't need to—Black Power has become a household word.

For example, when Carmichael was preaching Black Power in the heart of the ghettoes in the summer of 1966, only the most aware Negroes recognized the book Wretched of the Earth, by black psychologist Franz Fanon. Today, however, that bitterly written treatise on how non-whites must rebel against white oppression is a stock item in any ghetto bookstore along with such other stock items as the Black Panther newspaper, collections of the philosophy of Mao Tse-tung, and writings of Ho Chi Minh.

Labor Official Wins Scholarship

Victoria Labor Council secretary Larry Ryan has been awarded an $1,100 scholarship by the Canadian Labor Congress to undertake an eight-week university level course.

He leaves this weekend for the Labor College of Canada in Montreal. Course subjects include history, politics, economics and sociology.

Ryan, 49, is the first local labor official to win the award since the college opened six years ago. He was selected from a large number of applications across the country.

The labor college is operated jointly by the CLC, McGill University and the University of Montreal as an institution of higher learning for trade unionists.

Floating NHA Rate Raked by Opposition

Surprise Move 'Dangerous'

OTTAWA (CP)—Political storm warnings are flying again over Parliament, with strong opposition to Prime Minister Trudeau's proposal to lift ceilings on National Housing Act mortgages.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield called the plan ludicrous and dangerous. New Democratic Leader T. C. Douglas described it as ridiculous and scandalous.

While removal of the ceiling—now 9⅜ per cent—has been recommended by government advisory bodies for years, Mr. Trudeau's bill Wednesday proposing it to the Commons came as a surprise.

The bill embodies other previously-announced plans to extend the life of new housing mortgages to 40 years from the present limit of 35, and to make NHA guarantees available for mortgages on a wider range of housing.

Also announced earlier were changes in government regulations raising to $25,000 the amount that may be borrowed on a new house, and to $18,000 for an existing one.

NO HINT GIVEN

But neither in Mr. Trudeau's housing policy speech last week, nor in the government's resolution leading to introduction of the bill, was there mention of lifting the interest-rate ceiling.

The government's contention is that the ceiling tends to draw interest rates up to it. By announcing every three months what the ceiling will be in the following period, the government also was making it easier for lending agencies to justify increases.

The amendments, when passed by Parliament, will apply to new mortgages. Existing mortgages are unaffected.

Paul Hellyer, former transport minister, was not in the Commons when Mr. Trudeau introduced the bill. He quit the cabinet last week, effective Wednesday, protesting that Mr. Trudeau and the cabinet were unwilling to go as far as he would like to meet the combined crises of housing, urban development, pollution and inflation.

OTHER FEATURES

Besides removing all interest rate ceilings, Mr. Trudeau's amendments to the National Housing Act will:

—Add condominiums, hostels and dormitories to the kind of housing that can qualify for government-guaranteed mortgage loans.

—Halve existing insurance fees, now two per cent on the principal of mortgages to be repaid in monthly instalments.

—Raise to $15,000,000,000 from $11,000,000,000 the total amount of mortgages that may be insured, and raise to $6,100,000,000 from $5,200,000,000 the amount the federal treasury can lend directly.

—Extend NHA provisions to the purchase and improvement of existing houses, or other buildings used for student accommodation.

Business Fears Inflation

By AB KENT
Times Business Editor

Removing the National Housing Act rate ceiling may produce more mortagage lending, but the effect will only aggravate inflation.

That was the response of Victoria financial men to an Ottawa proposal to eliminate the maximum limit of government-guaranteed mortage interest.

Housing in Canada, plagued by a shortage of investment funds and stiff interest rates on private lending, if proposed changes are acted upon, may enter a period of sharp expansion.

But the concept of ownership and the government's role in housing finance may also change.

RENTING EFFECT

If the maximum term of NHA mortage lending is extended to 40 years, the chances of young persons ever owning a home becomes less.

As pointed out by Bank of Nova Scotia manger James Strong, the effect may be simply the "people will be renting houses from NHA."

"I guess the average young couple doesn't care (about the ceiling rate), but I think it will add to inflation."

In any case, he felt, interest rates will not decline.

National Trust assistant mortgage manager Stan Lind agreed on that point, but he said trust companies at present have no trouble in securing funds for mortgage lending and are able to loan at the higher market rate.

If the NHA rate rises to the market level, this would be of little benefit to people of lower income who seek house financing, he said.

NO LONGER CHOICE

Douglas Peaker, president of Victoria Real Estate Board, said the effect may be to make the government underwriter of all mortgage loans, since the lender would no longer have a choice of rates and would try to make all loans qualify for the government guarantee.

He said is also could mean introduction of discounts on first mortgages, an expansion of the practice now applied by some

EVERYONE WILLING BUT NO TALKS SET

MONTREAL—Spokesmen for Air Canada and the striking workers today expressed a willingness to talk but no date has been set for the resumption of negotiations.

Michael Pitchford, chief negotiator for the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, said the union is still flexible in its demands.

An Air Canada spokesman said the company is willing to meet the union at any time, but "we haven't had any word from them yet".

Air Canada's entire fleet of 108 planes has been grounded since April 21. Officials say when the strike is settled it will take at least 48 hours to resume normal operations.

Moderate Gets N. Ireland Call

Times News Services

BELFAST—James Chichester-Clark, a moderate on the issue of equal rights for Northern Ireland's Roman Catholics, today was elected premier. He defeated hardliner Brian Faulkner by one vote.

Chichester-Clark won the governing Unionist Party's runoff 17 to 16 to replace his cousin, Terence M. O'Neill, as premier of this country torn by religious strife.

O'Neill, who quit after months of violence between Protestntsa and Catholics, was among the 33 casting ballots.

Chichester-Clark faces threats of violence between Protestants the months ahead.

The former major was supported by members of the party who stood by O'Neill in the Unionist split.

The decision was made at a 67-minute meeting of the Unionist party caucus in the committee room at Stormont, the Northern Ireland Parliament building on a hillside overlooking Belfast.

All 35 members of the party attended. All voted except the two contenders.

A gasp of surprise went up as chief government whip Roy Bradford announced the one-vote margin to reporters and politicians.

Bradford then said that on the suggestion of two Faulkner supporters the party decided unanimously to accept Chichester-Clark and to give him 100-percent support.

Chichester-Clark, emerging from the committee room, said this decision on unanimity was the big new factor in politics here.

"I have had a unanimous vote by the parliamentary party," he said.

He pledged that universal suffrage in municipal elections —the "one-man, one-vote" issue which has been the main rallying cry of the Roman Catholic-based civil rights movement —will be introduced before new municipal councils are elected.

Chichester-Clark indicated that these elections will be postponed to 1971 from 1970. Opposition leaders representing the Nationalist minority — mainly Roman Catholic—already have said they would accept a postponement if it were needed to re-draw electoral boundaries and end gerrymandering.

Crackdown Ousts Student Sit-Ins

By United Press International

Militants occupying Stanford and Columbia University buildings beat hasty retreats today when confronted at Stanford with a phalanx of 100 police and at Columbia with an arrest warrant signed by a New York State supreme court justice.

VOTED TO LEAVE

An occupation force of 250 voted to leave Encina Hall at Stanford, rather than be arrested. They had taken over the building a few hours before by smashing through several glass doors.

New York Supreme Court Justice Charles Marks signed an arrest order after Students for a Democratic Society members who had occupied two Columbia buildings failed to show up in court to show cause why they should not be held in contempt for violating an injunction against such takeovers.

"The court cannot close its eyes to what has taken place at Columbia University," Marks said in ussuing the arrest order.

It was the first time outside police had been called to the Stanford Campus during the current round of campus rebellions.

University president Kenneth Pitzwer said the action was taken "with great reluctance and genuine regret."

At Stanford the police were accompanied by faculty observers on hand "to help protect the rights of the students."

The occupation force, all of whom were placed under immediate suspension, regrouped on the lawn after the surrender and taunted the police.

The Columbia students, who began their sit-in Wednesday, apparently had been slipping out of the buildings all morning. Shortly before noon the last holdouts rushed quickly and in disarray from the buildings.

Russian Might Missing In Peaceful May Day

MOSCOW (AP) — Leonid Brezhnev, Communist party leader, gave a precedent-breaking May Day speech in Red Square today as the Soviet Union sought to play down its military image in the wake of the invasion of Czechoslovakia.

For the first time the annual workers' parade past Lenin's Tomb was not preceded by a military display, and Brezhnev replaced the Soviet defence minister as the speaker for the occasion.

Ambassadors from the countries of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization were present. They had boycotted the last big Red Square celebration, on Nov. 7, the anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution, as a protest against the invasion of Czechoslovakia.

The Communist party's general secretary refrained from direct attacks on the United States, China or any other country. The closest he came was to express "the sympathies and support of the Soviet people" for "the patriots fighting against imperialist aggressors in South Vietnam . . . the Arab peoples fighting against imperialism . . . the men of the liberation armies in Angola and Mozambique."

CROWD PACKS SQUARE

Brezhnev told the crowd of 10,000 packing the square that the Soviet government is dedicated to the relaxation of international tensions, the settlement of international questions by negotiations and to peaceful coexistence.

Snap Elections Irk Chief Grit

B.C. Liberal Leader Pat McGeer wants to transform Canadian election customs by taking away a government leader's right to call snap elections.

He told the Liberal Men's Club in Vancouver Wednesday that federal and provincial elections should be held four years apart by law.

And no government defeated on the floor of the House should be allowed to resign automatically.

McGeer said a floor defeat should require the government to withdraw the objectionable proposal "and carry on".

But he proposed that floor defeat on a major money matter should entitle the government to an option of carrying on or calling a special election.

McGeer said the provincial governments require municipalities to hold elections at fixed dates "and there is no reason why provincial and federal governments should not fix election dates in a similiar way.

"For too long, politicians have been hiding behind false traditions saying that every government must win every vote on every minor matter or chaos would result.

"But the vital thing is to carry on government in a commonsense way, accepting programs that a majority of members think wise and rejecting those they think bad."

McGeer said the tradition of allowing a government leader to decide when to hold an election has been seriously misused by men like Premier Bennett to perpetuate themselves in power.

"Snap lections are called by the party in power to serve that party, they are never called to serve the public," he said.

"Snap elections have been called by Premier Bennett after surveys have showed his party is not in trouble.

"When the government has a mess like the Commonwealth Trust fiasco on its hands, it will naturally be tempted to seek election before awkward truths emerge."

He contended snap elections "manipulate the public", disenfranchise thousands of citizens because voter lists are not up to date and inhibit the search for best candidates by all parties.

"Often the best candidates are not available on short notice and it follows that poorer candidates are nominated and elected," McGeer said.

"The public are always the losers as a result of such a situation," he said.

Don't Forgive Rioters, Agnew Tells Colleges

By DAVID S. BRODER

LEXINGTON, Ky. (CP) —Vice-Pressident Agnew, assailing college administrations for their "infirm" response to campus demonstrations, said Wednesday that Congress would be perfectly justified in cutting off fianancial aid to students and colleges that exceed "the limits of permissibility."

Agnew told a press conference, preceding the three-day meeting of the Republican governors association here, that university presidents and faculty bodies have been too slow in seeking police assistance and too free in finding excuses for student rioters.

Citing Cornell University as an example, the vice-president said the faculty decision to grant amnesty to violators of campus rules "is a great device for encouraging future explosions" a very serious inducement to further unlawful conduct."

Agnew's statement was the second hard-line against campus unrest by administration leaders in as many days. Tuesday, President Nixon told the Chamber of Commerce of the United States that colleges need presidents "with the backbone to stand up against" the dissenters.

Agnew said he saw "no special role" for the federal executive branch in coping with the wave of campus disorders. But "where federal monetary assistance is being channelled into institutions — private or public — Concress is entitled to take a look," Agnew said.

"If they find a particular institution is moving beyond the limits of permissibility, they are entitled to consider if they should continue to finance that institution," he said.

Agnew specified that he meant to include both aid to individual students and assistance to the universitites in referring to a fund cutoff.

BEYOND LIMITS

Asked if the events at Cornell — where an armed group of Negro students occupied a university-building — were an example of conduct "beyond the limits of permissibility," the vice-president said, "I don't think there is any doubt things have gotten beyond permissible limits when violence or law-breaking takes place — and I don't single out Cornell alone. I think it's happened at other campuses."

"We've adopted a philosophy that has allowed this campus disorder to breed upon itself," he said. "In general, administrations have been rather infirm in the way the've handled these disputes."

Agnew said he disagreed with the view that a university or faculty should be allowed to decide when police are called onto a campus. He said any student "who is assaulted or whose rights as a citizen are impaired" by a demonstrator has a right to police assistance and to institute prosecution on his own, "and it's nobody's business but his."

At present, Agnew said, "there's a general feeling in the country that you're some sort of fink if you complain about being pushed around by a campus rioter."

$8.5M Five-Year Plan Goes to Vote June 28

By JIM HUME

Victoria city taxpayers will be asked to approve an $8.5 million five-year capital budget Saturday, June 28.

The budget, which will control capital borrowing and spending over the next five years, was presented to a special city council meeting this morning.

The first capital budget approved in 1964 totalled $6.8 million.

The report was compiled over the past few months by members of council, city manager Dennis Young, treasurer James Bramley and department heads.

The budget referendum, if approved, will clear the way for in excess of $11 million capital spending between now and 1973.

Presenting the budget Young said although the gross program exceeded $11 million, some $4 million was already available to the city from other sources, cutting the actual borrowing requirements to $8.5 million.

And $1.5 million of that was for the downtown parking debt, which is recoverable from operating revenues.

Even at $11 million the capital budget is about half the amount the city should be spending on capital priorities over the next five years, the city manager said.

On the first series of reviews of department priorities Young said "their total estimated cost computed on the basis of today's values closely approached $20 million and was far in excess of our financial resources."

But, he added, although the city couldn't afford to do all it desired to do, a five-year plan was essential if the mill rate and taxes were to be held in tight control as they have for the past four years in the city.

Victoria struck its 1969 general and debt mill rate Tuesday holding it on the line for the fourth year in a row.

On the fact that the city would have to cut capital expenditures to an amount the taxpayer could afford Young said the circumstance was not uncommon across Canada.

"Regrettably this is not a circumstance uncommon to Canadian local governments of today where the burden of providing basic services for a growing and rapidly urbanizing nation are thrust on the shoulders of a level of government whose main source of revenue is the regressive property tax," Young told council.

"Notwithstanding this, if Canadian cities and Victoria in

GRAIN

WINNIPEG (CP) — Trade continued light at the close of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange today.

Advances of close to two cents were posted in rapeseed on inter-month spreading and some exporter buying.

Old crop futures in flax were steady to fractionally stronger on small buying by a U.S. house.

Rye posted gains in a light inter-month spreading operation.

Oats and barley prices were steady in a light domestic shipper trade.

Lakehead prices for Class Two, IGA and Domestic wheat all were unchanged.

MARKET SUMMARIES

Toronto Continues Gains

Industrials continued to climb into new territory today as the Toronto stock market posted another advance.

Beverages and steels paced the advance.

The New York market moved in a narrow range today after Wednesday's record gains. Trading was active near the close.

AT TORONTO Seagrams rose ⅝ to 51⅞, Canadian Breweries ½ to 11⅝, Labatt ½ to 25 and Crush ¼ to 12¾.

Canadian Breweries has been trading actively in recent weeks on rumors that a fight for control of the company may develop or that Rothmans may receive an offer for its controlling interest.

In steels, Dofasco gained ⅝ to 25⅝, Stelco ¼ to 26⅝ and Algoma ⅛ to 19.

Hamilton Cotton rose 4½ to 43, McIntyre 4 to 134, Asamera 3 to 42¼, Canadian Superior Oil 2½ to 57, B.C. Phone 2½ to 70, Investors Overseas 1⅞ to 55½, North Canadian Oils 1⅜ to 13⅝ and Falconbridge 1¼ to 127¼.

AT NEW YORK prices near the close included: Deere Co., off ⅝ at 46⅜; Texas Gas Transmission, off ⅛ at 32; Republic Steel, up 1¾ at 46; and City Investing, up ⅝ at 32¾.

AT MONTREAL prices continued a slow climb during moderately active trading today.

Banks were stronger. This was said due to the bills introduced by the federal government to make housing loans easier to obtain.

The Bank of Montreal gained ⅛ to 50⅛ and the Royal Bank ⅛ to 23¼ while the Bank of Nova Scotia slid ⅜ to 24⅛. The Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce was unchanged at 21¾.

Among industrials, Credit Foncier hopped up 2½ to 53½ and Falconbridge Nickel 2¼ to 128, after Falconbridge directors announced increased first-quarter net income of $1.72 a share compared with $1.07 per share in the same period last year. Hudson's Bay Co. increased 1¼ to 25, Radio Engineering 1 point to 40½ and Alcan ⅞ to 35.

AT LONDON the market tended to drift downward today.

The losses by such leaders as ICI, EMI, Glaxo, Courtauld's and GEC rarely exceeded sixpence.

Hudson's Bay gained 1s 3d to 191s 3d but Bowater was lower at 64s 6d.

Canadians were mixed. International Nickel added another 2½ points to Wednesday's rise and Canadian Pacific continued in demand, up 2 points to $250. Gains of up to two points or so were shown by Cominco, Pacific Petroleum and Alcan.

Hollinger was 2¼ points lower at $100¼ and Hiram Walker down 1½ at $118. A feature in banks was a sharp fall of 11s to 278s in Bank of Nova Scotia.

AT VANCOUVER mining issues were generally strong in early trading today.

About 1,850,000 shares were traded to 11 a.m.

Brenda led the mines, up .50 to $15. Churchill was up .40 to $9.20, and Omega up .30 to $6. Ace climbed .33 to $2.75.

Biggest loser was Valley, down .50 to $23.50.

In industrials, Captain International dropped .50 to $8.50.

In oils, Royal Canadian Ventures gained .30 to $4.80 while Trans-Canada dropped .20 to $3.30.

Piece-Work Proposal Criticized

VANCOUVER (CP) — Union officials said Wednesday Attorney-General Leslie Peterson's proposals for a piece-work system in industry with wages tied to productivity would cause more trouble and inequality than present systems.

Jack Moore, regional president of the International Woodworkers of America, said he agreed with the idea of higher wages resulting from greater productivity but not through a piece-work system.

Paddy Neale, secretary of the Vancouver and District Labor piece work . . . It's bad for two Council, said: "We don't like reasons:

"The employer, through his supervisory staff, is always pushing, pushing, pushing for hard on the worker. higher production and this is

SOWS DISSENSION

"This sets up competition between the employees and sows dissension among them. We have found some spontaneous work stoppages resulting from this type of emotional problem."

Peterson made his suggestions in a speech to the Industrial Relations Management Association of British Columbia.

George Johnston, second vice-president of the B.C. Federation of Labor, said a fair wage-productivity agreement would be difficult to work out.

He said that unless the worker has some part in making decisions that affect productivity, he is at the will of the employer and "there is nothing he can do to ensure being compensated."

Atco Will Build Plant at Dartmouth

DARTMOUTH, N.S. (CP) — Atco Eastern Ltd. will build a marketing centre here for Atlantic regional distribution of portable classrooms, industrial units and folding steel storage buildings, Mayor Roland Thornhill announced Wednesday.

The plant will be located in Dartmouth's Commodore Commercial Estates industrial park and will distribute the firm's products in Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, Newfoundland and Labrador and Maine.

Atco Eastern is a subsidiary of Atco Industries Ltd. of Calgary.

Stelco Earnings Below 1968 Level

HAMILTON (CP) - The Steel Company of Canada, Ltd. has reported net earnings for the three-month period ended March 31 of $14,285,367 or 59 cents a share, down from $15,736,322 or 65 cents for the same period in 1968.

The company said earnings were below the 1968 level because of higher production costs, increased purchases of semi-finished steel and a less favorable mix of sales.

Delays Could Boost Cost Of Projects

VANCOUVER (CP) — Delays in municipal public works projects are more likely to cost money than to save money, a committee of the Investment Dealers' Association of Canada has advised municipalities.

Michael M. Ryan, retiring chairman of the Pacific district of the association, said in his year-end report that municipal debt issues handled by the investment industry in the last year amounted to between $8,000,000,000 and $9,000,000, the lowest volume in 25 years.

He said the drop was partly the result of funds from the Canada Pension Plan being available for school financing but "partly reflects the practice of some municipalities of deferring projects in the hope of beng able to borrow at lower rates in the future.

"I would hope these municipalities will take to heart the advice implied in the observation of our committee . . . that there is little likelihood of a significant reductio in the cost of borrowing and that construction costs continue to rise rapidly during any deferral," Ryan said.

U.S. Interests Purchase Control

CALGARY (CP) - A San Francisco man has purchased a majority interest in a Calgary-based oil company.

Spelman Prentice of San Francisco has announced completion of the purchase by himself and his associates of 1,761,150 or about 61 per cent of the outstanding shares of Bluewater Oil and Gas Ltd.

The acquisition was made from Canadian Export Gas and Oil Ltd. and Canix Gas Ltd. of Calgary. The purchase price was not revealed.

VICTORIA, B.C., THURSDAY, MAY 1, 1969 —PAGE 13

Arthur Mayse

If you have an ear for a tune, you may have caught echoes of a sinister refrain in two pronouncements that made the news this week. The melody, revived by a highly-placed Canadian churchman and a British health officer, goes under various titles. Call it "Survival of the Fittest," or if you prefer the Orwellian to the Hitlerian version, "Big Brother Is Watching You".

I'm sure that United Church moderator Dr. Robert McLure speaks from honest conviction when he urges the compulsory sterilization of those judged unfit to conceive or rear children. Also, there's no reason to doubt that Dr. Kenneth Vickery isn't sure of his rightness when he would reduce hospital overcrowding by having the state deny medical aid to Britons over 80 years old.

On the surface, both viewpoints make considerable sense. The one would reduce the welfare drain, while the other would go a long way toward freeing hospitals, doctors and nurses of their overload.

I don't think, however, that we can afford to let the seeming logic of these proposals dazzle us. Dr. McLure would give unto the state the highly dangerous right of eugenic selection. And what Dr. Vickery advocates is a refined and legalized form of murder.

★

Each doctrine raises this question, among others: just how much control can we safely allow the state over the lives of those it governs?

We have gone pretty far in that direction already. There isn't much we can do today without coming up against a regulation great or small imposed by government at its various levels.

But at least, we have been free of state attempts to improve the breed by decreeing who shall conceive and who shall not.

As an individual, I hold no brief for parents who neglect their children, or who run up far larger familes than they can support. We've been warned, too, of the perils of over-population to the point where living-space and food supply will be insufficient.

Surely, though, the answer in each instance lies elsewhere than in the compulsion that Dr. McLure favors.

Education, improved living conditions for those who bitterly need them — these methods, while unspectacular, are the ones that will eventually turn up solutions. So are resource study and improvement.

Increasingly, perhaps, another method of matching population to resources may be the voluntary sterilization that Dr. McLure urges on over-fecund but nice people.

But compulsory sterilization for those on whom society frowns or can provide no useful place is an invasion of human rights, and we'd be wise to regard it as such.

★

According to the lore of the north, the old and helpless in a primitive Eskimo band might go out to die alone by their own request.

Medical health officer Vickery, I suggest, would have his people go beyond the primitive to the utterly savage in their treatment of their aged.

What kind of morality is this that would set an arbitrary limit beyond which a man or woman is not worth saving?

The over-80's get sick, or break a hip, and with medical aid, they may recover. Or they may become chronic cases, beyond cure. So, at times, do the young and the middle-aged.

The answer here is not to outlaw them, but to provide sufficient hospitals to house them.

I think that eventually, we will provide the mercy of euthanasia, either by direct request or by permission of nearest kin, to the hopeless sufferers, the hurting human vegetable who is beyond all other easements.

But I can see no luck for any nation in either, the invasion or the neglect of basic human rights. I don't take kindly to any doctrine that would have us take either road.

$10 DEPOSIT FOR TRAFFIC APPEALS

Beginning next month, motorists appealing a traffic violation report will have to put up a $10 deposit before they can get a hearing.

A cabinet order Wednesday proclaimed an amendment, adopted at the last session, to take effect June 1.

The order said the deposit will be returned to the motorist after the hearing if he won his appeal.

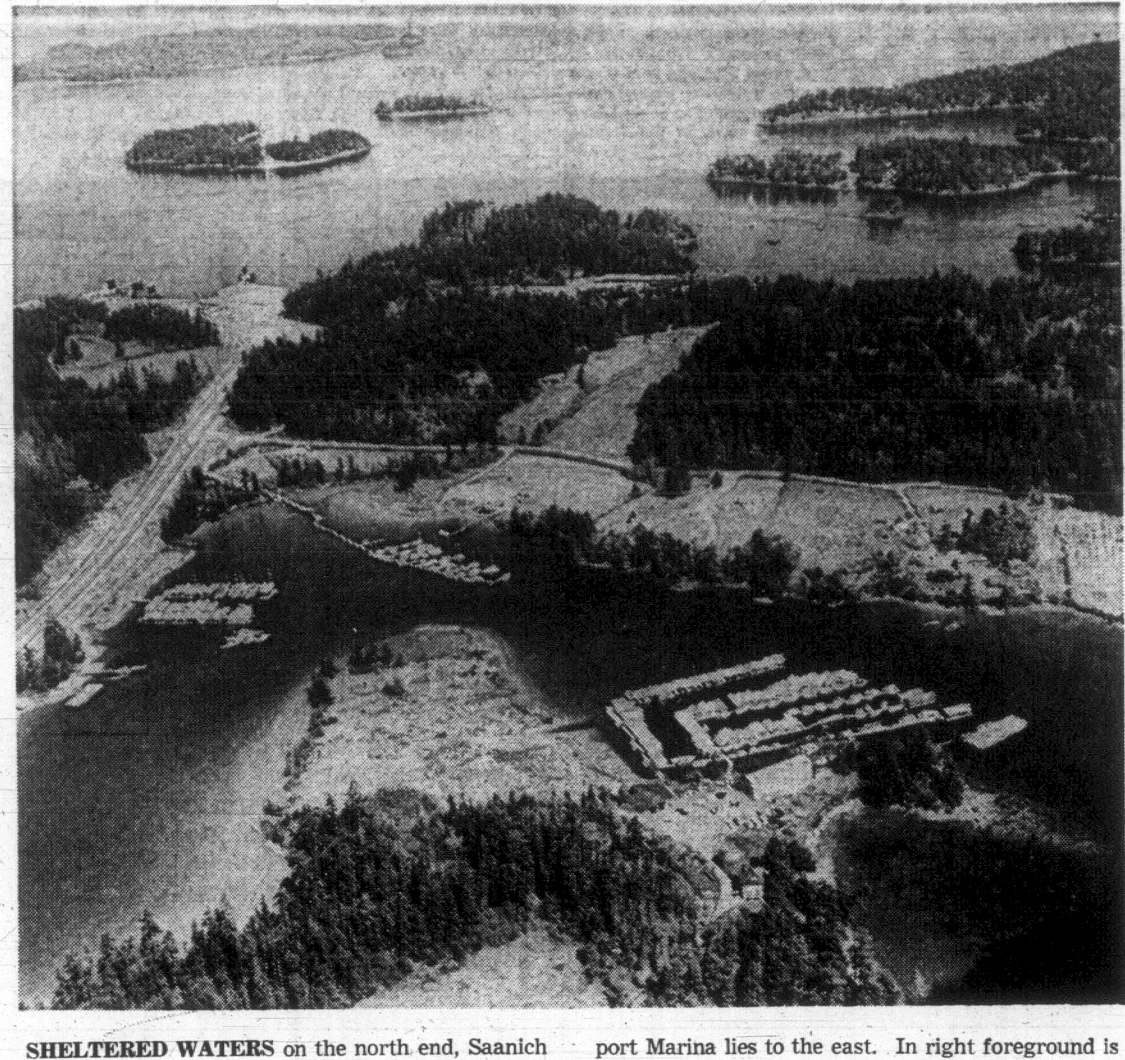
But if the violation report—and a subsequent demerit on his driving record—is confirmed then the $10 will be kept by the municipality to defray the cost of the hearing.

EXPAND SYSTEM

The system only applies to southern Vancouver Island at present but the government has indicated it likely will extend the no-fines demerit system to the rest of the province this year.

The deposit amendment was introduced after Greater Victoria civic leaders complained the provincial experiment with the no-fines system here was costing them large sums because they lost the revenue from fines but still had to provide the facilities for hearings.

The cabinet also proclaimed, beginning June 1, another amendment to the Motor Vehicles Act which requires doctors to inform authorities when a patient's medical condition makes him a dangerous driver.



SHELTERED WATERS on the north end, Saanich Peninsula, offer handy berthing for small boats but as fast as marinas open they are being filled. At left is Royal Victoria Yacht Club's Tsehum Harbor outstation, which has a waiting list. Smaller Westport Marina lies to the east. In right foreground is Clark Bros. Barely visible, top centre, is Canoe Cove Marina. Suitable inlets and coves are scarce and often breakwaters must be built to give necessary protection from winter seas.

Building Ban Eased In Sidney

Treatment Plant Reason for Move

Building restrictions have been partly relaxed in Sidney by the British Columbia department of health.

The health department has approved permits for 60 lots in scattered parts of the town in view of the town's decision to install a primary sewage treatment

It also indicated it would release 60 additional permits once a start is made on constructing a plant.

Last fall, B.C. health officials banned all future construction of buildings on unsewered lots until the town installed treatment facilities for its waste and improved its sewage system.

This was done in the interest of public health.

It brought new development to a standstill. Plans for constructing about 300 homes in new subdivisions had to be laid aside.

The ban also forced council to restrict construction of apartments.

THREE OUTFALLS

The town presently discharges raw sewage from three outfalls into the sea. The sewage system is also badly in need of an overhauling, due mainly to the town's rapid growth in the past two years.

Council in January took steps to improve the system and in April launched a feasibility study to determine the best location for a treatment plant.

Mayor Arthur Freeman at the same time requested the health department to relax its building restrictions pending the construction of treatment facilities.

DEFEND NAVY

Tub Admiral Calls Out Fleet Against CPR

By JOHN SLINGER

The Royal Canadian Navy can stop worrying. Nanaimo will defend it.

The Battle of the Atlantic will be a pale comparison after Nanaimo's ebulliant Mayor Frank Ney sends his renowned bathtub fleet out to sink the CPR.

Well, not sink it exactly—make it backtrack.

The railway company, which operates a Nanaimo-Vancouver ferry and other ships and railway barges out of Nanaimo's downtown harbor, this week issued an order prohibiting outsiders from using the company's wharf.

WHARF UNSAFE

In a letter to the Nanaimo harbor commission, CPR said the wharf is unsafe for the general public and visiting ships will no longer be permitted to tie up there.

This cannot be allowed to happen, thought "Admiral" Ney, the man who introduced the world's biggest, noisiest and smuggest annual bathtub race a few years ago. The race has brought Nanaimo fame throughout world capitals and plumbing suppliers.

It can't happen because the visiting ships that use the wharf most are the ships of the Royal Canadian Navy on their occasional stops there.

If they can't park at the CPR wharf, the navy will have to go to the harbor's assembly wharf where they would be prey to falling loads of lumber, busy freighters and heaven knows what else, said Ney.

The whole matter "is quite serious from the point of view of liaison."

So the mayor has written a personal letter to N. R. Crump, chairman of the board of CPR, asking that the company change its mind.

'Full Houses' Stacking the Deck Against Prospective Boat Buyers

By PAT DUFOUR

Before you decide to go into debt for your first boat you'd better make certain you have somewhere to tie that precious piece of floating real estate.

The boating fraternity has a habit of spawning with the lustiness of tadpoles in the spring and local marinas appear unable to keep pace with this population explosion.

Even Oak Bay Marina, with its anchorage for between 500 and 600 boats, is fast reaching the saturation point.

Operator Bob Wright reports, "We have a few 12-foot spaces left, but that's about all." Expansion will be limited to 40 or 50 extra floats unless an appeal for additional breakwater protection is answered by the federal government.

Wright says the government will have to make hydrographic studies in order to find out whether further protection can be supplied.

Most of the berths at the marina are filled by sailboats, some of them an overflow from the Royal Victoria Yacht Club, whose facilities during the summer season are severely strained.

•

Conditions at other marinas are even less promising for the prospective boater.

Dennis Ashby of Clarke Bros. near Sidney says that all the marina's 200 berths are filled with local boats.

Peter Moore of Canoe Cove also reports a "full house" with a waiting list, particularly for boathouses.

"We still haven't had a chance to replace the 17 boathouses we lost in January's heavy snow fall. We berth about 250 and hope to build another 100 berths by next year."

He reports that many of the berths are taken by Vancouver boats, whose owners either cannot find berthing spots on the mainland, object to the "dirty conditions at their Coal Harbor and other spots," or choose Vancouver Island as a base because of lower costs and better cruising waters.

Steve Dickinson's Van Isle Marina has its 300 berths filled, as has Jim Woeswick's West Bay Marina with its 65 spots. Both are forced to turn visiting boats away when the season is at its peak.

Neither marina has immediate plans for expansion.

There is talk, however, that Westport marina at Swartz Bay (formerly Randales and now owned by a Vancouver company) is considering a $250,000 development program.

Figures in a report released this week by the city of Victoria's planning department economist, Colin Crisp, show that the squeeze has just begun.

The report was compiled in order to assess the possibility of expanding mooring facilities in Victoria's Inner Harbor.

Although it deals mainly with the expected increase of visiting boats in the years ahead, the report could be used as a yard-stick to estimate growth in the local area.

•

Last year 7,9400 American boats cleared customs at either Victoria, Sidney or Bedwell Harbor. In 1975 it is forecast that approximately 11,481 Washington boats will clear customs, and in 1985, 15,198. This does not take into consideration the many Canadian mainland boats, and those from California and Oregon which head for Victoria during the summer months.

At the present time the city has 20 slips in the Inner Harbor, and no shore services. When the Reid Centre is built at the foot of Fort Street it will provide a further 26 berths, most of them probably to be used by centre residents.

Crisp quotes the Acres Report's estimates that suggest an additional 100 berths will be required by downtown residents in 1981 . . . a 500 percent increase on available berthing.

Expansion will be limited through lack of space and fuelling will have to be loated elsewhere, either at a float further out in the harbor, or at an outlying side of the harbor.

•

Crisp explains that consideration of the expansion is urged by the need to coordinate waterfront facilities. "We don't want to see spot planning or run the risk of honky-tonk types of concessions going in. We want a sort of marine package."

John Di Castri, architect for the new $1 million CPR complex and marina to be built on Belleville Street by next year, reports that "between 50 and 60" berths are included in the plans. These will do little except help cope with the expected increase of boating tourists.

If the city decides to expand Inner Harbor facilities it will provide little relief for local boat owners. The extra berths will soon be chock-a-block with visiting boats during the summer months.

•

Marine Resorts Ltd. formed in April 1968, is gearing itself to deal with the boat explosion. Company officials met this week at the Bedwell Harbor Resort to discuss expansion plans.

Director Stan Lettner, announced the company's immediate program:

"We have berthing for 75 boats at Bedwll and intend to increase this to 200 or 250. We're increasing the lodge, putting in a banquet or convention room, and building new cottages.

"At Silva Bay (near Nanaimo) we'll build mooring for 80 to 90 boats, and at Secret Cove (on the Sechelt Peninsula) we'll be able to take about 100 boats in four to six weeks' time.

"Facilities will be expanded at Shoal Bay on Thurlow Island and Refuge Cove on Redonda Island. Docking will be available for 40 to 50 boats at April Point on Quadra Island."

•

Promising as these plans are, they bear little comfort for a new Victoria boat owner in search of a place to moor his boat near home . . .

. . . unless, like many Vancouverites, he elects to commute to a less-crowded anchorage in the Gulf Islands.

House Fire Deliberate

A $7,000 fire in a vacant house at 1010 Pentrelew Tuesday night was deliberately set, fire officials said today.

The blaze broke out in the upstairs of the building about 10 p.m. The house contains no furniture and the electricity is disconnected.

A fireman posted Wednesday night to guard the house while an investigation took place was removed this morning.

Officials are continuing their investigation today.

Oak Bay Taxes Up 8½ Per Cent

Oak Bay homewoners are faced with an 8½ per cent tax increase this year.

Council, in a post-midnight session, early today announced an increase of 5.1 mills over 1968.

The effect on the ratepayer who paid $400 taxes last year—this year he will pay $434.

The increased mill rate breaks down to an additional 2.91 mills for general purposes and debt, .21 mills for Oak Bay's share of district hospital costs and 1.98 mills increased school taxes.

'FINE TOOTH COMB'

Mayor Fred Hawes said council used "a fine tooth comb" in repeated budget inspections, cutting out many items in attempts to hold the line on taxes.

"Salary increases played an important part in adding to municipal costs, as they did in 1968." In both years the increase amounted to 1½ mills.

The total budget for Oak Bay, the cost of operating the municipality, remained at $2,470,832 when the five-hour budget session ended.

Mayor Hawes said one of the greatest problems in trying to hold taxes was that new assessment (new construction) in the municipality has avereaged only $675,000 a year for the past five years.

He recalled that in his inaugural address he had pointed out the necessity to boost the assessment level.

One phase of municipal work approved in the budget is expected to assist new home development, a new drainage system affecting the Foul Bay Road-Oak Bay Avenue-Cadboro Bay Road areas.

DRAINAGE SYSTEM

The new drainage system will divert surface waters which now drain into the sanitary sewer system. The diversion will permit a greater capacity of sewer flow and make room for new development.

Taken out of the estimates was $50,000 for the second stage of Windsor Park pavilion.

Council agreed to follow the example of Victoria and Esquimalt and contribute $4 per capita based on 1968 population figures, to library purposes.

Y's Boy-Girl Week in Woods Features Unstructured Program

A new YM-YWCA program for teen-agers of both sexes may be expanded next year if it is successful this summer, youth director Douglas Dent said today.

The new co-ed program, catering to teens 15 to 17, will run June 27 to July 2, he said.

The session will be held in YM-YWCA facilities at Camp Thunderbird at Glinz Lake.

"The program will be fairly unstructured, although it will be kept under control," said Dent.

"We don't want parents to wonder: What's going on here?, and we don't want the kids to feel they're being led around by the noses."

The usual "Y" activities will be featured at the week-long camp—swimming, hiking, boating, archery, volleyball, badminton and crafts.

The camp, which will cost participants $40 for the week, is an attempt to bring more money in for the youth organization.

Renting the camp to other groups such as church youth clubs was one of the other ways considered, but the co-ed program was chosen as the most desirable.

If the camp is popular, it will be continued next year, perhaps expanding to two or three weeks, Dent said.

Convention Hall Offer Final, CPR Tells City

The general manager of the Empress Hotel today issued a "guarantee" that CPR will not build a convention centre if the city turns down the proposal.

Louis J. Finimore made the statement in reply to Ald. Robert Baird's claim that if the city does not go ahead with the proposal, the CPR-owned hotel will build the centre on its own.

Baird is a leading opponent of the scheme that would see the $2.4 million centre built as an annex to the Empress.

"The offer is there," said Finimore in an interview, "and we'd be delighted to go along with it if it is acceptable to the city."

If it is not acceptable, it will not be built, he added.

CLARIFY POSITION

Finimore said his statement is not an attempt to put pressure on the city. It was made to clarify the hotel's position in light of some contrary statements being made.

"If the city doesn't build it, that's it as far as we're concerned. We think that we've spent enough money in Victoria for a while. The renovation of the Empress cost approximately $5 million and we've just committed ourselves to spending another $1 million in the Inner Harbor area."

This would be the last proposal for a Victoria convention centre by the CPR, he said.

MARINA, SHOPS

The hotel renovations—"Operation Teacup"—are nearing completion and CPR Wednesday announced plans to build a marina-shopping complex on 10 acres of wharf and land between Belleville Street and the company's Princess Marguerite ferry berth.

The convention centre proposal will be decided by public referendum later this year.

Finimore explained his company's position to a Victoria Visitors' Bureau meeting Wednesday. The bureau passed a resolution supporting the proposal.

The city would receive 75 cents of every convention dollar spent and the hotel 25 per cent, said Finimore.

CPR would pick up 25 per cent of operating losses and have exclusive catering rights. The city would be returned five per cent of gross food sales and 10 per cent of gross beverage sales.

OPERATE AT A PROFIT

Finimore estimated the centre would be operating at a profit within three or four years.

He said convention business would be more stable than the current tourist trade and said the centre would boost business at all Victoria hotels.

Of the 400 rooms at the Empress, Finimore said never more than half could be tied up for convention accommodation.

"That's why we feel that the city and other groups must take an interest in this venture. We are certainly not going to do it ourselves."

The Inner Harbor project is expected to be under construction shortly.

Pacific Undersea Gardens already are operating on the wharf and the Royal London Wax Museum is to move from its Crystal Garden location into the old CPR terminal building on Belleville.

Details of the move have not been completed.

Observatory Changes To Summer Hours

The Dominion Astrophysical Observatory's visiting hours on Saturday nights will change to Daylight Saving Time starting Saturday.

Visiting hours will now be 9 to 11 p.m. and these hours will be effective until Sept. 6, when they will return to winter hours of 8 to 10 p.m.

DeMolay Order Fraternal Group

The Order of DeMolay, referred to in the report of a county court trial in Wednesday's Times as "a religious youth organization," is not a religious movement.

A spokesman for the order today stressed that it is a "fraternal" organization for youths of 14 to 21 years sponsored by Masons.

Ask The Times

Q. How many royal command performances of the performing arts have been held in England?—L.B.

A. The first royal command performance was held in 1912, and the second in 1921. Records indicate that performances have been held on a regular basis since 1921 to the present time, excluding the years 1924, 1929, 1936, 1939-1944, 1956 and 1959.

Q. I was born 69 years ago in Canada and served in both the First and Second World Wars. I was not registered at birth. I need a birth certificate in order to get the old age pension. What should I do?—R.M.S.

A. Officers of the old age security division, department of national health and welfare, spend a great deal of time helping applicants in searches to establish eligibility for a pension. It is suggested that you visit the department's office on the third floor of the main Victoria post office and ask for their help.

Of that total the expenditures would be distributed as follows: This year $1,563,000. In 1970, the biggest year of the five, $5,831,000.

The year 1971 would see expenditures of $1,881,000 and the following year $1,346,000. In the final year, 1973, expenditures would drop off to $507,000.

Capital Budget Means $9 Tax Increase

Approval of the city of Victoria's five year capital budget program June 28 will mean an approximate increase in taxes of around $9.

The figure is based on an average residential assessment of $6,300.

What will the $9 increase and the five year plan do for the city?

City officials say it will permit them to launch an orderly plan for the financing, construction and replacement of major public works programs over a pre-determined five year period.

The plan, attributed with holding the Victoria mill rate at the same level for the past four years, can only come into being if approved by owner-electors.

Under the five year plan, although all major work is approved on one vote, the program is reviewed annually in the light of possible changes in need or newly developed trends.

Even with the approval of the voters the city is not automatically committed to spend every penny approved and every project listed.

"The whole purpose of the annual review," says city manager Dennis Young," is to re-establish priorities and to ensure that the city is in a financial position to incur the required debt."

How much money can be raised each year?

Only 25 per cent or less of the city's annual general tax levy. The ceiling is held at 25 per cent to eliminate the danger of excessive spending which could endanger the city's financial position.

There are five steps in a capital budget program, Young said this morning.

"Capital budgeting starts with the preparation of a detailed estimate of the funds which will be available for payment of the principal and interest on the debt that would be incurred.

"The next step is to determine the work and types of programs which need undertaking and to establish priorities and timetables.

"Step three sees preparation of detailed working plans for each project; step four the raising and allocation of monies as they are required and finally the annual review to maintain tight control over all projects."

. . . FIVE-YEAR PLAN

particular are to avoid the problems so evident in so many central cities in the United States, priorities must be established and development programs instituted to the maximum limits of our resources."

Passage of the capital budge referendum in effect will permit the city to launch a long-range capital priorities program without the need of going back to the people for individual votes each time a major project is undertaken.

Young told council the first five-year plan, approved by the owner-electors in 1964 "proved conclusively the merit of carefully planned capital borrowing and spending within the framework of a formal capital budget."

Erlier this week Mayor Hugh Stephen said there was no doubt in his mind the controls imposed by the first five-year plan were directly responsible for recent mill rate control.

As in the first five-year-plan, the 1969-1973 program will be held to the annual borrowing limit of 25 per cent of the city's tax levy for general purposes.

"To exceed this level could jeopardize a city's financial position," Young said. "But keeping within it could create a realistic debt burden capable of being carried out without undue difficulty and at the same time fully utilize the resources of the community."

With the capital program totalling $11 million but the net non-recoverable borrowing items held to $7 million, Young outlined sources of funds for the $4 million difference.

Authorized financing available from the last capital budget, $740,000; from the McPherson Estate funds $1,300,000 towards the new swimming pool; estimated proceeds from the sale of the Crystal Garden site, $500,000 and the downtown parking facility debt, the carrying charges of which are offset by operating revenues, $1,513,000 for a total of $4,053,000.

"These revenue sources are, firstly, the borrowing authorizations contained in the first five-year capital program which to date have not been used," Young said.

"This results mainly from delays in undertaking the second and third phase of the Clover Point trunk sewer replacement and the extension of the outfall, and also the tieing in of the James Bay system to the Clover Point trunk in order to eliminate a series of communal septic tanks the effluents from which are currently discharged into the Inner Harbor."

Young said it was hoped under the new five-year plan all such septic tanks would be eliminated completely within the city.

Announcements from the provincial government this week could throw a major monkey-wrench into the city's five-year plan as it affects sewage disposal but Young said sewerage system work planned would remain in the capital budget at least until the situation clarifies.

Total funds earmarked for sewers over the next five years are in excess of $2 million.

"We are not quite sure just what the demands will be at Clover Point," Young said in an interview. "We have been told that the Macaulay Point outfall, approved this week by the Pollution Control Board, is being set up as a reasearch project. Presumably the disposal facilities we now have will be permitted to continue until the results of that research are tabulated and made known.

"As a result we have to leave the money required in the capital budget so that it is available when the need arises."

Of the $2,094,000 listed for sewerage systems $550,000 is listed for the extension of the Clover Point outfall in 1970.

On the day the owner-electors vote on the capital budget they will also vote, but by separate referendum, on the fate of the proposed $2.4 million convention centre proposal.

The centre, a controversial matter over recent months, is not included in the five-year plan.

Military Research Halted by Institute

WASHINGTON (WP) — Massachusetts Institute of Technology—the nation's leading science and engineering university—has ordered a temporary halt on accepting new secret military research at two famous laboratories.

The action was this school's response to mounting student and faculty protests against military research by U.S. universities—and against big new weapon systems like the anti-ballistic missile.

The same movement, nationwide, saw some 175 young anti-ABM physicists picket the White House for 45 minutes Wednesday, then present Dr. Lee A. Dubridge, the president's science adviser, with an anti-Safeguard ABM system petition.

The petition was signed by nearly 1,200 members of the American Physical Society, now meeting here. Other physicists went to Capital Hill to give congressmen anti-Safeguard petitions signed by 729 colleagues at many universities.

"A large number of scientists are coming out of their little dark laboratories" to give the public their opinions on weapons, Charles Schultz, a University of California physicist, told a group of House members.

Just such a coming-out—starting with a one-day research stoppage March 4—culminated in MIT's decision to declare a moratorium, perhaps until fall, on new classified projects at the two laboratories.

By then, a 22-member panel will have reviewed the laboratories' roles—and perhaps, said one MIT source, "recommend that they be solf or otherwise disposed of, to be operated with no MIT connection."

MIT president Howard Johnson asked the panel to make a temporary report by May 31 and a final one by Oct. 1. Panel chairman Frank Pounds, MIT school of management dean, said he will try to have the final report ready May 31.

All work on present projects will continue, meanwhile, and the laboratories may accept "contract modifications."

Edmonton Strike

EDMONTON (CP)—More than 400 members of the International Association of Machinists were on strike today against Northwest Industries Ltd., a major Canadian aircraft parts manufacturer. The strike was voted on April 24 and of the 364 who voted, 304 favored strike action to back demands for an average increase of 80 cents an hour over 27 months. Notice of intent to strike was given Monday and the workers walked out Wednesday night.

Carpenters' Strike Dispute Still In Court

A dispute over a strike vote involving the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Yakimovich Construction Ltd. of Victoria was continued in Vancouver law courts today.

The union is appealing a decision given 10 days ago in Victoria by Mr. Justic R. A. Wootton. He upheld an injunction granted earlier prohibiting the union from picketing Yakimovich construction sites.

Through its lawyer, Louis Lindholm, the union has asked to have the injunction set aside.

The ex-parte injunction was granted when 10 of 15 workers involved swore they had voted against strike action. A secret strike vote, counted in the presence of the company lawyer, was 8-7 for a strike.

The union claimed afterward the workers had been invited to a party on the company premises and offered two years of steady employment.

The strike against Yakimovich began March 25 and the injunction was issued next day.

Superport Essential To Pacific

By DENNIS BELL

VANCOUVER (CP) — In the words of engineer Ian Ross, the difference between the Roberts Bank deep-sea port and existing Vancouver port facilities is like that between Grand Central Station and a whistlestop.

Ross, whose Swan Wooster Engineering Co. Ltd. of Vancouver developed plans for the Roberts Bank project 15 miles south of here a year ago, says a deepsea port is a necessity, not a luxury.

The Japanese are building super ports at Kobe and Tokyo, and they're also building gigantic 200,000-ton freighters to operate out of them to any ports big enough to handle them.

"We have to match these facilities on our side of the water," says Ross.

"There's no point in having Grand Central Sattion on one side of the Pacific and a whistlestop on the other."

Roberts Bank should open for business in November, if the engineers stay ahead of schedule. At present, the port consists of a 50-acre blob of mud three miles offshore connected to the mainland by a tenuous causeway completed in March.

When the first bulk carrier docks to load coking coal from British Columbia's East Kootenay district, berthing facilities will be dredged to a depth of 65 feet, 26 feet deeper than Vancouver's Burrard Inlet which tontains 64 older deep-sea berths.

The first company is Kaiser Resources Ltd., a subsidiary of Kaiser Steel Corp. of Oakland, Calif., which has a contract to supply 45 million long tons of coking coal worth $650 million to a Japanese steel industry consortium.

The 15-year agreement was predicated on construction of a deep-sea port, a condition readily agreed to by the federal and provincial governments.

Work is set to start on the terminal itself at a cost of $8,500,000.

Swan Wooster has calculated that 5,000 acres adjacent to the shoreline of Delta municipality can be reclaimed for industrial development.

The competitiveness of Canadian coking coal depends to a large extent on rapid transport.

TRANSPORT COSTLY

For example, in 1965 and 1966 it cost about $9 a ton to mine coal in the East Kootenay district and a further $10.50 to transport it to Japan.

However, the Japanese were able to get coking coal elsewhere for $17 a ton, meaning the Canadian government had to provide a subsidy of $2.50 a ton, costing taxpayers $2 million annually.

With Roberts Bank in action and through utilization of specially-designed unit trains, transport costs will drop to $7 a ton for a delivered price in Japan of $16.

Government officials estimate the port will mean a saving of about $150 million on transport costs.

For the coal contract, CP Rail is building 350 cars with special couplings so they can be dumped without being detached from the rest of the train.

The trains will run from 100 to 150 cars each with as many as 12 locomotives to haul about 15,000 tons at a time.

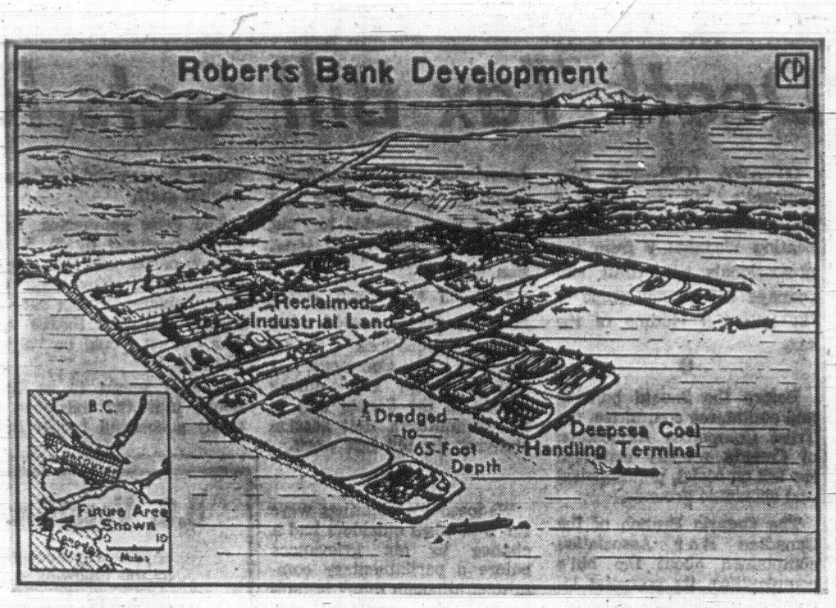
Roberts Bank engineers hope to load the coal aboard the bulk carriers at a rate of 10,000 tons an hour.

By 1970, with the Roberts Bank terminal in full swing, 3.5 million tons of coal a year will be moving out of Vancouver.

From 1965 to 1985, export of bulk products, principally grain, potash, sulphur and coal, is forecast to rise to 23 million tons a year from 3 million.

Roberts Bank has been the focal point of a number of controversies.

The federal and provincial governments fought a jurisdictional battle over the project, then worked out a compromise that allowed both sides to participate.



ONE VERSION of what Roberts Bank port may become is shown in sketch depicting three phases, three massive land extensions into the Gulf of Georgia. Only a small 50-acre site has been finished, enough to start the export coal program, on its dredged foundation three miles offshore. All berths of ultimate project will be capable of docking deep-draught vessels. (CP Photomap.)

Strauss Hints of Mark Revaluation Stronger

By NORMAN CROSSLAND
The Manchester Guardian

BONN — West German Finance Minister Franz Joseph Strauss has been spreading the word recently that he accepts the possibility of a revaluation of the German deutschemark.

In Munich Monday and to the Foreign Press Association in Bonn Tuesday, Strauss said that although the government would not revalue alone, it would be prepared to talk about a multilateral realignment of currency exchange rates with other countries.

The West German economy, Strauss added, should not have to face the constant possibility of revaluation while some of Germany's allies frequently practice no currency discipline at all, but passively accepted an annual drop in the real value of their money of 4 per cent.

If revaluation did come it would be by between 8 and 10 per cent, Strauss said he believed.

But if the government were to raise the mark unilaterally by 8 per cent, he said, German industry would be hit to the extent that it would need about $1 billion in "hidden subsidies."

Just as it did last November during the international monetary crisis, the West German government would continue to resist pressure to revalue alone, the finance minister insisted. In fact, he said, Bonn's attitude last fall had paid off since it had forced other countries to take fresh efforts to master their economic difficulties.

In Geneva, financial experts said Strauss' public recognition that revaluation of the mark may come will attract more speculative money into West Germany.

The experts also believe that although the finance minister's pronouncements must be seen in the light of the German election campaign, they discount suggestions that he is reflecting secret conversations between governments on a general realignment of currencies.

According to these sources, there are no formal consultations under way to see whether an organized change in currency parities—which would primarily involve the franc and the mark—is now possible.

For one thing, it is believed that the present interim French government does not wish to engage in such far-reaching policy discussions—especially since a devaluation of the franc, whether or not it is part of a general change in parties, might well endanger the Gaullist majority in the coming elections.

New Imperial

New Imperial Mines Ltd. reported earnings for the three months ended March 31, 1969, at $634,796, an increase of 10 cents a share. There was a net loss of $106,825 on the company's operations in the corresponding quarter last year.

Panco Poultry

Federal Grain Ltd. says a majority of shareholders of Panco Poultry Ltd., Vancouver, have accepted Federal's offer to purchase control of Panco.

Federal's offer of $29.50 for all common shares and $59 for each preferred share will now be made to all Panco shareholders. Ted Cohen, Panco president, was made vice-president of Federal Grain Ltd.

Canron Ltd.

Canron Ltd. had net earnings for the first quarter ended March 31 of $267,000 or 10 cents a share, down from $744,000 or 29 cents for the corresponding 1968 period.

The company said reduced earnings were caused partly by "drastic reduction in municipal funds to purchase iron and concrete water pipe.

CIL Jump

Consolidated net income for Canadian Industries Ltd. and its subsidiary companies was $2.4 million or 24 cents a share in the first quarter compared with $422,000 or four cents in the corresponding period in 1968, on sales of $78 million, up 16 per cent.

President Leonard Hynes said in the quarterly report to shareholders that earnings in the three-month period were comparable to the levels achieved in 1966 and 1967 and showed a sharp increase from 1968 when income was depressed because of high costs associated with the company's Lambton Works and a loss in Millhaven Fibres Ltd.

Du Pont

Du Pont of Canada Ltd. reports net earnings for the three-month period ended March 31 of $5.6 million or 71 cents a share, up from $2.3 million or 29 cents for the corresponding period in 1968.

Earnings included a non-recurring gain of $3 million from the sale of the company's assets in Augusta Natural Gas Ltd. to Northern and Central Gas Corp. Ltd.

Our old name didn't fit, so we picked a new one...

KAISER RESOURCES LTD.

The Kaiser Companies have gained worldwide experience in the development of resources such as coal, iron ore, bauxite, nickel, limestone and many other raw materials. Because of this experience, and because the name Kaiser Coal did not truly reflect our capabilities and enthusiasm, we've changed our name to Kaiser Resources Ltd.

Not that we didn't enjoy an exciting first year as Kaiser Coal. In early 1968, we signed a contract with the Japanese steel industry for the export of more than 45 million long tons of British Columbia coal, over the next 15 years. Since then, contracts have been signed for substantial additional shipments of coal to Japan.

This new export business for Canada was made possible by the cooperation and encouragement of many groups in Canada, including both the British Columbia government and the Federal government—but without subvention or subsidy of any kind. As a result of these combined efforts, the following actions are taking place:

Total direct investment necessary to build the new mine, railroad and port facilities needed to meet these commitments, has been estimated at more than $150 million of expenditures by Kaiser, the railroads and others involved in the venture.

Some 800 Canadian construction workers are building our new mining facilities in the East Kootenay Mountains near Fernie, B.C. Annual payroll for these workers, along with our 625 current coal production employees, exceeds $11 million.

By the time major shipments are started in 1970, 800 full-time employees will be provided steady employment in producing the coal with an annual payroll estimated at $7 million.

Major changes and improvements in housing, community and living conditions have already been made in the communities of Michel, Natal, and Sparwood, B.C.

We already have plans underway for a full-scale program for the reclamation of areas involved in surface mining. As part of our conservation efforts, we have established a scholarship program for research at the University of British Columbia.

A major program is underway to develop better methods of underground mining, including hydraulic and longwall mining, under safe and clean conditions. These new techniques could greatly extend the reserves of mineable coal.

Early next year, the Canadian Pacific Railway will be running round-the-clock unit-train operations to haul coal from the mine to a new superport being built at Roberts Bank near Vancouver. This will be one of the most efficient railroad operations in the entire world and Roberts Bank will provide North America's finest bulk handling port, capable of loading the mammoth superships needed to transport the coal to Japan.

We feel fortunate to be participating in this exciting project. The whole venture should prove to be a source of tremendous revenue to Canada. We also feel that there are many other growth opportunities to match the skills of the Canadian people with available resources and, as Kaiser Resources Ltd., we are building an organization of Canadians to meet these opportunities. Our worldwide experience has shown us that the development of resources can make a substantial contribution to the welfare of the people of the countries where the raw materials are produced. Wherever economically possible these products are processed in the countries where they are mined.

The Kaiser Companies have always been guided by two maxims. They may seem merely old-fashioned platitudes to others; but they have worked for us time and time again. The first is: "Find a Need and Fill It." As our world grows smaller, its needs grow larger. We feel confident that working with the resources and people of this country, we can compete in the global markets of tomorrow and help Canada to grow and prosper.

The second Kaiser maxim is: "Together We Build."

VICTORIA, B.C., THURSDAY, MAY 1, 1969 —PAGE 13

Arthur Mayse

If you have an ear for a tune, you may have caught echoes of a sinister refrain in two pronouncements that made the news this week. The melody, revived by a highly-placed Canadian churchman and a British health officer, goes under various titles. Call it "Survival of the Fittest," or if you prefer the Orwellian to the Hitlerian version, "Big Brother Is Watching You".

I'm sure that United Church moderator Dr. Robert McLure speaks from honest conviction when he urges the compulsory sterilization of those judged unfit to conceive or rear children. Also, there's no reason to doubt that Dr. Kenneth Vickery isn't sure of his rightness when he would reduce hospital overcrowding by having the state deny medical aid to Britons over 80 years old.

On the surface, both viewpoints make considerable sense. The one would reduce the welfare drain, while the other would go a long way toward freeing hospitals, doctors and nurses of their overload.

I don't think, however, that we can afford to let the seeming logic of these proposals dazzle us. Dr. McLure would give unto the state the highly dangerous right of eugenic selection. And what Dr. Vickery advocates is a refined and legalized form of murder.

★

Each doctrine raises this question, among others: just how much control can we safely allow the state over the lives of those it governs?

We have gone pretty far in that direction already. There isn't much we can do today without coming up against a regulation great or small imposed by government at its various levels.

But at least, we have been free of state attempts to improve the breed by decreeing who shall conceive and who shall not.

As an individual, I hold no brief for parents who neglect their children, or who run up far larger familes than they can support. We've been warned, too, of the perils of over-population to the point where living-space and food supply will be insufficient.

Surely, though, the answer in each instance lies elsewhere than in the compulsion that Dr. McLure favors.

Education, improved living conditions for those who bitterly need them — these methods, while unspectacular, are the ones that will eventually turn up solutions. So are resource study and improvement.

Increasingly, perhaps, another method of matching population to resources may be the voluntary sterilization that Dr. McLure urges on over-fecund but nice people.

But compulsory sterilization for those on whom society frowns or can provide no useful place is an invasion of human rights, and we'd be wise to regard it as such.

★

According to the lore of the north, the old and helpless in a primitive Eskimo band might go out to die alone by their own request.

Medical health officer Vickery, I suggest, would have his people go beyond the primitive to the utterly savage in their treatment of their aged.

What kind of morality is this that would set an arbitrary limit beyond which a man or woman is not worth saving?

The over-80's get sick, or break a hip, and with medical aid, they may recover. Or they may become chronic cases, beyond cure. So, at times, do the young and the middle-aged.

The answer here is not to outlaw them, but to provide sufficient hospitals to house them.

I think that eventually, we will provide the mercy of euthanasia, either by direct request or by permission of nearest kin, to the hopeless sufferers, the hurting human vegetable who is beyond all other easements.

But I can see no luck for any nation in either the invasion or the neglect of basic human rights. I don't take kindly to any doctrine that would have us take either road.

$10 DEPOSIT FOR TRAFFIC APPEALS

Beginning next month, motorists appealing a traffic violation report will have to put up a $10 deposit before they can get a hearing.

A cabinet order Wednesday proclaimed an amendment, adopted at the last session, to take effect June 1.

The order said the deposit will be returned to the motorist after the hearing if he won his appeal.

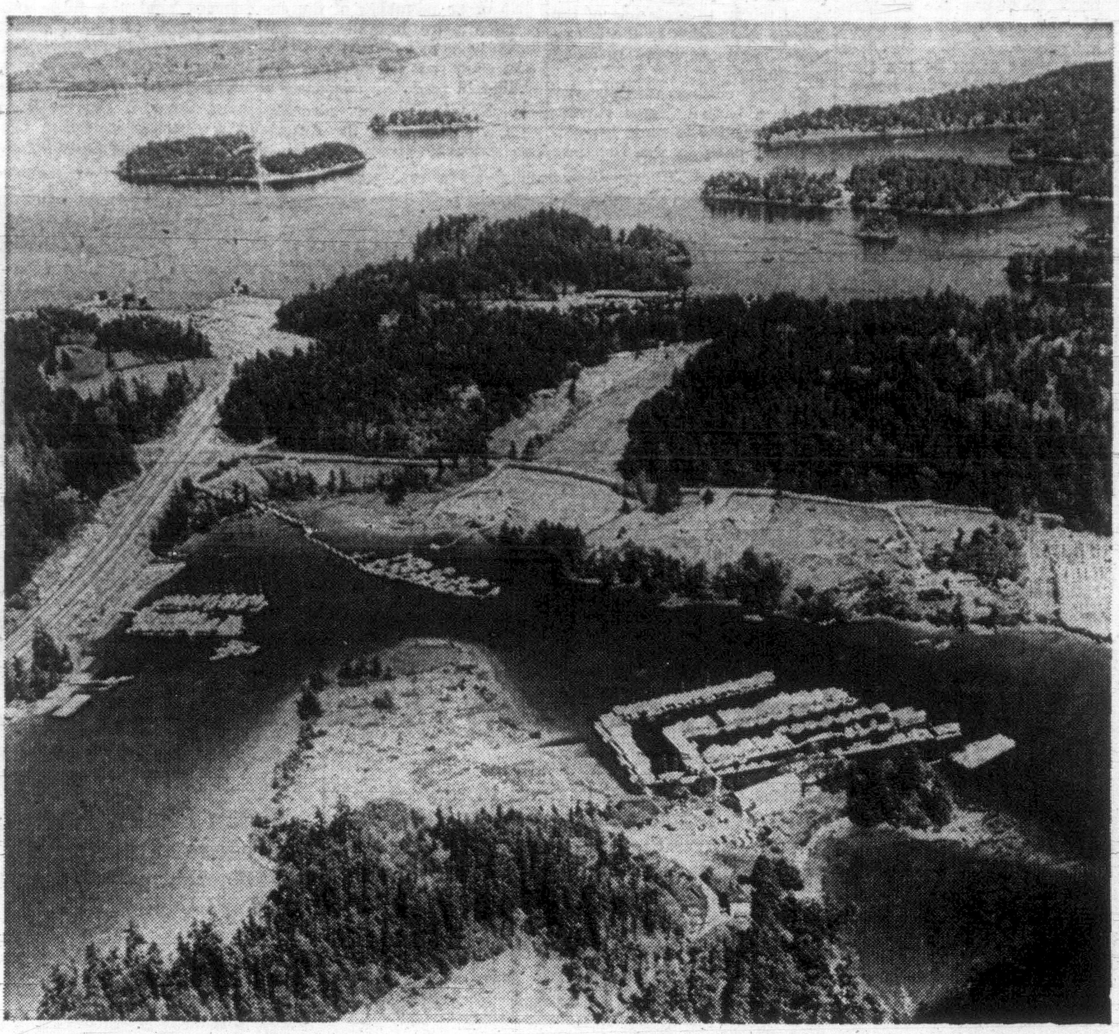
But if the violation report—and a subsequent demerit on his driving record—is confirmed then the $10 will be kept by the municipality to defray the cost of the hearing.

EXPAND SYSTEM

The system only applies to southern Vancouver Island at present but the government has indicated it likely will extend the no-fines demerit system to the rest of the province this year.

The deposit amendment was introduced after Greater Victoria civic leaders complained the provincial experiment with the no-fines system here was costing them large sums because they lost the revenue from fines but still had to provide the facilities for hearings.

The cabinet also proclaimed, beginning June 1, another amendment to the Motor Vehicles Act which requires doctors to inform authorities when a patient's medical condition makes him a dangerous driver.



SHELTERED WATERS of north end of Saanich Peninsula offer handy berthing for small boats but as fast as marinas open they are being filled. At left is Royal Victoria Yacht Club's Tsehum Harbor outstation, which has a waiting list. Smaller Westport Marina lies to the east. In right foreground is Clark Bros. Barely visible, top centre, is Canoe Cove Marina. Suitable inlets and coves are scarce and often breakwaters must be built to give necessary protection from winter seas.

'Full Houses' Stacking the Deck Against Prospective Boat Buyers

By PAT DUFOUR

Before you decide to go into debt for your first boat you'd better make certain you have somewhere to tie that precious piece of floating real estate.

The boating fraternity has a habit of spawning with the lustiness of tadpoles in the spring and local marinas appear unable to keep pace with this population explosion.

Even Oak Bay Marina, with its anchorage for between 500 and 600 boats, is fast reaching the saturation point.

Operator Bob Wright reports, "We have a few 12-foot spaces left, but that's about all." Expansion will be limited to 40 or 50 extra boats unless an appeal for additional breakwater protection is answered by the federal government.

Wright says the government will have to make hydrographic studies in order to find out whether further protection can be supplied.

Most of the berths at the marina are filled by sailboats, some of them an overflow from the Royal Victoria Yacht Club, whose facilities during the summer season are severely strained.

•

Conditions at other marinas are even less promising for the prospective boater.

Dennis Ashby of Clarke Bros. near Sidney says that all the marina's 200 berths are filled with local boats.

Peter Moore of Canoe Cove also reports a "full house" with a waiting list, particularly for boathouses.

"We still haven't had a chance to replace the 17 boathouses we lost in January's heavy snow fall. We berth about 250 and hope to build another 100 berths by next year."

He reports that many of the berths are taken by Vancouver boats, whose owners either cannot find berthing spots on the mainland, object to the "dirty conditions at their Coal Harbor and other spots," or choose Vancouver Island as a base because of lower costs and better cruising waters.

Steve Dickinson's Van Isle Marina has its 300 berths filled, as has Jim Woeswick's West Bay Marina with its 65 spots. Both are forced to turn visiting boats away when the season is at its peak.

Neither marina has immediate plans for expansion.

There is talk, however, that Westport marina at Swartz Bay (formerly Randales and now owned by a Vancouver company) is considering a $250,000 development program.

•

Figures in a report released this week by the city of Victoria's planning department economist, Colin Crisp, show that the squeeze has just begun.

The report was compiled in order to assess the possibility of expanding mooring facilities in Victoria's Inner Harbor.

Although it deals mainly with the expected increase of visiting boats in the years ahead, the report could be used as a yard-stick to estimate growth in the local area.

•

Last year 7,9400 American boats cleared customs at either Victoria, Sidney or Bedwell Harbor. In 1975 it is forecast that approximately 11,481 Washington boats will clear customs, and in 1985, 15,198. This does not take into consideration the many Canadian mainland boats, and those from California and Oregon which head for Victoria during the summer months.

At the present time the city has 20 slips in the Inner Harbor, and no shore services. When the Reid Centre is built at the foot of Fort Street it will provide a further 26 berths, most of them probably to be used by centre residents.

Crisp quotes the Acres Report's estimates that suggest an additional 100 berths will be required by downtown residents in 1981 . . . a 500 percent increase on available berthing.

Expansion will be limited through lack of space and fuelling will have to be loated elsewhere, either at a float further out in the harbor, or at an outlying side of the harbor.

•

Crisp explains that consideration of the expansion is urged by the need to coordinate waterfront facilities. "We don't want to see spot planning or run the risk of honky-tonk types of concessions going in. We want a sort of marine package."

John Di Castri, architect for the new $1 million CPR complex and marina to be built on Belleville Street by next year, reports that "between 50 and 60" berths are included in the plans. These will do little except help cope with the expected increase of boating tourists.

If the city decides to expand Inner Harbor facilities it will provide little relief for local boat owners. The extra berths will soon be chock-a-block with visiting boats during the summer months.

•

Marine Resorts Ltd. formed in April 1968, is gearing itself to deal with the boat explosion. Company officials met this week at the Bedwell Harbor Resort to discuss expansion plans.

Director Stan Lettner, announced the company's immediate program:

"We have berthing for 75 boats at Bedwll and intend to increase this to 200 or 250. We're increasing the lodge, putting in a banquet or convention room, and building new cottages.

"At Silva Bay (near Nanaimo) we'll build mooring for 80 to 90 boats, and at Secret Cove (on the Sechelt Peninsula) we'll be able to take about 100 boats in four to six weeks' time.

"Facilities will be expanded at Shoal Bay on Thurlow Island and Refuge Cove on Redonda Island. Docking will be available for 40 to 50 boats at April Point on Quadra Island."

•

Promising as these plans are, they bear little comfort for a new Victoria boat owner in search of a place to moor his boat near home . . .

. . . unless, like many Vancouverites, he elects to commute to a less-crowded anchorage in the Gulf Islands.

House Fire Deliberate

A $7,000 fire in a vacant house at 1010 Pentrelew Tuesday night was deliberately set, fire officials said today.

The blaze broke out in the upstairs of the building about 10 p.m. The house contains no furniture and the electricity is disconnected.

A fireman posted Wednesday night to guard the house while an investigation took place was removed this morning.

Officials are continuing their investigation today.

Oak Bay Taxes Up 8½ Per Cent

Oak Bay homewoners are faced with an 8½ per cent tax increase this year.

Council, in a post-midnight session, early today announced an increase of 5.1 mills over 1968.

The effect on the ratepayer who paid $400 taxes last year—this year he will pay $434.

The increased mill rate breaks down to an additional 2.91 mills for general purposes and debt, .21 mills for Oak Bay's share of district hospital costs and 1.98 mills increased school taxes.

'FINE TOOTH COMB'

Mayor Fred Hawes said council used "a fine tooth comb" in repeated budget inspections, cutting out many items in attempts to hold the line on taxes.

"Salary increases played an important part in adding to municipal costs, as they did in 1968." In both years the increase amounted to 1½ mills.

The total budget for Oak Bay, the cost of operating the municipality, remained at $2,470,832 when the five-hour budget session ended.

Mayor Hawes said one of the greatest problems in trying to hold taxes was that new assessment (new construction) in the municipality has averaged only $675,000 a year for the past five years.

He recalled that in his inaugural address he had pointed out the necessity to boost the assessment level.

One phase of municipal work approved in the budget is expected to assist new home development, a new drainage system affecting the Foul Bay Road-Oak Bay Avenue-Cadboro Bay Road areas.

DRAINAGE SYSTEM

The new drainage system will divert surface waters which now drain into the sanitary sewer system. The diversion will permit a greater capacity of sewer flow and make room for new development.

Taken out of the estimates was $50,000 for the second stage of Windsor Park pavilion.

Council agreed to follow the example of Victoria and Esquimalt and contribute $4 per capita based on 1968 population figures, to library purposes.

Y's Boy-Girl Week in Woods Features Unstructured Program

A new YM-YWCA program for teen-agers of both sexes may be expanded next year if it is successful this summer, youth director Douglas Dent said today.

The new co-ed program, catering to teens 15 to 17, will run June 27 to July 2, he said.

The session will be held in YM-YWCA facilities at Camp Thunderbird at Glinz Lake.

"The program will be fairly unstructured, although it will be kept under control," said Dent.

"We don't want parents to wonder: What's going on here?, and we don't want the kids to feel they're being led around by the noses."

The usual "Y" activities will be featured at the week-long camp—swimming, hiking, boating, archery, volleyball, badminton and crafts.

The camp, which will cost participants $40 for the week, is an attempt to bring more money in for the youth organization.

Renting the camp to other groups such as church youth clubs was one of the other ways considered, but the co-ed program was chosen as the most desirable.

If the camp is popular, it will be continued next year, perhaps expanding to two or three weeks, Dent said.

Building Ban Eased In Sidney

Treatment Plant Reason for Move

Building restrictions have been partly relaxed in Sidney by the British Columbia department of health.

The health department has approved permits for 60 lots in scattered parts of the town in view of the town's decision to install a primary sewage treatment.

It also indicated it would release 60 additional permits once a start is made on constructing a plant.

Last fall, B.C. health officials banned all future construction of buildings on unsewered lots until the town installed treatment facilities for its waste and improved its sewage system.

This was done in the interest of public health.

It brought new development to a standstill. Plans for constructing about 300 homes in new subdivisions had to be laid aside.

The ban also forced council to restrict construction of apartments.

THREE OUTFALLS

The town now discharges raw sewage from three outfalls into the sea. The sewage system is also badly in need of an overhauling, due mainly to the town's rapid growth in the past two years.

Council in January took steps to improve the system and in April launched a feasibility study to determine the best location for a treatment plant.

Mayor Arthur Freeman at the same time requested the health department to relax its building restrictions pending the construction of treatment facilities.

Observatory Changes To Summer Hours

The Dominion Astrophysical Observatory's visiting hours on Saturday nights will change to Daylight Saving Time starting Saturday.

Visiting hours will now be 9 to 11 p.m. and these hours will be effective until Sept. 6, when they will return to winter hours of 8 to 10 p.m.

Convention Hall Offer Final, CPR Tells City

The general manager of the Empress Hotel today issued a "guarantee" that CPR will not build a convention centre if the city turns down the proposal.

Louis J. Finimore made the statement in reply to Ald. Robert Baird's claim that if the city does not go ahead with the proposal, the CPR-owned hotel will build the centre on its own.

Baird is a leading opponent of the scheme that would see the $2.4 million centre built as an annex to the Empress.

"The offer is there," said Finimore in an interview, "and we'd be delighted to go along with it if it is acceptable to the city."

If it is not acceptable, it will not be built, he added.

CLARIFY POSITION

Finimore said his statement is not an attempt to put pressure on the city. It was made to clarify the hotel's position in light of some contrary statements being made.

"If the city doesn't build it, that's it as far as we're concerned. We think that we've spent enough money in Victoria for a while. The renovation of the Empress cost approximately $5 million and we've just committed ourselves to spending another $1 million in the Inner Harbor area."

This would be the last proposal for a Victoria convention centre by the CPR, he said.

MARINA, SHOPS

The hotel renovations—"Operation Teacup"—are nearing completion and CPR Wednesday announced plans to build a marina-shopping complex on 10 acres of wharf and land between Belleville Street and the company's Princess Marguerite ferry berth.

The convention centre proposal will be decided by public referendum later this year.

Finimore explained his company's position to a Victoria Visitors' Bureau meeting Wednesday. The bureau passed a resolution supporting the proposal.

The city would receive 75 cents of every convention dollar spent and the hotel 25 per cent, said Finimore.

CPR would pick up 25 per cent of operating losses and have exclusive catering rights. The city would be returned five per cent of gross food sales and 10 per cent of gross beverage sales.

OPERATE AT A PROFIT

Finimore estimated the centre would be operating at a profit within three or four years.

He said convention business would be more stable than the current tourist trade and said the centre would boost business at all Victoria hotels.

Of the 400 rooms at the Empress, Finimore said never more than half could be tied up for convention accommodation.

"That's why we feel that the city and other groups must take an interest in this venture. We are certainly not going to do it ourselves."

The Inner Harbor project is expected to be under construction shortly.

Pacific Undersea Gardens already are operating on the wharf and the Royal London Wax Museum is to move from its Crystal Garden location into the old CPR terminal building on Belleville.

Details of the move have not been completed.

DeMolay Order Fraternal Group

The Order of DeMolay, referred to in the report of a county court trial in Wednesday's Times as "a religious youth organization," is not a religious movement.

A spokesman for the order today stressed that it is a "fraternal" organization for youths of 14 to 21 years sponsored by Masons.

DEFEND NAVY

Tub Admiral Calls Out Fleet Against CPR

By JOHN SLINGER

The Royal Canadian Navy can stop worrying. Nanaimo will defend it.

The Battle of the Atlantic will be a pale comparison after Nanaimo's ebullient Mayor Frank Ney sends his renowned bathtub fleet out to sink the CPR.

Well, not sink it exactly—make it backtrack.

The railway company, which operates a Nanaimo-Vancouver ferry and other ships and railway barges out of Nanaimo's downtown harbor, this week issued an order prohibiting outsiders from using the company's wharf.

WHARF UNSAFE

In a letter to the Nanaimo harbor commission, CPR said the wharf is unsafe for the general public and visiting ships will no longer be permitted to tie up there.

This cannot be allowed to happen, thought "Admiral" Ney, the man who introduced the world's biggest, noisiest and smuggest annual bathtub race a few years ago. The race has brought Nanaimo fame throughout world capitals and plumbing suppliers.

It can't happen because the visiting ships that use the wharf most are the ships of the Royal Canadian Navy on their occasional stops there.

If they can't park at the CPR wharf, the navy will have to go to the harbor's assembly wharf where they would be prey to falling loads of lumber, busy freighters and heaven knows what else, said Ney.

The whole matter "is quite serious from the point of view of liaison."

So the mayor has written a personal letter to N. R. Crump, chairman of the board of CPR, asking that the company change its mind.

Ask The Times

Q. How many royal command performances of the performing arts have been held in England?—L.B.

A. The first royal command performance was held in 1912, and the second in 1921. Records indicate that performances have been held on a regular basis since 1921 to the present time, excluding the years 1924, 1929, 1936, 1939-1944, 1956 and 1959.

Q. I was born 69 years ago in Canada and served in both the First and Second World Wars. I was not registered at birth. I need a birth certificate in order to get the old age pension. What should I do?—R.M.S.

A. Officers of the old age security division, department of national health and welfare, spend a great deal of time helping applicants in searches to establish eligibility for a pension. It is suggested that you visit the department's office on the third floor of the main Victoria post office and ask for their help.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

Delays Could Boost Cost Of Projects

VANCOUVER (CP) — Delays in municipal public works projects are more likely to cost money than to save money, a committee of the Investment Dealers' Association of Canada has advised municipalities.

Michael M. Ryan, retiring chairman of the Pacific district of the association, said in his year-end report that municipal debt issues handled by the investment industry in the last year amounted to between $8,000,000,000 and $9,000,000, the lowest volume in 25 years.

He said the drop was partly the result of funds from the Canada Pension Plan being available for school financing but "partly reflects the practice of some municipalities of deferring projects in the hope of beng able to borrow at lower rates in the future.

"I would hope these municipalities will take to heart the advice implied in the observation of our committee . . . that there is little likelihood of a significant reductio in the cost of borrowing and that construction costs continue to rise rapidly during any deferral," Ryan said.

U.S. Interests Purchase Control

CALGARY (CP) - A San Francisco man has purchased a majority interest in a Calgary-based oil company.

Spelman Prentice of San Francisco has announced completion of the purchase by himself and his associates of 1,761,150 or about 61 per cent of the outstanding shares of Bluewater Oil and Gas Ltd.

The acquisition was made from Canadian Export Gas and Oil Ltd. and Canix Gas Ltd. of Calgary. The purchase price was not revealed.

MARKET SUMMARIES

Toronto Continues Gains

Industrials continued to climb into new territory today as the Toronto stock market posted another advance.

Beverages and steels paced the advance.

The New York market moved in a narrow range today after Wednesday's record gains. Trading was active near the close.

AT TORONTO in industrials, Hamilton Cotton rose 4 to 42½, Investors Overseas 2⅜ to 56, Kenting 1⅞ to 18½, B.C. Phone 1¾ to 69½, and Falconbridge 1½ to 127½. Scottish and York slipped 1⅝ to 21.

McIntyre jumped 6 to 136, United Asbestos $1.10 to $8.25, Conwest 80 cents to 10¼ and Hollinger ¾ to 35.

Denison lost 1⅜ to 58, Bankeno 50 cents to $8.25 and Sherritt ⅜ to 11.

Asamera was up 2½ to 41¾, Canadian Superior Oil 2½ to 57, North Canadian Oils 1¾ to 14 and Prairie 1 to 32.

AT NEW YORK prices near the close included: Deere Co., off ⅝ at 46⅝; Texas Gas Transmission, off ⅛ at 32; Republic Steel, up 1¾ at 46; and City Investing, up ⅝ at 32¾.

AT MONTREAL prices continued a slow climb during moderately active trading today.

Banks were stronger. This was said due to the bills introduced by the federal government to make housing loans easier to obtain.

The Bank of Montreal gained ⅛ to 50⅛ and the Royal Bank ⅛ to 23¼ while the Bank of Nova Scotia slid ⅜ to 24⅛. The Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce was unchanged at 21¾.

Among industrials, Credit Foncier hopped up 2½ to 53½ and Falconbridge Nickel 2¼ to 128, after Falconbridge directors announced increased first-quarter net income of $1.72 a share compared with $1.07 per share in the same period last year. Hudson's Bay Co. increased 1¼ to 25, Radio Engineering 1 point to 40½ and Alcan ⅞ to 35.

AT LONDON the market tended to drift downward today.

The losses by such leaders as ICI, EMI, Glaxo, Courtauld's and GEC rarely exceeded sixpence.

Hudson's Bay gained 1s 3d to 191s 3d but Bowater was lower at 64s 6d.

Canadians were mixed. International Nickel added another 2½ points to Wednesday's rise and Canadian Pacific continued in demand, up 2 points to $250. Gains of up to two points or so were shown by Cominco, Pacific Petroleum and Alcan.

Hollinger was 2¼ points lower at $100¼ and Hiram Walker down 1½ at $118. A feature in banks was a sharp fall of 11s to 278s in Bank of Nova Scotia.

AT VANCOUVER mining issues were generally strong in early trading today.

About 1,850,000 shares were traded to 11 a.m.

Brenda led the mines, up .50 to $15. Churchill was up .40 to $9.20, and Omega up .30 to $6. Ace climbed .33 to $2.75.

Biggest loser was Valley, down .50 to $23.50.

In industrials, Captain International dropped .50 to $8.50.

In oils, Royal Canadian Ventures gained .30 to $4.80 while Trans-Canada dropped .20 to $3.30.

Piece-Work Proposal Criticized

VANCOUVER (CP) — Union officials said Wednesday Attorney-General Leslie Peterson's proposals for a piece-work system in industry with wages tied to productivity would cause more trouble and inequality than present systems.

Jack Moore, regional president of the International Woodworkers of America, said he agreed with the idea of higher wages resulting from greater productivity but not through a piece-work system.

Paddy Neale, secretary of the Vancouver and District Labor Council, said: "We don't like piece work . . . It's bad for two reasons:

"The employer, through his supervisory staff, is always pushing, pushing, pushing for higher production and this is hard on the worker.

"This sets up competition between the employees and sows dissension among them. We have found some spontaneous work stoppages resulting from this type of emotional problem."

Peterson made his suggestions in a speech to the Industrial Relations Management Association of British Columbia.

George Johnston, second vice-president of the B.C. Federation of Labor, said a fair wage-productivity agreement would be difficult to work out.

He said that unless the worker has some part in making decisions that affect productivity, he is at the will of the employer and "there is nothing he can do to ensure being compensated."
